MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no donbt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland, or to or from the North German Union (including Austria and its States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England. In the case of such letters arving in the United States, the fine is five cents on each letter. This is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malta, Mouritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph, and Egypt,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. The registration fee on letters to Egypt is eight cents each. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghee, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postege. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE. — Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Harsburg, Bremen or Belginm, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premiurs on a corresponding amount of coin, he tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The law reqnires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

By a joint Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Adjutants General of the several States and Territories, are authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, any medals, certificates of thanks or other testimonials, awarded, or which may be awarded by the Legislatures of said States and Territories, to the soldiers thereof, nnder snch regulations as the Postmaster General may direct.

Section 123, Regulations 1866, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as an official privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weight of four ounces. Mail matter to those possessing the privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertains to official business. Section 124 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides these, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenne officers, also, besides those mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may only frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No communication, official or otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can be sent free.

The Act of March 1, 1869, relating to franking, makes no change in the privilege, but merely enacts that the signatnre of the franking party must be written, and not printed.

The rate of postage on mail letters to any part of the United States is three cents a half ounce or fraction thereof. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half onnce or fraction of a half onnce; at offices where snch free delivery is not established the rate is one cent. All drop as well as mail letters must be prepaid.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the postmaster must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, etc. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address, and the names of the clnb of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Post Office Blanks.

The agency for supplying postmasters with blanks is located at Washington, D. C.

When the postages collected at an office arsount to $100 a year, the name of the postmaster and of his office will be printed on the post bills. When the postmaster's compensation exceeds $12 50 a quarter, the postmaster is entitled to wrapping paper and twine, at the above agencies.

Orders for wrapping paper and twine must be on separate sheets from orders for blanks; bnt both may be inclosed in one envelope.

All postmasters whose compensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

Applications for blank registers of arrival and departure of the mails must be made direct to the "Contract Office, Inspection Division, P. O. Dept." For special instructions, to the First Assistant Postmaster General.

The United States inland and Atlantic sea postage (which in such case is 10 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (½ oz.) or fraction thereof.

b.—Where the letter b is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case, is ascertained by deducting from the amount set down the sum of 3 cents, which is the United States portion of the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases the postage is for each newspaper without regard to its weight, when sent to Britain mail.

VOL. IX., NO. 12. NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER, 1869. WHOLE NO. 108.

Postal Money Orders between the United States and Switzerland.

The Post-Office Departmente of the United States and Switzerland have agreed upon a system of Money Orders between the two countries, which goes into effect on the 1st inst.

The exchange of these orders ie to he effected through the egency of two post offices, termed "International Exchange Offices." The offices are: New York, on the part of the United States, and Bâle, on the part of Switzerlnnd.

Certain Money-Order Post Offices in this country (a list of which will be found below), designated by the Postmaster General, are authorized to issue Money Orders on the Postmaster at New York, payable to persons in Switzerlaud, and to pay orders issned by the New York Postmaster for sums remitted by the Post Department of Switzerlnnd, for payment to persons in the United States. Heuce, nn International Money Order cannot be drawn by a postmaster in either country directly upon a postmaster in the other, but must be drawn upon the International Exchange Office of the country in which the order is issued. For instance: the Postmaster at Chicago, on receiving payment for nn order to be paid to a person in Zurich, Switzerlaud, drawe the order not upon the postmaster at Zurich, but upon the postmaster at the New York "International Exchauge Office."

The International Money Orders are payable in gold and must not be drawn for a larger snm than fifty dollars in United Srntes currency. The fees for their issue are the same as for that of domestic money orders. The value of every such order is to be computed upon the basis of the premium upon gold on the day of the receipt of the order by the postmaster at New York.

International orders are not actually sent by mail from one country to the other, but lists of such orders are forwarded once a week, or oftener if necessary, by the Exchange Office of each country to the Exchange Office of the other. The receiving Exchnge Office immediately issues an order in favor of each beneficiary for nn nmount equivalent to that named in the certified list, which order is payable by the Money Order Office nearest his place of residence, and is transmitted to the postmaster at each office.

Full detailed instructions and blank forms have been prepared by the Department and issned to the postmasters at the Money Order Offices designated by the Postmaster-General as authorized to receive payments for orders on New York payable, under this system, to persons in Switzerland.

The benefits of the arrangement thus made between the two Republics will ere loug, we trust, be extended, until a similer system shall be established between the United Stntes and the principal countries of Europe.

The following is a list of the offices in the United States at which the orders referred to can be procured:

The British Post Office.

We ere indebted to the courtesy of GEO. CHETWYND, Esq., Receiver and Accountant-Generel of the British Post Office, for a copy of the "Fifteenth Report of the Postmaster-General," for 1868. The report exhibits n very favorable condition of the postal service in the United Kingdom and a considerable increase in its receipts nnd operations over those of former years. We give below such extracts as we think will be most interesting to our readers:

Of these letters, no less than 13,833 were posted without any address at all, and among these were 281 which were found to contain money to the amount of £6,375.

EFFECTIVE AND NON-EFFECTIVE FORCE.

The total number of staff officers, postmasters, clerks, sorters, stampers, messengers, guards and letter-carriers actively employed was, in 1867, 25,902, and in 1868, 26,262. Pensioners in 1867, 1,556; in 1868, 1,756.

HOME SERVICE.

In 1868, letters coming from France by the night mails were for the first time delivered in London at half-past seven in the morning instead of at nine. During the four busiest hours of the day half-hourly collections began to be made from sixty additional receiving-houses and pillar-boxes in the city. Paddington was placed on the same footing as other parts of the metropolis in regard to the frequency of its collections and deliveries. Direct communication was established between some of the district post offices and others, instead of the letters being massed at one central point and theuce distributed; thus still further extending the advantages of the district postal system. The letter-boxes at receiving houses began to be closed at night and on Sundays, with a view to divert letters into the pillar-boxes, from which they can be collected in time for the first delivery in London or for the morning mails into the country.

In 1868, 516 additional receptacles for letters were opened in the United Kingdom—463 in England, 21 in Scotland, and 32 in Ireland—raising the total number in England from 13,592, as it stood at the close of 1867, to 14,055, or one to every 288 inhabited houses; in Scotland, from 1,818 to 1,639, or one to every 250 inhabited houses; in Ireland, from 2,015 to 2,047, or one to every 464 inhabited houses; and in the United Kingdom, from 17,225 to 17,741, or one to every 305 inhabited houses.

In the report for 1867 it was stated that the district system, which had already proved of the greatest advantage in London, was about to be introdnced into Manchester. This has now been done, and Manchester is divided into 8 postal districts, with a corresponding number of sorting offices, between which and the head office communication is maintained by mail cart. The collections have at the same time been increased in number from 3 to 5, and the deliveries from 8 to 4, in the outer districts, and from 3 to 5 in the central district.

The business of the Post-Office Savings Banks, and the issue of Government Life Insurances and Annnities through Post Offices are shown by the Report to be steadily on the increase.

An Unfounded Charge.

The Philadelphia Age of August 4th contained the following paragraph:

A NEW POSTAL TREATY WITH FRANCE.—Hon. John A. J. Creswell, Postmaster-General, sent Senator Ramsey, of Minnesota, to Paris, at an expense of $10,000, to negotiate a postal treaty. We have a Minister to France, who is paid $17,500 per annum. But expense is nothing when a Radical Senator wishes to take a pleasure trip.

The only truthe contained in the ebove are that Senator Ramsey was authorized by Postmaster-General Creswell to negotinte a postal convention with the French Government, and that we have n Minister to France. The "expense of $10,000" was "evolved from his inner consciousness" by the writer of the paragraph quoted. The Washington Chronicle publishes the following correct statement of the case:

The negotiation of postal treaties or conventions with foreign countries is not conducted through the Department of State in the ordinary course of diplomatic correspondence, but by the Postmaster-General, who is authorized by law to conclude the same, by and with the advice and consent of the President of the United States, without retification by the Senate; and, therefore, our Minister to France has nothing to do with such negotiations.

Our present very imperfect and unsatisfactory postal convention with France will cease to be operative on the first of January, 1870. Negotiations have been in progress for nearly two years, having for their object the conclusion of an improved postal convention to come into operation on that date, establishing reduced rates of postage, with enlarged facilities of international postal communications. These negotiations, which have been conducted principally by direct correspondence betwcon the two Post Office Departments, have not, as yet, resulted in an agreement upon the leading principles and provisions of the proposed new arrangement; and the limited time remaining within which to conclude and put it into operation, induced the Postmaster-General to make another effort to secure the object desired, through the agency of direct personal negotiation at Paris; although the sending of Hon. John A. Kasson to Paris, in the summer of 1867, on a similar mission, at the request of the French Post-Office Department, was wholly unsuccessful.

The simple facts of the case are that Governor Ramsey did not desire this appointment; that he was very reluctant to undertake the management of these difficult negotiations at Paris, and only consented to do so on the urgent solicitation of the Postmaster-General, as his visit to Europe with his family was previously arranged for domestic purposes and entire relaxation from official business. He is to receive no compensation for his services to the Post Office Department, and can accept none, but will be reimbursed the actual necessary expenses incurred by him in prosecuting his negotiations at Paris

Senator Ramsey served for a long time as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and in that capacity acquired a knowledge of postal affairs which peculinrly qualified him for the duty with which he is now intrusted, and in which we hope he will be successful. Mr. Creswell could not have made a better selection.

We take the liberty of advising the editor of the Age to acquire some knowledge of the facts before again charging any public officer with wasting the Government money; and we commend to his attention (as a warning against hasty action, based upon imperfect information) the case of the member of the "Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals," who, on being informed of the well-known fact in natural history, that when guinea-pigs are suspended by their tails, their eyes will drop out, began energetic preparations for bringing to justice any who might be guilty of thus depriving the innocent animals of their eyesight; but turned his benevolent energies in some other direction when he discovered the other well-known fact that guinea-pigs have no tails.

COMMUNICATIONS.

POST OFFICE, W——K, VT., Aug., 1869.

Editor U. S. Mail—Well, it does seem, after all, as though I should have to believe that Mous. Tonson's letters in the MAIL have been true; for, agreeably to his intimation in his last epistle, that no more would appear, the August number comes to hand without one. But his very strange adventures, and the curious, marvelous incidents connected with them—surpassing the imagination of fiction—though he narrated them with such an air of probability as almost to challenge belief, made me so incredulous as to their truth and the sincerity of his threat, coupled with my desire to read more of his charming and instructive letters, that I refused to credit fully the conteuts of his last letter, until the August number should come, and help remove or confirm my doubts of the truth of his words, and of the catastrophe thut brought to him a result so unexpected, so singuler, and yet so happy.

But that August number has come; and though, while hastily removing the wrapper, I fully perenaded my enger eyes that they would be greeted with the acenstomed heading nud signature of Mous. Tonsen, no such pleasant feast was spread before them; and I was reluctantly compelled to admit the probability of the truth of his letters—the evidence of his intention to write no more for you.

Now, though fully sympathizing with Nicotinus of Innubibus in the grent loss we sustain by the withdrawal of Mons. Tonson from the MAIL, I am not disposed, like him, to inquire, "who shall take his place?" for none can fill it—none can wield so pleasing, facile pen as he. Rather, brother postmasters and assistants, let us insist, or at least, earnestly entreat, that his favured Jane Mary receive not all the benefit of his wide and varied experience, nll his good advice, all the cheery rays of his sun-shiny soul, but that an occasional ray, at least, if not monthly, be vouchsnfed to his many admiring, saddened, congratulating friends and readers.

L. A. M., Assistant.

P. O., OUT WEST, Aug. 17, 1869.

Editor U. S. Mail—Continual agitation on any question of reform generally results in good. Let the subject of "prepaid postage" on printed mail matter then be kept before the postmasters or the Postmaster-General till the much-needed change is brought about. Thousands of dollars would be saved annually to the Department by requiring prepayment on all papers.

Taking an educational journal is one of the requisites in some localities for obtaining a certificate for school teaching. THE U.S. MAIL should certainly be taken by every postmaster: it should be compulsory. To see the manner in which registered matter ie handled, or the delny that is occasioned every day by postmasters persisting in sending all mail matter thnt goes out of Indiana through the Distributing Post Office at Indinnapolis, and thnt from Ohio through Cleveland or Cincinnati, would certainly make the word compulsory seem very moderate, when referring to postmasters seeking information.

One item more, if you please. We have more or less official correspondence every day, which properly should be copied. To write duplicates would be additional labor; in fact, we have found it very inconvenient, having tried the experiment. I think it would expedite business and be more business-like to use a letter-prese and copy-book. Does the Department furnish any offices with them? It would be an addition to all offices, including third class, to have such furniture.

RADICAL.

K——, August, 1869.

Editor U. S. Mail—Among the many strong arguments in favor of prepayment of the postage on newspapers and magazines at the office of publication, there is one of much weight which, as far as I have discovered, has been overlooked—and that is, the great quantity of specimen numbers sent, despite the law, to different post offices without prepayment; one-fiftieth part of which cannot be sold for the postage thereon, adding to the encumbering the mails with free matter, perplexing and embarrassing postmasters, causing loss of thousands of dollars to the Department.

A law prohibiting the mailing of papers and magazines without prepayment would effectually stop the evil.

Sundry Post-Office Matters.

The first letter we take up is on a subject which affects, to some extent, the salaries of many offices, viz.: "Mailing letters on the cars." In the letter before us inquiry is made "if the Postmaster-General can justly readjust the salary of an office at a place where a large portion of the letters are mailed on the cars." We see no injustice in adjustment under such circumstances. The laws relating to the postal service are made for the public good, and that must continue to be their primary object. In the rapid increase of population, and the facilities for quick and frequent communication, it became almost a necessity that postal facilities should be correspondingly increased, and one of the means thereof was the establishment of the railway postal service, a measure which is productive of great benefit to the public at large, with only the private injury of reducing slightly the emoluments of some offices.....And now a request for "a 'shot' at those postmasters who cancel stamps with blue ink." We have examined several instances of stamps cancelled with such ink, and are justified in saying that we consider the practice very reprehensible; black ink is required by the regulation, and is the best, though we have seen a green ink used, which, by its contrast, made the cancellation very perceptible.....Our next is a letter from California, making inquiry as to the right of a contractor on a daily mail-route to so change his route as to leave a post office he had supplied, forty miles from the nearest office. The law is that a contractor shall not make any change in the contract schedule unless by consent of the Department. But cases, like those in question, usually have certain features incidental to each, hence the proper way is to lay the matter before the Department....Two inquiries respecting ink and pads follow. We have frequently given suggestions on these matters, and refer our correspondent to back numbers of our paper, or to our advertising columns. ....And now an inquiry from a clerk who has not received the payment for his services. Except in cases where an allowance is made by the Department for clerk hire, a post-office clerk must look to his employer for his salary, the same as if he were in other business; and an agreement to divide the emoluments of an office, can be enforced only by the same process as any business agreement, and not by postal law.....And now a letter containing a complaint of the "careless way of doing business in returning copies of newspapers that have been refused, instead of sending the notices required by the laws and regulations." We must ourselves condemn this practice, and can excuse it only in a few cases of the larger offices, which, on account of the mass of business, must necessarily, in some cases, have a "law nuto themselves." Take the New York Post Office, for instance, the centre of distribution and of receipt of so vast a number of papers, that a strict adherence to the rules bearing on the notices of prepayment of postage, and of notification of refusal, or non-delivery is impossible, except by a great outlay for clerks and their accommodation, hence authority was obtained to use special stamps. As these bear the name of the office as well as the character of the notices they are intended to convey, they cannot be misunderstood. We would here caution postmasters against making the practice of other postmasters their own—follow the rules and regulations;—at the same time we are very glad to have our attention called to any real or apparent infraction of the Department requirements; in the former case we will denounce unsparingly, in the latter explain satisfactorily.....And now a letter on the supplement question, or "unisance" as we may appropriately call it, if not, indeed, "swindle," for the calling a "patent" doctor's or a Punch-and-Judy handbill, a supplement to a "newe" paper, and inclosing it as such, is simply a swindle, in fact, as well as in law. A bona fide supplement should contain such matter of news or information as appertains to the paper to which it is a supplement. A handbill subjects to letter postage the whole paper containing it, to be collected on delivery, if not prepaid.....We agree with our correspondent, who, in remitting for renewal, writes: "I consider the MAIL indispensable to the successful conduct of nu office, because our postal laws are so jumbled that a postmaster has no assurance that he has gotten hold of the right one, besides the laws undergo such constant alterations." We would say that a codification of the postal laws, which will relieve them from the "jumble," is in progress, nevertheless the MAIL will be as much needed as a means of receiving new information.

A letter was written from Darien Centre, N. Y., by Alonzo F. Astabrook, dated in 1836, to Joel Amsden, of Chicago, inclosing $12, consisting of a $10 note of the old Bank of Rochester, then as good as gold, and a $2 note on the Bank of Windsor, Vt., equally good, with the request that Mr. Amsden should hand the money to a Mr. E. S. Brooks. The letter was sent to Aldermnn Mason's hotel, placed in the delivery box, and after remaining some time without being called for, got among Mr. Mason's private papers, and was laid away and forgotten. Recently, upon examining the effects of Mr. Mason, long since deceased, the letter was found, and sent to Mr. Amsden, who immediately went and handed the money to Mr. Brooks, as he was requested three-and-thirty years gone by to do. The bills, so good in their day, were worthless now. Mr. Astabrook, in this letter, congratulates his correspondent on the election of Van Buren to the Presidency. "Little Van" ran his official career, and ten other Presidents were inaugurated before the letter reached its destined recipient.

Since its establishment in 1860, THE UNITED STATES MAIL has received the official recommendation of Postmasters-General BLAIR, DENNISON and RANDALL, and we take pleasure in publishing also the following from Postmaster-General CRESWELL, who adds to those of his predecessors his recognition and endorsement of THE MAIL as a medium for the publication of official orders and instructions and of correct information on postal subjects:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, August 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

[OFFICIAL.]

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, Aug. 14, 1869.

SIR—I have to request that you will please publish the inclosed notice, in the next number of the U. S. MAIL, and cause the "Table of Postages to foreign countries" to be amended in accordance therewith.

Very respectfully,
JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Supt. Foreign Mails.

J. GAYLER, ESQ.,
Editor "U. S. Mail."

POSTAL CONVENTION WITH BRITISH HONDURAS.

A Postal Convention, establishing and regulating a reciprocal exchange of correspondence between the United States and the Colony of British Honduras, has just been concluded with Great Britain, and will be carried into operation on the 1st of October, 1869. It provides for a regular exchange of mails between the Office of New Orleans, on the one part, and the Office of Belize, on the other, comprising letters, newspapers, book-packets, and patterns or samples of merchandise, originating in the United States and addressed to British Honduras, or originating in British Honduras and addressed to the United States, to be conveyed by means of the direct line of British Mail Packets, now running between New Orleans and Belize.

The rates of postage to be levied and collected in advance, in each country, on each article of correspondence, forwarded to the other country, are as follows:

On LETTERS—12 cents in the United States or 6 pence in British Honduras) per each single rate of half an ounce or under.

On NEWSPAPERS—2 cents in the United States (or one penny in British Honduras) on each newspaper, without regard to weight.

On BOOK-PACKETS, patterns or samples—6 cents in the United States (or 3 pence in British Honduras) for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof.

The above rates are in full of all charges to destination.

Each country is to retain all the postage it collects, on the correspondence which it sends to the other, thus dispensing with any accounts between the respective Post-Office Departments.

Foreign Postage.

The rates of postage on letters to foreign countries are the same from any part of the United States with one exception in the case of letters to Newfoundland). In those cases where such letters can be sent unpaid, and the sender elects not to pay the postage, no stamps whatever are required. Some postmasters in the interior seem to be possessed with the idea that a three cent stamp is required on such letters for their conveyance to New York. Such is not the case, and the use of such stamp in that way leads to unnecessary labor and annoyance, and should be discontinued.

[Copyright not secured.]

To Whom it may Concern.

We have read, somewhere, of an unlucky individual who, having fallen into the hands of his enemies, and having meekly submitted, for some time, to sundry personal indignities to which they subjected him, at last turned upon his tormentors and exclaimed: "Gentlemen, you have called me a thief, a coward, and a liar; have spat in my face; have questioned the legitimacy of my birth and the fidelity of my wife; and have even gone so far as to kick me. I have borne all this patiently. But, gentlemen, I warn you to proceed no farther with your insults. Beware! or you will arouse the sleeping lion!" There are circumstances which enable us to sympathize (editorially) to some extent with the feelings of that long-suffering man.

We have been in the occasional receipt, for some time past, of copies of certain local papers, devoted mainly to the publication of elaborate puffs of "our indefatigable Postmaster, Mr. Fussyfunk," and his "praiseworthy efforts to accommodate the public," and incidentally to the diffusion of local postal information. We take great delight in these little papers. They are generally neat specimens of typography, and contain much information useful to the public in regard to the hours of opening and closing the local mails and post offices, the rates of domestic postage, etc. The eulogies of Mr. F. are generally correct—grammatically—and we do not doubt that he endeavors to deserve them. They must be interesting reading to him, it in no one else—though they will sometimes vaguely recall to one's mind those complimentary allusions to the "gentlemanly clerk," the "obliging and attentive host" and the "polite and accomplished bartender" in which newspaper correspondents of the "dead-head" variety are wont to indulge. But all that is harmless, if not beneficial—at any rate it does not concern us, and we by no means wish to be understood as finding fault with it. In fact, these little sheets contain so much that meets with our approval, that it pains us greatly to be obliged to find any fault at all in them. But the fact is that they have (most of them) a blemish to which we must, albeit reluctantly, allude—a weakness, which may be an "amiable" one, but still a weakness. And it is this: they will fill their editorial and other columns (not devoted to love-stories, Buchu advertisements and Josh Billings's witticisms) with articles "lifted" bodily from "THE UNITED STATES MAIL," and boldly—not to say brazenly—published as original. To the re-publication of our modest opinions we are far from objecting. That the conductors of the papers referred to should approve our sentiments is at once creditable to them and flattering to us. We make them our acknowledgments. But may we be permitted to suggest that they should also make their acknowledgments? If their object is to diffuse among their patrons correct information and judicious opinions on postal subjects, perhaps they cannot do better than to draw their supplies from THE MAIL. Their well-founded diffidence and hesitation about assuming to be, themselves, of any account or authority in regard to such matters, are much to be commended, and we hereby do commend them. But they do not carry their modesty quite far enough. As for instance: the editor of one of these local lights—printed, we believe, in Cincinnati—(at least his conduct savors strongly of "going the entire"—animal which the mention of that city suggests)—thinking it advisable to publish, in his August number, a column of "Postal Service Items," and being conscious of a total lack of ideas of his own, worth mentioning or publishing, in regard to said service, very properly resorted to the July number of THE MAIL for the material necessary to the accomplishment of his purpose. But he did it in a rather objectionable way. He culled from our "Answers to Correspondents" all those which related to the subject he had in hand, cut off their headings, and published them as his own. He also reprinted several of our editorial articles in the same number, without acknowledgment. And we must say that we consider "such conduct as those" very shabby indeed.

It was the above rather aggravated case of what our lamented editorial predecessor used to call "robbing THE MAIL," which impelled us just now to notice this matter; but we have received equally unfair treatment from other quarters, which we have borne in silence. And we do not even now feel disposed to write unkindly of our erring half-brethren of the "local" postal press. We fully appreciate the "extenuating circumstances" of the case. They can't help it, perhaps. They must get their ideas and information from some source, and they turn naturally to THE MAIL to "get the best." We did intend to appeal to them, in the name of common honesty, editorial courtesy, and their own self-respect, to give us credit for such of our editorial and other matter as they may in future see fit to transfer to their columns; but we have reflected (as no doubt they have also) that their readers might perhaps find it rather monotonous to see "U. S. Mail" appended to more than a dozen articles in one of their issues; and that for other reasons such an appeal would probably be useless. So go on, gentlemen—help yourselves to anything in THE MAIL that may suit you, and give credit or not, as you please. And don't be afraid that we shall retaliate in kind.

After all, the story with which we began don't seem to be very apropos. The "sleeping lion" (if we have such an animal about our premises) isn't aroused in the least. In fact, so far as we are concerned, nothing is, or is likely to be aroused in this matter except, perhaps, a little pity and some contempt.

Statement of Request Letters.—M. C. W., W——, Tenn.—Section 399, Regulations of 1866, is still in force.

Obscene Remarks on Letters.—J. K. W., M——, Wis.—All known cases of depositing obscene matter in the mails, whether in letters or on letters, should be reported to the United States District Attorney, or the obscene matter must be sent to the Third Assistant Postmaster General in a sealed package, marked SPECIAL, and also a letter informing him that the package has been sent. Sec. 39, Reg. 1866.

Post-Office Supplies.—J. W. P——, Ind., and G. B. B., S——, Pa.—Apply to the Appointment Office, Washington, D. C., for marking and rating stamps; to the Third Assistant Postmaster General for stamped or "official" envelopes; and to the Superintendent of the Blank Agency, Washington, D. C., for blanks.

Canceling Stamps on Letters to be Mailed on the Cars.—J. G. McP., B——, Ind.—Only such letters as are too late for the mail should be mailed on the cars, and they should be properly prepaid by stamps, and the stamps should not be canceled. A route agent should refuse to receive a letter with a canceled stamp, although it is alleged to have been done at the office where the letter should be mailed.

Accounts of a Retiring Postmaster.—D. W. T., P——, Md.—The accounts or returns of a retiring postmaster should be made up to the day he gives up charge of the office, just the same as though it were the end of a quarter. Sec. 294, Reg. 1866.

Addressing Wrappers of Letters.—G. W. C., R——, Nev.—The wrappers of letters should bear the addresses of the places to which the letters are addressed, except when sent to a distributing office, when they are to be addressed to that office, with the addition of the alphabetical letters D. P. O.; if sent to a Railway Postal Car, they may be addressed to that car.

Forwarding Letters on which Postage is due.—F. A. M., S——, Ill.—The amount of the postage due on an unpaid letter held for delivery, would at the end of the quarter be entered in item 12 of the account current. This would be balanced by a similar entry in item 1 of the account current for the next quarter. On forwarding such a letter the amount should be entered in the column of overcharges, without reference to the entries in the account current.

Account of Newspaper Postage by a Retiring Postmaster.—B. R., R——, Ill.—A retiring postmaster should give to his successor an account of newspaper postage collected, but notwithstanding the regulations of the Department, the provision of a suitable blank, and above all a stringent affidavit, many postmasters are criminally careless about collecting newspaper postage, and keeping an account thereof. We cannot counsel in cases where a subscriber says he has paid postage, and a retiring postmaster can show no account of having received it. Strictly speaking, the subscriber should take a receipt, and then the postmaster who received the money would be liable for it, and unless he accounted for it would subject himself to a severe penalty, while the postmaster would be justified in detaining newspapers for the postage on which the subscriber could not produce a receipt; but there are many cases where a postmaster must know that the subscriber would not say he had paid postage if he has not, and it would be unjust to make him pay a second time, and thus suffer for the carelessness of another. The case must depend upon the good sense and judgment of the parties concerned.

Delivery of Letters.—G. W. A., L——, O.—A letter should only be delivered to the party addressed or some one acting on his or her direct or implied order. Where minor children are supported by their parents, the parents should control the correspondence of such children. The matter of the delivery of letters to others than the parties addressed, and of withdrawing letters after they are posted, is a very delicate one, and requires some judgment. See Chapter VII., Reg. 1866, on the Delivery and Return of Letters, also the MAIL for July, 1867.

Withdrawing a Letter after Posting.—O. H. W., C—— C——, Ind.—A letter may be withdrawn from the mail after it is postmarked, and the stamp on a withdrawn letter need not be canceled. Sec. 64, Reg., and MAIL for August, 1866.

Boxes, etc.—W. M. W., P——, Mass.—The use of a box should be restricted to one family or firm or company. (This provision is not found in the Laws and Regulations of 1866 usually furnished to postmasters, but may be found in Section 12 of Regulations of 1869, relating to Free Delivery, etc.).... J. K., A——, N. Y.—1. There is no exception to the law requiring the payment of box-rent, it must be paid for at least one quarter in advance. (Sec. 240, Laws of 1866.) The fact that several parties joined together one, two, or more years ago, to put up a set of boxes, the use of which should be free, does not give them a life-right to such free use, in contravention of laws subsequently passed; but as postmasters are not required to provide boxes, those who are dissatisfied with paying rent on boxes they claim to own, can remove them. Chap. XLII., Reg. 1866. 2. The carrier should deliver the mail pouch as near the door of the post office as he can, but he is not obliged to leave his horses. Sec. 80, Reg. 1866. 3. The schedule time on a stage mail-route should be by local or town time. Such is a general reply to your question, but such cases must be governed by the locality where they arise, and cannot be answered satisfactorily by a general reply.

Weekly Papers.—A. S. R., T——, Ill.—Weekly papers properly folded and addressed should be delivered free when deposited for delivery in the post office nearest the office of publication. Sec. 1, Act of July 27, 1868. Two cents is the proper postage for a "drop" newspaper..... D. W. F., C——, O.—Newsdealers are required to pay the regular quarterly postage, but it may be paid on the packages as they are received. Sec. 202, Reg. 1866.... H. E. F., W—— W——, Wy. Ty.—Postage must be charged and collected on papers brought by express, and then deposited in a post office for delivery. Sec. 150, Reg. 1866.... T. L., S——, Va.—If a paper comes unpaid regularly to the same person it is to be presumed that it is sent either by a publisher or newsdealer, for otherwise it would not be mailed by the mailing office; but if there is doubt you should write to the postmaster at the mailing office and make an inquiry. If prepayment is quarterly at the mailing office, you should receive a receipt, but it is impossible in large offices like New York, to send receipts for all papers, prepaid quarterly, hence a special marking stamp is used. See answers to correspondents in last MAIL.

Franking—Several Inquirers.—In our "Miscellaneous Information" on the third page, will be found full and accurate information on franking.

Registration.—G. W. B., P——, Arizona.—The return registered letter receipt should be delivered to the person who mailed the letter. Sec. 13, Reg'n Reg. 1866.

Postage.—D. C. C., L—— R——, N. Y.—Dry goods, no matter how put up, unless bona fide samples, should be charged at letter rates.... H. A. F., J——, Mo.—Honey-bees can hardly be called mailable matter, and hence should be charged at letter rates, but they should be excluded from the mails as matter endangering their safety. Secs. 37 and 38, Reg. 1866..... T. P. J., F——, Va.—Twe cents per four ounces is the proper postage on a transient package of two or more newspapers of different kinds. Publishers cannot be compelled to designate on the wrappers the name of the paper..... M. R., E——, O.—Postage should be charged on packages left by mail-carriers at a post-office for delivery..... M. H. P., G——, Va.—Postage on a package of papers delivered to one address, may be charged at transient rates, or if regular papers, at quarterly rates on each paper; in the former case, however, postage should be collected at the mailing office..... J. W. B., L——, Ind.—The payment of back postage for a newspaper cannot be enforced by detaining papers that have been received in a succeeding quarter. The postage should have been collected before or on the delivery of the first paper..... A. C., S—— S——, Pa.—Papers should not be forwarded unless the postage is prepaid. Newspapers containing letters or any kind of writing should be charged at letter rates, and if not paid at the mailing office, the postage should be collected on delivery. Sec. 150, Reg. 1866, and Sec. 316, Laws 1866.

Curious Letter Address.

This for Della B—— is meant,
To J——, Ohio, must he sent.
Hearing she had gone away,
Forward it without delay.
If the Post should want a penny
I would smile to see him get any.

The following was inscribed on a letter passing through the St. Louis Post Office, and is rather an odd direction. The writer is evidently not very complimentary to the "new stamp:"

"TO THE NEW STAMP."

"You blasted, bawling, steaming critter,
Why take your place upon this letter?
Is it by high or low pressure you run,
That you take the place of Washington?
Was not his work well done enough
That you're employed to blow and puff?
Or is your credit so much better
That you propose to take this letter?

"Now, by my soul, I'll try your pluck,
And see, if by chance or by good luck,
You'll carry this safe, without delay,
To the town of Haddonfield, N. J.,
And when you have safely laid it down,
Just ask the P. M. of said town
If he will not, on his word of truth,
Deliver the same to M. T. Ruth?"

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland, or to or from the North German Union (including Austria and its States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is five cents on each letter. This is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United Stotes for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latskia, Mersina, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labnan, Liberia, Malta, Manritius, Natsl, New Soutb Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, Sonth Austrslia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph, and Egypt,) to Austria and its Stotes, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. The registration fee on letters to Egypt is eight cents each. Letters can be registered via San Frsneisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such lattars, like registered domestic letters, sbould be sent to the first distributing office on tbe route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE. — Irregularities baving arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hercafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters esnot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a rsolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in tbe mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in tbe post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to tbe mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters tbe former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The law requires postage on all letters, including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

By a joint Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Adjutants General of tbe several States and Territories, are authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, any medals, certificates of tbanks or other testimonials, awarded, or wbicb may be awarded by tbe Legislatures of said States and Territories, to the soldiers thereof, under such regulations as tbe Postmaster General may direct.

Section 123, Regulations 1866, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as a personal privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weigbt of four ounces. Mail matter to those possessing tbe privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertains to official business. Section 134 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides these, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenne officers, also, besides tbose mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may only frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No communication, official or otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can be sent free.

The Act of March 1, 1869, relating to franking, makes no change in the privilege, but merely enacts that the signature of the franking party must be written, and not printed.

The rate of postage on mail letters to any part of the United States is three cents a half ounce or fraction thereof. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices wbere snch free delivery is not established the rate is one cent. All drop as well as mail letters must be prepaid.

Letter postage is to be charged on all bandbills, circulars, or other printed matter wbicb shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weigbt.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

Mallable matter passing between Kansas and California pays the usual rates of postage from and after the 1st of October, 1868, repealing section 259, Postal Laws and, of course, rescinding section 229 of Regulations.

But this does not apply to weekly newspapers wbich circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Orders for wrapping paper and twine must be on separate sheets from orders for blanks; but both may be inclosed in one envelope.

All postmasters whose compensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

a.—When the letter is prefixed, the foreign postage (which in each case is 12 cents) is increased by an additional rate for every 7½ grammes (¼ oz.) or fraction thereof. The United States inland and Atlantic sea postage (which in each case is 10 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (½ oz.) or fraction thereof.

b.—Where the letter b is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case, is ascertained by deducting from the amount set down the sum of 5 cents, which is the United States portion of the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases, the postage is for each newspaper without regard to its weight when sent in British mail.

VOL. X., NO. 1. NEW YORK, OCTOBER, 1869. WHOLE NO. 109.

Young America Practising at the Bar.

We reprint the following from "Ten Years among the Mail-Bags," published some years since by our predecessor, the late JAMES HOLBROOK, Esq.:

In January of the present year (1855) the postmaster of Brooklyn, N. Y., called my attention to the fact that large numbers of letters were arriving at that office to the address of "William H. Jolliet," and that from some information he had received he was led to believe that the correspondence was in some way connected with a systematic scheme of fraud.

Arrangements were accordingly made to watch the person who was in the habit of inquiring for the "Jolliet" letters, and the next time he called, which was in the evening, he was followed as far as the Fulton Ferry, detained just as he was about to enter the ferry-boat, and questioned in reference to the letters.

The person thus interrogated was an exceedingly intelligent boy, about fifteen years of age, plainly but neatly dressed, and of prepossessing manners, particularly for one so young. When asked what he intended to do with the letters he had just taken from the post office, he manifested great self-possession, and apparently anticipating trouble, without allowing an opportunity for a second question, he hurriedly asked:

"Why, what about this business? I have been thinking there might be something wrong about Jolliot's letters. I am a student in a respectable law office in New York, and would not like to be involved in any trouble of this sort. I can tell you, sir, all I know about these letters."

As his explanation will hereafter appear in full, suffice it here to say, that he threw the entire responsibility upon a stranger whom he accidentally met in the Harlem cars. The story was told with much apparent frankness, and a gentleman passing along who knew the lad, and confirmed his statement as to his connection with a prominent law office in New York, he was allowed to go at large under a promise that at an appointed hour on the following day he would call on the Brooklyn postmaster, explain the matter more fully, and put him in possession of facts which would enable the officers to arrest Jolliet if they was thought best.

The appointed time arrived, but the young man did not. A rather voluminous package of papers, however, was sent as a substitute. These papers are so well worded, and so formally drawn up, that I will here introduce two of them verbatim. The reader will bear in mind that they are the production of a boy only fifteen years of age:

NEW YORK, January 26, 1855, 12 M.

POSTMASTER, BROOKLYN, L. I.:

Dear Sir—Being detained by important court business from attending to my promise given to you yesterday to be at your office, I am obliged to write to you. I inclose a statement of facts which I think sufficient to get a warrant. It is sworn to by me before a Commissioner of Deeds of New York, authorized to take acknowledgments for the State.

I saw Mr. Jolliet yesterday evening. He does not suspect anything. I told him that the mails had not arrived when I was over to Brooklyn, yesterday; and, in course of the conversation, he told me he would take a sleigh-ride to Snediker's on Saturday. Therefore, it is important you should get a warrant, and take him upon that day. He also told me he would have a white sleigh, a white robe and a cream-colored pair of horses. You can easily know him. I will be over, if no accident intervenes, to-morrow, say about 11 or 12 o'clock. I tracked him to the Manhattan barroom in Broadway, but could not find out his residence, as he stayed too late. I think he is connected with a gang of rascals who have made this kind of rascality their special business.

I am acquainted with the District Attorney in this city, and have thought of getting him to bring the case before the grand jury, and get a bench warrant out in New York against Jolliet, in case you should think it advisable.

Meanwhile, I will remain still about the matter until I hear from you again.

Yours, very truly.

Annexed is the statement of facts alluded to above:

Statement of Facts. A.

During the month of November or December, 1854, I became acquainted with a man whom I knew by the name of William H. Jolliet. He seemed to be about twenty-five or thirty years of age, and, by his dialect, of English parentage; he was genteelly dressed, and seemed to be a gentleman by his talk and manners. He came to know me from often seeing me on the cars of the New York and Harlem Railroad, and often talking to me. I am in the habit of doing copying, etc., for pay, and therefore was willing to do anything in that way, under the usual circumstances—that is, for pay.

He asked me one day if I was a man of business. I told him I was. He then asked me if I could make a copy of a note he had in his pocket, and show it to him the next time I should meet him, and not to say anything about it to anybody. I told him I would. He gave it to me, and it was something as follows—that is, substantially:

BROOKLYN, L. I., Jan. 6, 1855.

Sir—I have received a package of papers for you from Liverpool, England, with six shillings charges thereon—on receipt of which amount the parcel will be sent to you by such conveyance as you may direct.

Yours, respectfully,
WILLIAM H. JOLLIET.

I met him one or two days afterward, and gave him his original, and my copy. He said it was very well done, but looked too much like a lawhand, and asked me if I couldn't write more of a mercantile-looking hand. I told him I supposed I could. He then gave me my copy, and told me to buy some paper, and make as many copies as I could, and direct them one to each of the names he gave me on a list, and mail them. I told him I would. This was on the Saturday evening; and on Sunday afternoon I wrote about a hundred copies of them, and directed them and sent them. I met him on Monday, and he asked me if I had done it. I told him I had; he then asked for the list of names he had given me, and I handed it to him. He asked if I knew the names I had directed the letters to. I told him I did not, although I did well, my suspicions about him having been aroused by his request for secrecy.

On that Sunday on which I wrote the notes, I made up my mind to play traitor to him by sending the notes as directed, and keeping all answers which he could get (he having told me to call for them at the Brooklyn Post Office), and then delivering them, with my evidence, to officer B——, in New York, whom I knew well by reputation as a good officer and an American in fact and principle. This was foiled by my disclosures to the postmaster of Brooklyn, on Thursday.

At the time he asked me to make the copies of the note, he gave me a five-dollar gold piece to defray expenses. I have kept a copy of the list he gave me, and also of another which he gave me, and which I returned in the same way. I have mailed about 200 letters in all. At the time he ordered me to make the copies of the letter and mail them, he requested me to make a letter and direct it to him at Brooklyn, and mail along with the others. I did so, but I asked him what this was for, and he said he wanted to know how long it would take for a letter to go from New York to Brooklyn. But I did not believe him, and this formed part of the cause for my suspicions. I afterward received the letter, I think it was Tuesday, and gave it to him. At the time of my first mailing the letters, I dropped, by carelessness, a list of the names of persons to whom they were directed, along with them. Could this list be got it would tell us a great deal about the transaction, and then we could have a complete list of all the persons addressed. It was dropped in one of the three new boxes on the south-west corner of the New York Post Office.

I have seen him since he first spoke to me about this affair, five or six times (once on Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, and twice on Wednesday, I believe). He lives in Harlem, I think. I don't know anything further of interest, and close with the ardent wish that a King's County officer will get the credit of catching one of the greatest scoundrels that ever lived, thereby ridding the community of him. G. H. B.

City of Brooklyn, County of Kings, ss.

G. H. B——, of the city of New York, student at law above named, being sworn, doth depose and say that he has read the foregoing statement, and knows the contents thereof, and that the same is true of his own knowledge.

Sworn before me this 26th January, 1855.
B. T. B——,
Comr. of Deeds.

Being satisfied that a young lad of sufficient abilities to compose these documents in such a style, could not have been made the innocent dupe of any one, especially a stranger, I determined to lay the whole matter before his employer, a prominent member of the New York bar. He had heard nothing of it before, and was much pained to hear my narration, for he was warmly attached to the young student, who, up to that time, had enjoyed his entire confidence, and for whose improvement and legal education he had taken unusual pains.

A moment's reference to the Law Register, a work containing the names and residences of all the members of the legal profession in every State in the Union and to be found in almost every law office, showed the source whence he had obtained the list which had been "dropped by carelessness" into the post-office, for pencil marks appeared against the names of most of the country lawyers, but including none of these that had ever been correspondents of the firm with which he was connected!

The opinion that there was no accomplice, nor even principal, in the case, beyond the boy himself, was fully coincided in by his employer, and it was at once decided to call the lad up for a private examination.

I thought, as he entered the room, cap in hand, and with an air of perfect nonchalance, that I had seldom seen a more expressive and intelligent countenance. His high forehead, adorned with graceful curls of brown hair, his full and laughing eye, and the regular features of his face, seemed made for some better use than to delude unwary victims.

"George," said his employer, "what do these Jolliet letters mean, that you have been sending all over the country?"

Boy.—"I will tell you all I know about it, sir. Some weeks since, as I was coming in town one morning, in the Harlem cars, a man calling himself Jolliet"——

Agent.—"Stop, George, and hear me a moment before you go further. We don't want to hear that story. We know there is no such person as Jolliet, and if you go on with such a statement before Mr. F," (his employer) "your pride will render it harder for you to make the acknowledgments that I know you must come to. You have had no accomplice, and if you will bring me the Law Register, I will show you where you got the names of the lawyers to whom you sent the letters."

Mr. F.—"Now, George, you see that Mr. H. knows all about it, and I hope you will not attempt to deny the truth. I am deeply pained to find that you have been guilty of such misdemeanors; and I trust, for your own sake, that you will make a clean breast of it."

After a pause of a few moments, the young man acknowledged, that, being "herd up," he had resorted to this plan to obtain funds, and that he knew no such person as "William H. Jolliet."

Agent.—"How then could you have sworn to the statement you sent to the Brooklyn postmaster? You must have been aware that in so doing you were committing perjury."

Boy.—"Ah! but I did not swear to it. My name is attached to the affidavit, it is true, but, having prepared it beforehand, I spoke to the Commissioner just as he was leaving the office, and he signed it, but in his hurry he forgot to administer the oath."

Agent.—"But that omission must have been merely accidental. Supposing he had required the usual ceremony, what would you have done?"

Boy.—"I have so often seen him omit it, that I took that risk. If he had insisted, I should have booked out."

Subsequent inquiry satisfied me that the Commissioner in question, having often had occasion to sign affidavits for the young man, in the course of the office business, was not always particular in administering the oath, and that it was no doubt neglected in the present instance.

The punishment inflicted in this case was all that the most indignant victim of the fraud would have demanded; and there is reason to believe that a permanent reformation in the character of the young man has been the result; and that the rare talents which he possesses will yet be found arrayed on the side of honesty and virtue.

Answers to the Jolliet letters continued to arrive from all parts of the country, for some time after the discovery of this fraud, as here related. The letters that had accumulated in the Brooklyn Post Office were sent to the Dead Letter Office, opened, and subsequently returned to their respective owners, with their contents, accompanied by a proper explanation.

In nearly every instance the dodge had been successful. The six shillings, or that amount in postage stamps, were duly inclosed; and in some instances a dollar, to make even change, with directions for forwarding the mysterious package.

Such an unexpected notice had no doubt given rise in many cases to sundry visions of heavy fees, which were to flow in upon the fortunate correspondent of Jollist, for conducting the business of some wealthy capitalist of the Old World, who, attracted by his professional fame, was about to confide to him matters of great weight and importance—perhaps some complicated lawsuit, the successful issue of which would bring him a wealth of reputation and money, compared with which the outlay of six shillings was an item too contemptible to be regarded.

Or some sanguine individual might scent out a legacy in the "package from Liverpool."

People were dying every day in England, whose heirs lived in this country. It was not very unusual for persons to inherit immense fortunes from those whose names they had never heard. It might make the difference of thousands of dollars to a man whether his name was Brown or White, when some possessor of one or the other came to leave his property behind him. And it would be a pity to lose the chance of securing a handsome property for one's self, or the opportunity of acting as agent for somebody else, though the whole affair might prove but a hoax, and the chance of thus finding a fortune rather less than the prospect of drawing a prize in a "gift lottery."

It was amusing to peruse the letters which the agent received from those who had been swindled, acknowledging the safe return of the letter and the money which they had sent to Jolliet. Most of them were "well satisfied" when they sent the money "that it was all a hoax," but then it was a small sum that he applied for, and they thought they would send it to the fellow for the ingenuity he had displayed in "raising the wind!" All however, seemed very glad to get their money again, even at the risk of allowing such talent to go unrewarded.

Some wary old heads, too acute to be caught by such chaff, took the precaution to request Jolliet to call on their friends in New York, leave the package, and get the six shillings. Another directed that it should be left at the express office, the expenses paid there, and when the parcel arrived, the entire charges would be promptly met.

Two or three, not content with informing Jolliet that he had not taken them in, indulged in a somewhat sarcastic style of correspondence. The following are two specimens of this kind of reply:

P——, Feb. 2, 1855.

MR. WM. H. JOLLIET:

SIR—I am in receipt of a note from you, informing me that you have in your possession a package for me from Liverpool, Eng., on which there is a charge of 6s. sterling, and which you will send to me on receipt of the above sum.

Sir, I cannot but think it a little strange that my large circle of friends and correspondents in Liverpool (a circle which may be represented thus, 0) should have thought it necessary for parcels which they send me, to pass through your hands, unless you have some connection with the friends aforesaid, unknown to me. Before I send you the sterling money, I should like answers of the like quality to some or all of the following interrogatories:

1st. Who are you?
2d. Who knows you?
3d. Who do you know?
4th. Is "Wm. H. Jolliet" the name given you in baptism?
5th. Wouldn't you receive less than six shillings, if you could get it?
6th. Do you think you have taken me in?
7th. After reading the above, please inform me whether you remain Jolly yet?

JNO. S——.

H——, Jan. 28, 1855.

SIR—I know I am ambitious. I have my aspirations. My fame may be extending. Perhaps it is. I thought it was local; confined to this county; certainly to the State. But it seems that I am known abroad, and you wish me to pay the moderate sum of seventy-five cents for verifying the fact. Sir, I am an Anglo-Saxon. I rejoice in it. And I don't doubt that somewhere between Adam's time and mine, some of my progenitors have inhabited England. But I believe they have all died or moved away. So you see it isn't likely that I have any relations in Liverpool; whence came the package you say is in your hands.

In the next place, sir, living as I do in an inland town, I know little of those "who go down to the sea in ships." (David, Psalms, chap. 107.) And all my particular friends are in this country, according to the best of my knowledge and belief. But no others than the individuals I have cited would be likely to send me packages from foreign lands. It therefore follows, sir, that the aforesaid package is not in rerum natura. I shall be happy to receive from you any facts which may vitiate this conclusion.

Pending this, I remain yours, etc.,
ED. B——.

Mr. Wm. H. Jolliet.

P. O. INNUMBUS, Aug. 1869.

ED. U. S. MAIL: My paper for this month was not taken up with quite the satisfaction of former times, nevertheless I felt, after settling myself down by my table, and as I tore off the wrapper and spread the paper before me, that I would find some good things; need I say that I did? for who can take up the MAIL and not? I also found some amusement over my own handling, and turned thence to read once more the few parting words of our friend Mons. Tonson. And then came my pipe, (for you know I once wrote that I do smoke, but never at improper times or places) an hour or so to raising the "clouds that all other clouds dispel" and to reflection, prompted, among others, the thought that it would be the source of much pleasure, and, indeed, of profit, for me to receive a Special Agent's commission and be ordered to take these few Tonsonic rules and visit the various postmasters, to learn how far they are guided by them in their official conduct. I would start with my own office, and think I could check at least two of the rules that up to this time have formed no part of the means to an end. I would then call on a neighboring postmaster, a small tailor, in a small way, in a small village, but whose postmaster's commission swelled him into gigantic proportions and almost insufferable pomposity—to escape which Squire Jones now deposits and receives nearly all his mail matter at my office, although it is over two miles further from his residence. My neighbor, to whose self the Department seal has proved so powerful a microscope, visits me occasionally, when he wants advice, and never fails to honor me whenever he comes to our village on business. At these visits I am always at a loss whether he or I holds the commission to "run" my office. I would call on that postmaster who sent the post-bill with a charge of three cents on a returned "request letter," and his brother, who sent a like bill with a letter "forwarded at the request of the person addressed," thereby compelling me to make two entries on my account of overcharges, when, had the letters been sent free, as the law requires, it would not have been necessary to have made any. And I would visit that postmaster who franked a letter to me on his own private business, inquiring if I could tell him where he could purchase a horse, and what they pay for butter in our market, and then him who throws the fifty or sixty letters daily mailed at his office, pell-mell, and without wrapper, into the mail pouch, giving the route agent on the cars unnecessary labor, and often more than he can do in the short distance between that and the next office. A call on the official, though his office be but small, who postmarks letters by a stroke of the pen, would not be out of place: nor on him who neglects to plainly postmark registered package envelopes; nor his brother, who neglects to keep his record of registered matter in transit, or who sends registered letters direct that should be sent to a distributing office, or sends the letter to the distributing office while he sends the return-bill to the delivery office. He who encloses "money orders" in "publishers' envelopes," or "notices to publishers" in "money order envelopes," and the postmaster who rates unpaid foreign letters, which should be rated only at the exchange office where they are made up, might profitably receive calls. For all these offices, Mr. Editor, a black mark would have to be set opposite one or more of these rules, which have appealed so to my admiration and judgment.

"I will do it among the neighboring postmasters, without a commission," I said to myself as I finished my reflections. So the next morning I hitched up my "cob," a very neat little animal, by the way, which I hope will have the pleasure some day of taking you at a two-forty pace over our fine roads and among our beautiful scenery, should you ever conclude to pay me an unofficial visit; for I trust never to receive one of an official character. It was a delightful morning, and inspired me with such genial feelings that I felt almost ashamed of the fault-finding expedition on which I had set out.

The first office at which I stopped is about six miles from my own, kept in a small, country store, and supplied by a semi-weekly mail from my office. I was acquainted with the place in a business way, and had occasionally met the postmaster, but never had any official knowledge of the "postal department" of the "concern," further than to know that it was not conducted on first-class principles, for I had had considerable trouble with registered matter sent to and from it, and every quarter draft was made on my stock of "blanks" to enable the postmaster to complete his quarterly returns. It so happened that it was mail-day, and hence I found lounging in the store quite a large and a very motley group waiting the arrival of the mail. The postmaster himself was not at home, and store and post office were in charge of his son, a youth about eighteen years of age, and his daughter, a child of perhaps six. I had hardly entered the store before the mail arrived; this was for me a fortunate circumstance, as it enabled me to see without being known. And I saw much; for I saw about a dozen volunteer assistant postmasters engaged in opening a mail that consisted of some eighteen or twenty newspapers, eight or ten letters, a registered package envelope and a registered package of stamps, both for offices beyond. Did you ever see a parcel of vultures over a carcass, a lot of pigs in a vegetable garden? a description of either would require but little change to make it a description of the opening of that mail. After the hub-hub had subsided, and the mail was distributed, and so effectually that there was but little for a delivery clerk to attend to, the crowd dispersed, and I was left with only the clerk and his young sister.

I introduced myself, and stated my business and wishes. The clerk cheerfully accorded me every facility, and promptly replied to my questions. After an examination of the office itself, which was nothing more than three or four well-crammed pigeon-holes in a case containing perhaps a dozen, I asked him to let me see his account of registered matter, for I had noticed that he replaced in the mail bag the registered packages of which I have written, without making any memoranda of their being in transit. It was not much to my surprise that I found he kept no record of registered matter, because, as he said, "there was so little of it that he could remember it all, and so it did not seem worth while to bother with a record." "But is this complying with the regulations?" I asked. "Not exactly, but we never thought the regulations were to be exactly followed in such little offices as this; it does well enough in large offices, where a good deal of business is done, and the clerks can't remember; but it wouldn't pay in the small offices." "My young friend there is nothing discretionary about it; small as well as large offices should strictly follow all the regulations that appertain to them. Now, I noticed that you sent on two registered packages without making a memorandum of either. Suppose these packages should be stolen after they leave this office; the theft will be referred to a special agent; when he comes to investigate the loss, he will find that I have a record of these packages in my office, but there is none in yours. Now, if I have your receipts for these packages as I [illegible] so, my office will be cleared of suspicion, but you will be suspected; while if, as has happened, I should not receive any receipt from you, suspicion will be cast on my office also. I hold here in my hand the receipt for the packages which you should sign and return to me. I picked it off the floor; whether you would have found it and returned it, or have swept it out with the sweepings to-morrow, is a question. Now, take my advice—comply fully with all the regulations of the Department, more especially with those for the registration of letters, and those prohibiting anybody but sworn clerks having access to mail matter. I have not spoken to you of the great impropriety, the great injustice to the thousands of clerks and others in the postal service of allowing a parcel of outsiders to handle and toss about mail matter, under the plea or delusion of assisting you. A little reflection on your part will convince you that I am right, for though I do not say that I suspect any of the dozen "assistants" you had to-day would steal letters, I have not the same confidence in their carefulness, and it would be a very easy thing for letters to be missed or accidentally pushed away out of sight. Let us see what there is behind this box." I suited the action to the word, moved a box that stood near, and found two letters, one of them postmarked three months previously. Picking them up, "Do you see the proof?" I asked.

The clerk looked somewhat confused, took the letters, and read the addresses. "Why," said he, "I guess one of them's the letter there was so much trouble about with Mrs. Brown. We always told her, and were very sure, it never was sent to her. She declared her son did send it, and that it contained ten dollars; but as he was rather wild, we always doubted it, and I am sure that is the letter."

I have already made this letter too long, so will only add I was much pleased with the promised results of my visit to that office, and encouraged to proceed with my self-imposed task.

NICOTINUS.

Curious Letter Address.

Letter, to eternal depths of woe,
Fate declares thou shalt go;
See the good, the true, no more,
Bite the dust on Jersey shore.

Leave the State of good intent,
Unallowed your wrath to vent;
Kerwhollop, sink among the clams,
And all too poor to give you alms.

Starving lawyers, crying babies,
Swearing preachers, hony ladies;
Chinchers preying—bloody bleeders,
And—Hail Columbia! what mosquitoes!

Oh, who would not your fate deplore,
When you go to Jersey shore?
But go you must, and with a crack,
To J. P. C——, of Hackensack,
A youth who, with mustache invisible,
Is to the ladies extremely kissable.

In addition to its singularity as a "letter address," the above is interesting as being probably one of the best collections of villainous rhymes in the English language.

Since its establishment in 1860, THE UNITED STATES MAIL has received the official recommendation of Postmasters-General BLAIR, DENNISON and RANDALL, and we take pleasure in publishing also the following from Postmaster-General CRESWELL, who adds to those of his predecessors his recognition and endorsement of THE MAIL as a medium for the publication of official orders and instructions and of correct information on postal subjects:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, August 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, [illegible] of the newly established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

Postmaster-General.

Something about Money Orders.

The magnitude that this branch of our postal service has attained, and its prospective increase, induces us to give it more attention in our columns than hitherto. We have for some time been carefully examining the practical working of the system, and find that nearly all delays and difficulties are the result of carelessness. A large number of the people of our country are practically and directly interested in the successful working of this system, and it behooves every one connected with it to exercise the utmost care that his portion is done correctly.

We propose to refer in this article to (so far as our observation extends) the most fruitful cause of delay, viz.: errors in the "letter of advice"—these consist of discrepancies in the amount or in the name of payee or remitter. The first is owing entirely and solely to carelessness. The clerk who cannot keep his mind a sufficient length of time upon his business to enable him to enter the same amount in the "advice" and the "order" ought to ask the Postmaster to find some position where he cannot do so much harm; or, better still, come to the conclusion that "figures were too much for him," and that a good mechanic would be lost to the world if he continued to clerk it any longer.

The error in the name of the remitter or payee arises in almost every instance from the failure to require the applicant to fill up in his own writing the form of "application for money order." We find that in the New York office they invariably send to the remitter to have the name corrected when they are informed that an error exists; and we commend this most heartily to the postmasters of money-order offices who fail to adhere to the above-mentioned rule. The filling up of a "second advice" from the "original" application is an absurdity if that application has been filled up by the postmaster or his clerk, and contains the very error that is delaying the payment of the order. We asked one postmaster whom we saw filling up an application why he did so. He replied, there is no convenience in the outer room for any one to write. We looked around and perceived the truthfulness of his remark. We trust that the Department will require every postmaster of a money-order office to furnish the necessary conveniences to enable the public to do any writing that may be necessary in the transaction of the postal business. To the same question another postmaster replied: "Oh, I could do it in one-quarter the time that he could." True; but this man was sending money to his wife to enable her to pay her mantua's rent; your ear failed to catch the name correctly; consequently the order could not be paid on presentation, and the landlord turned the poor woman into the street.

This is no fancy sketch, but an absolute fact. The misery that is sometimes created by such blunders as these is heart-rending, and, if witnessed, would cause every man to redouble his care and watchfulness that he should not be the cause. The poorer classes use the system largely, and they are in no condition to wait from one to two weeks for a second advice, or the still greater length of time necessary to procure a duplicate; and we therefore beg to repeat and impress upon the minds of postmasters and their employés that they cannot take too much pains to have the money-order business correctly and promptly done.

A Century "Plant" Nipped in the Bud.

We have always entertained an opinion rather favorable than otherwise of the merits of THE MAIL. We have striven to make it a useful and entertaining sheet, and it is hardly in the nature of things to be expected that we should "think small beer" of ourselves. We have also had an idea that this good opinion was to some degree at least, shared by our subscribers. Our readers may imagine, then, that our organ of self-esteem was not likely to be much depressed when we received the following very practical and astounding testimonial from an altogether unexpected source:

"206 BROADWAY, Sept. 7, 1869.

"JAMES GAYLER, Esq.:

"Dear Sir:—Please place my name on your books as a subscriber to the MAIL, from October last—at which time my former subscription expired—for one hundred years thereafter, and find check enclosed in payment of the same.

"I am, with high regard,
"Your obt. servant,
"G. W. HUBBARD, Jr."

We were not simply surprised at the receipt of the above with its enclosure. We were also deeply affected. Under the circumstances, it was touching—very touching. Something dropped, and we are not ashamed to say that we think it was a tear. But we must explain. Mr. H. (the G. stands for Gaius) has been for some years past engaged in various schemes of the "Gift Enterprise" kind, modestly concealing his connection with them by the assumption of divers names and titles, such as "T. & H. Ganghan & Co.," "Wright, Bros. & Co.," "Parkinson & Co.," "The Union Watch Co., Sandy Hook & Co.," etc., etc. Now, it has been our duty (more or less painful) to print from time to time, in the columns of THE MAIL, remarks on the subject of these and similar enterprises which were neither very complimentary nor calculated to induce our readers to invest in the purchase of tickets for the "Grand Distributions" of watches, pianos, diamonds, "and sich," to be conducted under the auspices of those mythical firms and companies. We have even more than once gone so far as to speak disparagingly of Mr. H. by name in connection with the subject. We flattered ourselves that Hubbard's financial cupboard had been rendered considerably the barer through our humble efforts; and yet, like his venerable namesake, he went to it to get a $100 bone for us! Is it any wonder that we were deeply affected by such conduct on his part?

So much by way of explanation to our readers; and now we must make a confession to Gaius:

Do you know, Gaius, that on receiving your letter and enclosure, our first impulse was to return the letter to you, with the simple remark, "not for Joseph," or words to that effect? Yes, we actually harbored the unworthy suspicion that this hundred year subscription was but a highly original device of yours to procure our acceptance of "hush money," and secure in future our silence on the subject of any other little games in the Gift Enterprise line which you might contemplate putting in operation! But after brief reflection we dismissed the idea as unworthy of us and of you. (We may have said "perish the thought!" but won't be positive.) Nevertheless, our soul, like the chronically malcontent Maltese brotherhood, was "not satisfied." We were sure you had some motive for your extraordinary conduct, and after long and patient mental search, we think we may say "Eureka!" You wished—amiable man—to heap coals of fire upon our head, and you have succeeded in doing it. Well, we can only "suffer and be strong" under the affliction. But the coals were very hot—so hot that we were compelled to seek for some means of alleviating our sufferings; and so, with that object, we indorsed your check over to one of the trustees of the fund for the relief of the sufferers by the Avondale mining calamity, with the request that the money be appropriated to their benefit. And then we felt better.

But you shall have "THE MAIL," too. Oh, yes. And we will continue to print in it, as usual, all sorts of nice things about you and your Enterprises. And if you know of any one in that line who would like to subscribe to THE MAIL for a thousand years, send him along, by all means. (Perhaps "Michelin & Co.," who have just started at "206 Broadway," in the very building from which your note is dated—singular coincidence!—would like to invest!) In the mean time we have only to assure you that we cordially reciprocate the "high regard" with which you are our obedient servant.

A Plea for the Milliners.

We are moved to make an earnest appeal in behalf of a suffering class of unprotected females. Lonely woman in distress is surely entitled to the sympathy of every manly bosom, and the aid of every manly arm and pen. In the language of the melodramatic stage, "The man who can look unmoved upon the sufferings of a woman, is unworthy of the name of a British Tar," or of any other respectable name. Such being the case, we must lift up our voice in protest against the heartless and cruel manner in which it would appear that the struggling milliners of our country are treated by certain of their male fellow-citizens who, we are sorry to say, are employed in the postal service. It seems that a singular fatality attends their efforts to pay their debts by remittances through the mails. The innocent ladies complain that whenever one of them (having been called on for a settlement of her account with the wholesale dealer from whom she has purchased the materials used in the manufacture of bonnets and other bewildering things of beauty and joye forever), in her unsophisticated way incloses one or two hundred dollars in small notes and fractional currency in a letter addressed to her creditor, and deposits it in a post office, the creditor receives the letter, but the money has disappeared! And not unfrequently the wretch who has thus robbed her adds to the blackness of his crime by mockingly pinning or gumming a fragment or two of the notes to the letter.

Now, we ask if this is not really too bad? But it is not the worst of it. Too frequently, when complaint of such outrages is made to the proper authorities, the wronged milliners are subjected to a series of harassing and impertinent questions by the appointed investigator, who, taking advantage of their sweet ignorance, generally succeeds in making them contradict themselves in important particulars, and sometimes even inducing them to admit that their stories about having sent the money were only pretty little fables, invented by the fair artificers to induce their creditors to give them "a little more time." And if his diabolical ingenuity is not equal to procuring such a confession point blank, it is too to one that he insists upon their swearing, on a real Bible, before a live justice of the peace, to the truth of their statements, which, of course, the poor timid things very properly decline to do. We are glad to say, however, that in some instances the gentle victims are found ready for even this emergency—having carefully prepared an affidavit, and all other necessary documents, before hearing of their loss.

Something must be done to stop these nefarious practices. The frequency of these very peculiar "losses" almost suggests the existence of a sort of Ku-Klux-Klan among post-office officials, the members of which are sworn to devote their entire energies to violating the sanctity of the mails by plundering these helpless females—possibly in revenge for what they considered the unreasonable magnitude of the sums required by their wives to pay for imperceptible bonnets. If this be the case, we warn the unholy brotherhood to pause in their mad career before the indignant milliners apply to Congress for relief and an investigating committee.

Sundry Post-Office Matters.

We notice, first, a letter of inquiry respecting forwarding letters free, and, to disabuse the mind of our correspondent of the impression that "there is no law for it," we give the language of the law: "Prepaid and free letters shall be forwarded, at the request of the party addressed, from one post office to another without additional postage charge." Act of June 12, 1866. The request may be personal or through an agent; but the privilege does not extend to letters that have been delivered. Concerning the forwarding of letters without such request, and on the opinion or belief that they would the sooner reach the party addressed, the information should be, as stated in the letter from the Department, "reliable," otherwise much injury might be inflicted, for persons traveling for pleasure, or on business, often designate months beforehand to what place they wish their letters directed, and expect to receive them there. Suppose, for instance, a popular lecturer has ordered letters addressed to him at a certain office, and the postmaster knows that on a certain night he is to be at an adjoining town; if his letters are forwarded to him they may cross him on his way, and his not receiving them at the certain office as he directed, may cause him a great deal of trouble and hard travel, if not to break engagements in which hundreds are interested.... A communication on the matter of returning letters to hotels according to the cards on the envelopes is next on our file. Our correspondent is right in saying that many such letters do not reach the writers. But that is not the fault of the law or of the Department, but of the parties who unwisely use such envelopes, and the remedy is in their hands, either by using plain envelopes or obliterating the cards in question, and inclosing in ink their own names and addresses.... A letter on the mode of inclosing cards, photographs or other small matters, in sealed envelopes, and cutting a notch, or clipping off a corner, so as to give a view of the contents, next claims our attention. The practice is undoubtedly rather a "begging" of the law, for it does not give the required facility for examining the contents without destroying the wrapper. Such matter is clearly chargeable with letter postage, which should be prepaid at the mailing office, but if not, should be collected, or the unpaid part, at the delivery office.... And now a letter on a "crying evil," but more so for the writers of letters than for postmasters. We mean depositing unstamped letters in a letter-receiving box, and at the same time dropping in money to pay the postage. It not infrequently happens that one or more of the bright geniuses who seek to pay postage in this way, forget—mind, we say forget—to drop the money with their letters, and hence the post-office clerk finds more letters than money for postage; and then the question arises to which letters to apply the money. We will not undertake to furnish a rule, but will say that we knew a clerk who in such cases paid first for letters to ladies, if any, and "flipped a copper" to determine how to apply the balance of the money, and next—sent the letters not then provided for to the Dead-Letter Office, marked "Held for Postage."....Our friend from the nutmeg State who sends us a copy of his "Rules of the Post Office," will please accept our thanks. They are the thing, as our readers may judge from the two samples we give: "When you want a stamp on your letter, tell the postmaster to put it on; if he don't lick it, lick him;" and "In case you put the stamp on yourself, soak it in your mouth long enough to remove the mucilage; it will then stick—till it is dry." That postmaster is evidently a disciple of Artemus Ward, and believes there is force in sarcasm.....Our correspondent from Pennsylvania, who wants "to know how to have the name of his office changed," is referred to the Department and to the member of Congress for his district.....Another Pennsylvania correspondent states that his office is situated between Buffalo and Cleveland D. P. O.s, and wants to know to which he should send letters for California. Not knowing how his office is supplied, we can only reply in the language of the Regulations (sec. 93), they should "be mailed to the distributing office through which they should first pass on the proper route to the place of their destination."....Our correspondent near Boston, Mass., who says he must resign without he can have the MAIL, is informed that we can appreciate his devotion to his duty, and will endeavor to do our part, and see that the publisher does his.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Delivery of Letters.—B. F. H., A——, Ind.—A letter addressed to "A, care of B," may be delivered to either party, unless A orders otherwise.

Two Parties of the same Name.—E. J. D., M—— C——, Idaho.—Where there are two parties of the same name who have a right to claim letters, a postmaster should satisfy himself, to the best of his ability, to which they should be delivered; and if he cannot by outside evidence, he may deliver to either, but should require the one to whom he delivers them to open and identify them, and, if not for him, to indorse them, "Opened by me through mistake," signing his name, and return them to the postmaster. Sec. 62, Reg. 1866.

Held for Postage Letters.—H. C. N., R——, Mass.—You are right in stamping a letter, not prepaid one rate "Held for Postage;" but if you know the party posting it, and retain the letter for him to have opportunity to prepay the postage, it is not necessary, as it only mars the letter without being of corresponding service. Sec. 371, Reg. 1866.

Letter Balances.—H. A. B., B——, O.—According to the Regulations it is letter balances, and not newspaper balances, that are furnished by the Department. Sec. 16, Reg. 1866.

Delivery by Carrier.—G. B. G., G——, Pa.—There is no way by which a person living out of the letter-carrier limits can have his letters delivered by one of the regular letter-carriers.

Account of Mails sent.—D. M., S——, Miss.—The account of mails sent was discontinued on the 1st of last October. See the order in THE MAIL for September, 1868.

County Papers.—A. S. C., N—— V——, Ind.,—County papers must be printed and published in the county to permit them to pass free through the mails under Section 251, laws of 1866. A paper, one-half of which is printed in another county, does not come within the meaning of this Section.

Writing on the Wrapper of a Newspaper.—M. L. B., G—— S——, O.—Writing on the wrapper of a newspaper subjects it to letter postage, to be collected on delivery if not paid at the mailing office (Sec. 150, Reg. 1866). If not accompanied by a post bill the amount collected may be entered on the account of undercharges, or you may affix stamps and collect the price.

Charge for Acknowledgments to Quarterly Returns.—W. H. G., A——, Ill.—A Justice of the Peace has the right to charge for acknowledgments to Quarterly Returns.

Stamp on Postmaster's Bond.—B. T. F., N—— C——, Mass.—Bonds for the due execution of the duties of any office are subject to a stamp duty of one dollar. By this it would seem that postmasters' bonds do not come within the meaning of the official instruments exempt from stamp duty.

Post-Office Laws and Regulations.—C. W. H., ——, Pa.—The laws and regulations will be furnished by the First Assistant Postmaster-General.

Express Companies.—S. H. C., H——, Montana, and A. J. L., P——, Cal.—Express companies may carry letters if they are inclosed in the Government stamped envelopes, and such letters may be deposited in a post office for delivery or to be forwarded by mail, but in such cases the stamps should not be cancelled by the company, but it should be done by the post office in which the letters are deposited. A different opinion at one time prevailed, but the above is now the settled decision.

Boxes.—S. H., R——, Wis.—Your construction of the regulations is correct. Under the old law of commissions, or the new law of salaries, a complete ownership of box-holders in their boxes would be an anomaly. You will find the subject mentioned in our "Answers" last month.

Franking.—C. W. P., M——, Ark., and others.—All communications on official business, of whatever origin, addressed to heads of the Executive Departments of the Government, etc., shall be conveyed by mail free without being franked or indorsed "official business." Sec. 139, Reg. 1866. See this subject on the third page.

Registration.—M. B., E——, N. Y.—Money and other valuables sent by mail are at the risk of the owner, whether registered or not; but in case of registered matter which cannot be traced out of the hands of any party who may have received it, that party, if negligence could be shown, would, no doubt, be liable for that negligence.

Postage.—J. C., P——, O.—The postage on seeds in a sealed package, must be charged at letter rates.....J. F. C., D——, O.—Packages of green apples in cans are neither samples nor seeds (unless the seeds of cholera and kindred complaints), and should be charged at letter rates, if mailed, but they should not be allowed in the mails unless so put up as not to injure other mail matter.....C. O. E., C——, N. H.—Plans or drawings done by hand are chargeable at letter rates.....M. L. R., M—— D——, Pa.—A business man who has a post office in his store, whether he is postmaster or not, has no right to distribute free through the post-office boxes bills to his customers.....H. G. P., B—— S——, Mich.—Magazines, such as Harper's, Peterson's, etc., if sent as transient rates should be charged two cents for four ounces.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISOELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no donbt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDIOATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland, or to or from the North German Union (including Austria and its States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England. In the case of such letters arving in the United States, the fine is five cents on each letter. This is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labnan, Liberia, Malta, Manritius, Natal, New Sonth Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, Sonth Australia, Tasrsania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph, and Egypt,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. The registration fee on letters to Egypt is eight cents each. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

FRANCE, ALGERIA, COUSICA, BOUERON, NICE AND SAVOY.—Postage on Registered Letters: 8 cents per quarter ounce, and 10 cents per half ounce additional. Registration Fee: 8 cents per quarter ounce, and 8 cents additional on each letter, irrespective of weight.

ALEXANDRETTA, TANGIERS AND TUNIS.—Postage on Registered Letters: 12 cents per quarter ounce, and 10 cents per half ounce additional. Registration Fee: 12 cents per quarter ounce, and 8 cents additional on each letter, irrespective of weight.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCA. — Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be rsailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLEOTIONS IN COIN.—In pursnance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received frors foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Greot Britain and Ireland, Frsnce, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-hils. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should he entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclnsively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to he collected.

RATES OF POSTAGE ON PRINTED MATTER FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

1. TO OR FROM GREAT BRITAIN.—Newspapers and circulars, 2 cents each. Book packets (including printed papers of all kinds, maps, plans, prints, engrsvings, drswings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, etc.), and patterns or samples, 6 cents per four onnces or fraction of four ounces, if four ounces or over in weight. The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosuree being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It rsust not contain a letter or any comrsunication in writing, or other inclosnre.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictnres, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the rsails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publisstione of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the natnre of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, nnless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet rsust exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is got open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or comrsunication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or npon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, sarsples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of rserchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any rsaterial sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this gronnd an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadtb or depth, or 24 ounces in weigbt. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weigbt of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All communications on official business, of whatever origin, addreseed to heads of the executive departments of government, or heads of bureaus therein, or to chief clerks of departments, sball be received and conveyed by mail free of postage with being franked or indorsed "Official Business."

By a joint Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Adjutsnts General of the several States and Territories, are authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, any medals, certificates of thanks or other testimonials, awarded, or which may be awarded by the Legislatures of said States and Territories, to the soldiers thereof, under snch regulations as the Postmaster General may direct.

Section 123, Regulations 1866, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as a personal privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weight of four onnces. Mail matter to those possessing the privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertsins to official business. Section 124 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides these, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenne officers, also, besides those mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may only frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No comrsunication, official or otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can be sent free.

The Act of Marcb 1, 1869, relating to franking, makes no change in the privilege, but merely enacts that the signature of the franking party must be written, and not printed.

The rate of postage on mail letters to any part of the United States is three cents a half ounce or fraction thereof. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where snch free delivery is not established the rate is one cent. All drop as well as mail letters must be prepaid.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Dagnerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four onnces or fraction thereof.

When the postages collected at an office amount to $100 a year, the name of the postmaster and of his office will be printed on the post bills. When the postmaster's compensation exceeds $12 50 a quarter, the postmaster is entitled to wrapping paper and twine, at the above agencies.

Orders for wrapping paper and twine must be on separate sheets from orders for blanks; bnt both may be inclosed in one envelope.

All postmasters whose compensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

a.—When the letter or is prefixed, the foreign postage (which in each case is 13 cents) is increased by an additional rate for every ½ grammes (⅛ oz.) or fraction thereof. The United States inland and Atlantic sea postage (which in each case is 10 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (⅛ oz.) or fraction thereof.

b.—Where the letter b is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case, is ascertained by deducting from the amount set down the sum of 3 cents, which is the United States portion of the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases, the postage is for each newspaper without regard to its weight when sent to British mail.

The Proposed Postal Convention with France.

It will be remembered that some time since Senator Ramsey, being about to visit Europe, was requested by Postmaster-General Creswell to open negotiations with the French government in regard to the substitution of a new Postal Convention between the United States and that country, for the very unsatisfactory one now in force. By the following statement of the Paris Correspondent of the New York Daily Times, dated 22d ult., it would appear that Senator Ramsey has failed to accomplish that object, on account of the unreasonable demands of the French government in regard to the matter:

"I regret to announce that all the liberal offers made by Senator Ramsey to the French postal authorities have been rejected, and that the demands by which they were met were so exaggerated and unreasonable, that there was no possibility of acceding to them. The terms offered by our Government to France were the same as those embraced in our conventions with the other European Governments. We proposed a rate of ten cents for half-ounce letters from all parts of the United States to all parts of France, and asked for an equal division of the inland postage; that is, three cents for the United States, three cents for France, and four cents for the sea postage; but the French authorities objected to the half-ounce or fifteen grammes weight, and insisted on the ten grammes weight for a single letter. This point was reluctantly yielded by our Government. Again the French Government exacted four cents as its inland rate. This could not be assented to, as it would be giving France a higher inland rate than our own, a provision all the more unjust from the fact that our territory is twenty times larger. But supposing the inland rates for both countries to be equalized at four cents, it would leave only two cents for sea postage, an amount insufficient to pay the ocean steamers. Hence the offer was regarded as inadmissible by our Government.

"But the most unreasonable of all the demands of the French Postal Authorities was this: that the United States should provide for the transportation of all the mails from France to the United States, as well as from the latter to France, whether by direct steamer or via England, except on the twenty-six days that the French steamer leaves Brest or New York; and yet the French Government would consent to allow to the United States only six cents per letter from the French frontier to all parts of the United States, including transit through Great Britain when necessary. Of course, so absurd a stipulation could not be entertained for a moment by our Commissioner.

"I should mention that the French authorities put forward as an argument that the United States should provide for the sea transportation, the fact that the French Government had subsidized a line of steamers for twenty-six trips a year, at $600,000 per annum, for a period of twenty years, from the year 1861, and they wished the United States Government to do the same. This smacks of the advice which the fox, who had lost his tail in a trap, gave to his brethren. The fact is, the French Government is bound for twenty years to the 'Compagnie Transatlantique' not to enter into any mail contract between France and any part of the coast of America, between Newfoundland and the mouth of the Amazon River. Hence the modest demand of the French Postal authorities, and the impossibility of concluding any fresh postal convention with them. The existing convention will expire on the 1st of January next."

COMMUNICATIONS.

The Money-Order Business.

Although the writer of the following states that it is "not written for publication," we see no reason why he should not be heard. So far as his complaint of insufficient compensation is concerned, we think it probable that if we should as he suggests, "lift our voice to the higher authorities" on the subject, we should be met with the reply that it is not practicable for the Department to adjust the salaries of fourth-class postmasters at a figure which will enable them and their families to live upon the income from that source alone. These and all other salaries of postmasters are adjusted upon the basis fixed by act of Congress, from which system the Department cannot legally vary in its action. But that many postmasters are poorly paid, there can be no denying. As for the desk, we did not mean to suggest the procuring of one more costly than a board eighteen or twenty-four inches wide and four feet long, fastened by a couple of cleets to the wall or partition of the lobby of the post office:

EDITOR U. S. MAIL—In your October issue you devote about three-fourths of a column to the money order branch, and there are very few of our poor little fourth-class offices but that will resound at this cracking of your semi-official whip. I agree with you fully that the M. O. B. should be well attended to; but did it ever occur to you, Mr. MAIL, that the Department might facilitate business and insure a larger revenue by furnishing more liberally to our class of offices? Let me instance a case. A man is running an office of the fourth class—a money-order office; his salary is $960 per annum. Boxes number 250, nearly 200 rented at one dollar each. He issues, say a dozen money orders a week—and this, like any other business, comes by spells—three or four at a time. He dispatches and receives two daily mails, three tri-weekly and one semi-weekly. He has just paid over to the contractor the amount of his receipts for the quarter past (salary deducted), $220. It is impossible for him to attend the office alone. The regulations say he must keep a clerk capable of attending to the business if he should be so unfortunate as to get sick. He cannot employ such a clerk under forty dollars a month—just half his salary. For the rent of one small room he pays $150 per year. His boxes cost him $40, and they are old, shaky and too small. His necessary furniture is a table, two chairs, two desks, stove, seven mail boxes, besides the other little et ceteras of an office. The only thing the Regulations allow him is one "cheap desk," which (he imagines) would about hold the blanks necessary for the registration business. They do not even furnish him stationery with which to carry on official correspondence; nor stamping ink, for which he pays $2 per box; nor books for records, box rents and postage accounts. Now, by the most liberal calculation, the Department would allow him about $400 a year for himself and family to live upon—house rent, food and clothing. Out of this scant allowance you would make this man "rig up" a desk outside the boxes, "to enable the public to do any writing that may be necessary in the transaction of the postal business. Ah, Mr. MAIL, this is zeal for the Department with a vengeance! Instead of trying to increase their expenses, can you not lift your voice for an increase of salary for the fourth class officers, so as to enable them to meet their necessary office expenses and still leave a respectable remuneration for their services? The office of postmaster is an important one, requiring strict attention and some business capacity. Yet I venture to say that they have smaller pay and more meagre allowances than the officers of any other department of the Government. I can only refer to fourth-class offices. The postmasters at large offices are at no expense, and have nothing to do but sign their names. What do you think?

JUSTITIA.

A——, PA., October, 1869.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL: For the past few years progression and simplicity in executing business have been the leading features of the Post Office Department. "Mails sent" are down to nothing. "Mails received" are but little more; and, in fact, all but newspaper regulations have been placed in the most convenient and sensible shape. The subscribers who are harassed in every quarter by the postmaster for the postage due on this paper and that magazine would certainly find it most convenient to pay that little sum at once to the publisher. Take the case of one publisher who issues twenty thousand weekly papers to subscribers at three thousand post offices. Each of those offices is required to report each quarter, when it might with the same correctness, with less expense and a larger amount of postage, be summered down to a quarterly report from the postmaster at the mailing office and publisher. Besides this it is an advantage to the publisher. He, publishing twenty thousand copies, receives the subscription and postage money in advance, which puts $4,000 postage money into his hands, and paying his postage quarterly, in thereby has the use of $1,000 for three months, $1,000 for six months and $1,000 for one year, without interest. Why not adopt a plan that is better for the subscriber, better for the postmaster, better for the publisher and better for the Post Office Department?

Yours, SUBSCRIBER.

LE GRANDE, UNION CO., OREGON, October 9, 1869.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL: Your very valuable sheet reaches this far-off portion of Uncle Sam's domain very regularly, thanks to that gigantic enterprise—the wonder and admiration of the world—the Union Pacific Railroad. The MAIL is of great assistance to all postmasters so remote from the Department, and appreciated by all who receive it. I have noticed your willingness to answer all queries of correspondents, and in all ways promote the interests of the public in giving instructions in regard to the conduct of that mighty machine, the Post-Office Department. I have selected you (not knowing really how else to apply) as a medium for making a complaint, which I hope will have the desired effect, i.e., abate a great nuisance, which is simply this: We have a good deal of mail matter to handle, which is mailed on the aforementioned railroad, and the letter packages are directed with a lead pencil. The consequence is, that by the time they have traveled four or five hundred miles by stage through the Snake River and Burnt River and Auburn, the direction is often entirely obliterated, and always hard to decipher. Having, by late regulations, our mails to overhaul in the night, it is doubly perplexing and troublesome, and should the proper authorities in the Department be informed of the facts, I think they would furnish the agents on the cars with ink and pens. B. P. P., P. M

EDITOR U. S. MAIL: The prepayment of newspaper postage has been argued in the MAIL for a good while, and yet there has been no law made to provide for such prepayment. My plan to accomplish this result would be for some three or four postmasters, who understand everything about postage on newspapers thoroughly, to agree on some plan as to the rates and method of prepayment. Then to select a stirring postmaster in every county of each of the States, who would have the postmasters in his county sign a petition to the Postmaster-General, or to Congress, for the passage of a law that nothing should be forwarded in the mail unless prepaid at the mailing office. "United we stand, divided we fall" (or fail). Please give these views a place in your paper. There must be many postmasters among your readers who can give the plan I have suggested a "start."

A TEXAS POSTMASTER.

The Franking Privilege.

We give below an alphabetical list of persons entitled to the franking privilege, which we feel assured will meet a want long felt by many postmasters. Those who do not file the MAIL, to have all the numbers ready for reference, should at least preserve this number and have it always at hand. The list is as full as our research has enabled us to make it. If there should be any omissions, they will be supplied on information of the fact.

The franking privilege is of two kinds, viz.: 1, personal, traveling with the person, and may be exercised wherever that person may be; 2, an official trust, which can only be exercised for official correspondence, and, of course, must be sent to or from the office occupied by the officer.

The figures refer to notes at the bottom of the list, which are based on Chapter XX. of Regulations of 1866.

It must be remembered that the act of March 1, 1869, makes no alteration in the Franking Privilege, but merely renders illegal the use of a fac simile signature of the party franking.

Obituary.

Hon. Charles A. Wickliffe, formerly Governor of Kentucky, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Judge William M Merrick, in Howard County, Md., on the evening of Oct. 30th. He belonged to a family several members of which have been prominent in political life in Kentucky and in the nation, but none of them were more distinguished than himself. He was a member of Congress from 1822 to 1832, and in 1851 was a delegate to the Peace Congress which assembled in the City of Washington, and in the same year was again a member of Congress. He has also served his native State in the Legislature, as well as being its Governor. Under the administration of President Tyler, he held the office of Postmaster-General. He was gifted with a powerful intellect, and of commanding personal appearance. For some years he has been almost entirely blind, and he recently went to Baltimore for the purpose of submitting to an operation on his eyes. He was born in Barretown, Ky., on the 8th of June, 1788.

Colonel Charles K Gardner died in Washington City, on Monday, the 1st inst., in the 83d year of his age. He was a native of New Jersey. He entered the army as Ensign of the Sixth United States Infantry, in May, 1808, and distinguished himself during the war of 1812. During the eight years' administration of President Jackson, Colonel Gardner held the office of First Assistant Postmaster-General, and during the subsequent four years' administration of President Van Buren, he was Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department. During the four years' administration of President Polk, he was Postmaster of the City of Washington

An Automaton Postmaster.

A correspondent (Mr. A. E. Blunt, P. M., at Cleveland, E. Tenn.) sends us a diagram and description of a contrivance intended to save the public from asking, and postmasters from answering, the question—"Any letters for me?' It consists of an upright cylindrical wheel, four feet high, with twelve faces, to which the letters are secured in alphabetical order by small flat brass springs (twenty-six to each face) in such a manner that their directions may be easily read by a person standing outside the window, behind which the wheel is placed. A flange projects outside of the post-office enclosure, from the lower part of the wheel, and, as Mr. B. says, "enables the public foot to turn the machine to any letter of the alphabet;" and he adds:

The advantages derived from this machine are more than any one would suppose. It presents every letter (except those advertised) in the office to the public; enabling all (that can read) to ascertain whether or not there are any letters for them in the office, and that without asking. Also, in looking over the whole list, they frequently see and take out letters for their neighbors, which they would not otherwise have asked for.

Another advantage: The number of deed letters (before this machine was used) sent off monthly was 75 to 125, now it amounts to less than 30 monthly.

Perhaps other offices have this contrivance. I have never seen anything like it. It is of great value to this office, and believing it will do other offices good, I submit the above to you to say what you think proper.

The invention of our correspondent appears to us a useful and ingenious one. What does he do, however, with the gentleman (well known at every post office) who says "there must be" a letter for him; or who "thinks it mighty strange" that there ain't none. Can anything be invented which will "choke him off?" We doubt it.

Sundry Post-Office Matters.

We reply to our correspondent who asks for information on the subject of forwarding letters that have been delivered, that mail matter after having been delivered out of the custody of the Post-Office Department, loses all the privileges it had by virtue of being properly in the mails, and becomes subject to postage just the same as though mailed for the first time. It is not subject, however, to being "held for postage," but must be forwarded—charged if unpaid—and the postage collected on delivery. This privilege was formerly restricted to letters; but, by a late decision of the Department, periodicals and newspapers whether having been delivered or not; may be forwarded by charging postage but letters not having been delivered, are to be forwarded free. Our correspondent states that his predecessor once asked the same question, but did not get a definite answer. We cannot now refer to that particular question, but we are confident that we have replied to several such questions, as definitely, though probably not as extensively, as we reply above. We do not intend to give indefinite answers, nor to neglect to reply to any inquiry that is guaranteed by the name and post-office address of the inquirer.

Our publication last month of two of the "rules for a post office"—sent us from Connecticut—has called forth several communications; among them, one covering a set of rules in a similar vein, but greater in number, that strike at many annoying practices of callers at post offices. We copy one that hits a practice not only annoying, but subversive of the care that should be taken in the mailing of letters, and, per consequence, of the security and celerity in their transmission: "Never get your letter in the office till ten or fifteen minutes after time for closing the mail; then ask the postmaster or clerks if they will mail it, as it is very important it should reach its destination immediately." We add we know something of this annoyance, and our conclusion is that with ninety-nine hundredths of the post offices, and the same proportion of letters mailed after time, the writers of such letters have ample time to write them before the closing of the mail, and their not doing so is either through laziness, or to give them opportunity of showing their importance. We would not advise postmasters to show an unaccommodating spirit, but we do advise all letter-writers to have their letters in the post office in good time. Do it for your own sakes, if not for the postmaster's.

Another correspondent wishes us to "publish the laws and regulations relative to the postage on wearing apparel, so that every P. M., and the rest of mankind and womankind could understand and know what postage to charge." We have repeatedly enlarged on this subject, and do not think we can make it clear to all until all can learn that a silk dress is not a book or a package of papers, nor an overcoat or pair of boots a sample or a package of seeds. Section 222 of Laws and 37 of Regulations of 1866 contains a list of mailable matter. Everything not named in these must be charged at letter rates; and there is nothing named in them about which there can be doubt, except samples, which must be construed to mean samples of dry, flexible material, of no intrinsic value except as samples. Our correspondent, who writes that he "don't rest well nights without the MAIL," we commend to the especial consideration of those postal clerks and route agents through whose hands his copy of the paper passes after it leaves the publication office.

Recent Decisions by the Department.

We have received the following from the post master at Watertown, Wis.:

In the September MAIL, in your answers to correspondents, you say "Papers should not be forwarded unless the postage is prepaid." I inclose a copy of a letter from the Department, which you will see takes different grounds, and which seems to make no distinction between transient papers and those coming regularly by subscribers. The rule appears to be that all shall be forwarded, and that the additional charge of postage, to-wit: two cents each if weighing less than four ounces; if not paid at the mailing office, must be collected at the office of delivery.

This is a matter about which much difference of opinion, as well as practice, exists among postmasters, and I suggest that you ventilate it in the MAIL, so that we may all understand it alike.

The following is a copy of the letter referred to:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17, 1869.

Sir—In reply to your letter of the 13th inst., you are informed that letters may be forwarded to a person who has changed his post office address, without additional charge of postage: periodicals and newspapers, however, cannot be thus forwarded; they must be charged with postage at the rate of two cents for every four ounces or fraction thereof, to be prepaid or collected on delivery. Very respectfully, etc.,

GEORGE EARLE,
First Asst. P. M. General.

The above decision is clearly in accordance with the spirit of the law, and we are very glad that it has been made.

Another decision of importance has also been made (reversing a decision announced some years since) in regard to newspapers partly printed in one county and published in another. Formerly, such papers were decided to be not entitled to the privilege of free circulation allowed to newspapers "printed and published within the county;" but the Department has now ruled as follows:

A newspaper having a known office of publication—notwithstanding one side of the same is printed in another county or State—is entitled to the same privileges as though both sides were printed at the said office of publication.

The work on the new post office in this city progresses rapidly. Forces are kept at work night and day excavating and laying the foundation preparatory to the building. It will not be more than a year or two before we have an office worthy of the Government and the people, and of which the citizens themselves may be proud, to say nothing of the facilities for the transaction of postal business and the comfort of the clerks.

Official Endorsement.

Since its establishment in 1860, the UNITED STATES MAIL has received the official recommendation of Postmasters-General BLAIR, DENNISON and RANDALL and we take pleasure in publishing also the following from Postmaster-General CRESWELL, who adds to those of his predecessors his recognition and endorsement of THE MAIL as a medium for the publication of official orders and instructions and of correct information on postal subjects:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, August 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

[OFFICIAL.]

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, Oct. 15, 1869.

Sir—In accordance with information just received from the Post Department of the North German Union the following rates of postage are hereafter to be charged on the correspondence posted in this country and addressed to any part of Servia, Belgrade included, via the North German Union, viz.:

Letters by the direct mail to Bremen or Hamburg, 13 cents, and by closed mail through England, 17 cents per each half an ounce, or a fractional part of half an ounce; prepayment optional.

Newspapers, via the direct mail to Bremen or Hamburg, 6 cents, and by the closed mail through England, 7 cents per each weight of four ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment compulsory.

Book packets and samples of merchandise by direct mail to Bremen or Hamburg, 9 cents, and via the closed mail through England, 11 cents for each four ounces or fraction of four ounces; prepayment compulsory.

No change has been made respecting registration from the United States to Servia by this route, and the privilege therefore continues restricted to letters, the international registry fee of 8 cents per letter prepaying the cost of registration in full to destination in that country.

I have therefore to request that you will please amend the table of postages in the next issue of the U. S. MAIL, by substituting the modified rates of postage chargeable to Servia, via North Germany, for the rates now published therein as applicable thereto by this route.

Very respectfully, your obt. servant,
JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Supt. Foreign Mails.

Editor "U. S. Mail."

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, Oct. 19, 1869

Sir—Information has just been received from the General Post Office of the North German Union that the changes in the rates of postage from the United States to Port Said, via North Germany and Trieste, mentioned in my letter, No. 17,944, of the 4th of June last, cannot, for the present, be put into execution.

The rates of postage hereafter to be charged on the correspondence forwarded from the United States to Port Said, via North Germany, are therefore the same as stated in my letter, No. 15 941, of the 14th of November, 1868, as applicable to the correspondence for Lower and Middle Egypt, via the same route, viz.:

LETTERS, by direct mail to Bremen or Hamburg, 20 cents, and by closed mail through England, 25 cents each per half ounce or fraction thereof; prepayment optional.

NEWSPAPERS, by direct mail to Bremen or Hamburg, 9 cents, and via the closed mail through England, 10 cents per each four ounces or fraction of four ounces; prepayment compulsory. Small newspapers not exceeding two ounces in weight are, however, transmissible in the direct mail, if prepaid, 7 cents, and by the closed mail, if prepaid, 8 cents.

BOOK PACKETS AND SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE, by the direct mail to Bremen or Hamburg, 12 cents, and in the closed mail, via England, 14 cents per each weight of four ounces or fraction of four ounces; prepayment compulsory.

I have therefore to request that you will please cause the necessary correction to be made in the next issue of the U. S. MAIL.

Very respectfully, your obt. servant,
JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Supt. Foreign Mails.

A Step Forward.

We are very glad to see it (unofficially) announced that Postmaster-General Creswell, in his forthcoming report, will take ground against the system of delivery of mail matter through boxes, and in favor of the adoption of the carrier system at all offices where it can properly be introduced—which includes, of course, all the larger offices.

There can be no doubt in the mind of any one at all familiar, by experience, with the subject, that the "box system," as conducted at the post offices in our great cities, is one of the main obstacles to the satisfactory performance of the functions of the Department. It is easy enough to set forth in editorial columns the "glittering generalities" that "every merchant has a right to have his letters delivered in that manner which best suits his convenience," and that "the box system has been in use for years, and if those now in authority are not equal to the task of conducting it properly, they should give place to those who can," etc.; but to those whose eyes and ears are officially and practically made familiar with the vexations, complaints and bewildering complications engendered by it, such superficial arguments in favor of the box system can have no more effect than so many assertions that four and five make eleven, or that two parallel lines, if only carried far enough, will eventually intersect each other. It is a task of no difficulty for an expert to detect the flaws in the reasonings of the theoretical upholders of the box system. One of the principal is that they are based upon the assumption that the box-holders are the "public," whereas, although numerous, they form really but a small portion of the public—and any claim on their behalf to peculiar and exclusive rights, is untenable and absurd. But admitting, for the sake of argument, that they have a right to be specially and primarily considered by the post office in the delivery of their letters, let us give a few facts—which cannot be contradicted—illustrating the evils which result from the system to the box-holders themselves. The statements here made are the result of experience at one of the largest post offices in the Union—any at New Amsterdam.

There is scarcely one box-holder, who is in the receipt of many letters, who does not almost daily receive, through his box, letters addressed to other box-holders, which have been placed therein by mistake. Of course his own letters run the same risk of misdelivery.

There is not a newspaper of extended circulation the publisher of which does not find, nearly every day, among the letters delivered to him through his box, from one to six letters addressed to the publishers of other newspapers—some of his own letters being in the same way delivered to them.

There are no two box-holding individuals or firms in the city of anything like a similar name, whose letters are not being perpetually "mixed up" by the delivery of Hobbs's letters to Dobbs, of Barker's letters to Parker, of Hendrickson's to Henderson, of J. T. Brown & Son's to T. J. Brown & Co., etc.

It is no unusual occurrence for a messenger, on presenting a ticket for the letters in one box, to be handed the entire contents of another, which he may with impunity appropriate and open if so disposed—as he occasionally is.

Scarcely a week passes without the detection of a box-holder's messenger in purloining the letters of his employer—who, with the touching confidence in juvenile human nature, characteristic of his class, has generally expressed his willingness to "trust that boy with uncounted gold, sir," and profanely condemned the post office as the cause of his repeated losses. There is hardly a publishing house of importance in the city referred to which has not suffered in this way—the largest of them to the extent of thousands of dollars through the dishonesty of three of its messengers, detected in succession.

So much (though more might be said) for the penalties which those pay who prefer the delivery of their letters through boxes. By indulging such preference they to some extent have to blame themselves for the consequences. There is another class, however, who suffer extensively from the evils attending the box system, and who are in no way themselves responsible for them—we mean those unlucky merchants and others who do not rent boxes, but whose letters, nevertheless, are put into box after box belonging to persons or firms of somewhat similar name to "try"—the letters being all the time plainly addressed to the street and number of their owners—who sometimes receive them days after the time at which they should have been delivered, marked in pencil, "opened by mistake" or "not for box 27,842."

Then there are the transient visitors to the city (unfortunate enough to bear the same name as that of one or more box-holders), who instruct their wives and business correspondents to address them at "New Amsterdam" during their absence, and fancy they will receive their letters promptly at the "general delivery" on calling for them—never, in their innocence, dreaming that said letters will go straight to the box of some namesake—a "merchant prince" of New Amsterdam, to be by him opened and cast aside as having been addressed to him by mistake.

In short, the box system, no matter how admirably adapted to the requirements of our people forty years ago, is now a cumbrous, obsolete nuisance, and in its present proportions, an obstacle to our progress in postal improvement. We would not advocate its immediate and total abolition. No doubt that system of delivery is most convenient for banks, large publishing houses, and those doing business in the immediate vicinity of the post offices at large cities—but for that purpose not more than 1,000 boxes would be required at any office, which is a manageable number. But at present we would defy even "Brother McMemory, of Recollection Lodge" ("who," says a Masonic contemporary, "can confer three degrees at once") to attempt to "run" one of our large "box departments" with credit to himself or satisfaction to the community.

A Hint to School-Book Makers.

We hope that it will one day be put into the hearts of some of those gentlemen who compile "Readers" for the use of schools, to insert, among their "Lessons in Words of One and Two Syllables," a chapter to the following effect:

"HOW TO AD-DRESS A LET-TER.

"When you are go-ing to send a let-ter to the post of-fice, you should be care-ful to put on the out-side, in ve-ry plain 'wri-ting, the name of the per-son you want the let-ter to go to, the name of the town or city where he lives, and the street and num-ber of his house or store. If you do not know the street and num-ber, you should put on what the man does for a liv-ing. So if you want to send a let-ter to John Brown, in Bos-ton, who keeps a bar-store, you should put this on the out-side:

"JOHN BROWN,
"Hat-ter,
"BOS-TON,
"Mass.

"If you know the street and num-ber of his store, you should put that on too. Then when you put your let-ter in to the post of-fice, the men in the post of-fice will know how to send it right, so that John Brown will get it. But if you do not put on what he does for a liv-ing, the men in the post of-fice will not know which John Brown to send it to, and may send it to some oth-er John Brown, and John Brown the hat-ter will be ve-ry an-gry, and will go to the men in the post of-fice in Bos-ton and per-haps will use bad words to them."

The present adult generation in this country is apparently so stiff-necked and perverse in the matter of addressing its letters, that we have but little hope of its reformation. Illegibility, incompleteness and hap-hazard haste characterize the addresses of a very large number of the domestic letters which pass through the United States mails. It is customary to laugh on seeing such an address as this on a letter:

> "In care of Bridget Maloney, > Number 207 11th street, east,
> two doors from the bake shop,
> for Dennis Malloy, carpenter,
> 2d floor in the rear, front room."

But there is nothing funny about it. The writer has simply done his or her best to secure the delivery of the letter to the proper person, and to no one else, and has taken elaborate pains to aid the post office in finding that person without loss of time. The address given is much less ridiculous than that which the great Mr. Goldbug, the millionaire merchant, scrawls upon his letter. He can only afford the time to scribble some faint resemblance of the name of the person or firm he has written to, adding the abbreviated name of the city, without street or number, hands his letter to his messenger, and leaves it to "the post-office fellows" to forward and deliver as best they may, quite prepared, if his own carelessness should cause the delay or loss of his epistle, to make the postmaster feel the weight of his magnificent displeasure in a letter beginning "I believe you are the servant of the public, and no such," etc.

We confess that we see little cause for expecting a reform in this matter for many years to come. But if our suggestion as to the school books should happily be adopted, we may not unreasonably hope that the next generation of Americans will manifest the effect of the lesson thus instilled into their infant minds by taking half the trouble to address their letters properly that Irish laborers and servants do now.

MAIL ROBBERY EXTRAORDINARY.—Mark Twain, in his recently published book of travel, gives a curious account of the manner in which mail robberies (or rather robberies of the post-office revenue) are accomplished in some part of Africa which he visited. It appears that the mail-carriers there are accustomed to collect postage on delivery of their letters, and some time since, being frequently attacked and robbed by highwaymen, conceived the device of cheating them of their prey by swallowing the specie in their possession. Unfortunately, however, the robbers soon discovered this trick, and now provide themselves with emetics, one of which they administer to each captured "man of letters" and then—wait.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Postal Laws and Regulations.—G. W. J., O——, Pa.—The Code of Postal Laws and Regulations is furnished by the First Assistant Postmaster-General, and is charged in postmasters' accounts at two dollars.

Returning Card Letters.—E. S., C——, Conn.—Section 1, act of July 1, 1868, particularly specifies that a letter indorsed with the name of the writer, remaining uncalled for thirty days, or such time as the writer may direct, shall be returned to the writer.

Mutilated Currency.—J. McD., A——, N. Y.—Postmasters are directed to receive "United States notes of which not more than one-twentieth is missing, and fractional notes of which not more than one-tenth is missing, if clearly genuine," but not mutilated notes. By mutilated is meant notes not worth their full face value, but popularly the word is applied to all ragged currency, and on this application we have frequently stated that postmasters are required to take mutilated currency in payment for stamps. In future we shall do as we have done now, use the word in its proper and Governmental sense. The Assistant Treasurer and the designated depositaries of the United States are the proper parties to whom to apply to redeem mutilated currency; but postmasters may take such currency and have it redeemed, and in many cases his would be at great convenience to the public. Send to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General for a circular on the subject.

Collecting Letters in the Country.—G. R. D., M——, N. Y.—Postmasters are not allowed to charge more than legal postage, and hence should not charge for collecting letters from those whom they serve in the way of other business, whether in traveling or in a store. Sec. 315, Law 1866.

Credit for Letters Carried by Express Companies.—T. J. S., M——, Cal.—Credit for letters carried by express companies can only be claimed at the offices where the stamps on them are canceled.

Affidavit to the Mailing of a Letter.—G. R. D., M——, N. Y.—A postmaster has a right to make an affidavit to the mailing of a letter, provided, of course, he is cognizant of the facts.

Route Agent's Position.—McD M. P., S——, Va.—Application for appointment as route agent should be made to the First Assistant Postmaster-General.

Envelopes Spoiled in Directing, etc.—E. H. S., S——, Va.—1. The credit for envelopes spoiled in directing should be entered in the general account. 2. The information you wish with regard to forwarding letters may be found in the MAIL for September, 1866.

Book Manuscripts.—J. C. H., C——, Ga.—The law specifically mentions book manuscripts in the list of matter mailable as third class, but nowhere makes mention of newspaper manuscript, which latter is therefore chargeable with letter postage. Sec. 244, Laws 1866.

Payment to Contractor.—J. G. McP., B——, Ind.—The general rule of law is that a debtor must go to the creditor to pay a debt. Under this rule you would have to go to the railroad station to pay the contractor. While we reply to this question we cannot but express surprise that it should ever arise, and when it does, cannot but think there must be a deficiency of courtesy somewhere.

Seeds.—J. G. T., R——, Mass.—We must adhere to our opinion that seeds not so wrapped as to be inspected without destroying the wrapper are subject to letter postage. While section 89 of the Regulations of 1866 excepts seeds from the regulation to wrap certain matter with open ends or sides, the regulations nowhere state that seeds may be inclosed in sealed packages. And section 255 of Laws uses the words, "if not so wrapped and secured" (that is, that the matter can be examined by postmasters), "the same shall be subject to letter postage;" and section 256 authorizes postmasters to remove the wrappers and envelopes from printed and other matter not charged with letter postage. The spirit of the postal laws is, that all matter in the mails sealed against inspection must be charged with letter postage, except, of course, "matter lawfully franked." Seeds can of course be secured from loss in transit, by being placed in tied boxes bags, without violation of law or regulation.

Several Notices in one Envelope.—E. H., M——, Pa.—It is against the laws to inclose two or more letters or notices addressed to different persons in one envelope. Sec. 217, Laws 1866.

Mail Messenger acting as Clerk in a Post Office.—L. P. B., W——, O.—The law expressly enacts that no clerk in a post office shall be a contractor or concerned in a contract for carrying the mails. Sec. 101, Laws 1866.

Franking.—C. C. W., V——, C——, Nev.—We have repeatedly stated that the act of March 1, 1869, relating to the franking privilege, did not make any change whatever in that privilege. It merely required that franks should be written, and not printed or stamped. It is an invariable rule that mail matter sent to a person possessing the franking privilege is entitled to pass free through the mails, the same as if sent by him. Read carefully our information on the subject, in our "Miscellaneous Information" of last month.

Show Circulars in Post-office Boxes.—T. E. H., O——, Minn.—There is no authority for distributing free, through boxes or otherwise, from a post office, the circulars of concert-singers, circuses or other amusements. They should be charged at the regular rates of postage.

County Papers.—M. H. C., F——, Iowa.—It is only one copy of each weekly paper published in the county that is entitled to be mailed free. Many postmasters seem to think that it is only necessary the paper should be published in the county to entitle it to this free privilege. But the law and regulations both restrict it to weekly papers. Sec. 251, Laws and Secs. 156 and 228, Reg. 1866, and Sec. 3 of Law and Instructions of act of July 27, 1868.

Distance between Post Offices.—L. B. S., P——, N. Y.—The distance between post offices is not fixed by law, but is decided by the wants of the public (Sec. 1, Laws 1866); but a post office should not be moved from the usual post-road, nor should any material change be made in its site without consent of the Department. Sec 33, Reg. 1866.

Charge of a Post Office.—T. M. C., C——, O.—A postmaster should appoint an assistant, to prevent the office being left without a duly qualified person to perform its duties in case of the necessary absence of the postmaster. Sec. 22, Reg. 1866.

Wrapping Letters.—J. S. McD., B——, N. J. Postmasters are required to wrap letters, except where offices are supplied wholly or in part by railway post offices. Sec. 88, Reg. 1866. We recommend you to apply to the Second Assistant Postmaster General for instruction on the subject.

Order for Request Envelopes.—R. E. W., M——, O.—Orders for request envelopes must be seperate from all other requisitions, and should be very explicit. We are not aware of any special blanks for the purpose. Use a sheet of ordinary writing paper.

Registration.—J. B. L., P——, N. Y.—No account of registered letters is to be sent with the Quarterly Return to the Auditor of the Post-Office Department. Sec. 18, Reg'n Reg. 1868. Do not confound this section with Section 7, which requires a quarterly report to the Third Assistant Postmaster General. ..... A. H., P—— P——, O.—Registered matter to go over routes on which there are no route agents or postal clerks, should be placed in the pouch at the mailing office, accompanied by a blank receipt, to be signed by the postmaster at the office where the pouch is first opened. Sec. 2, Reg'n Reg. 1868.

Postage.—J. M., M——, Wis.—The postage on small parcels of dry goods or clothing is chargeable at letter rates, except articles of clothing to non-commissioned officers and privates serving in the armies of the United States, for which the rate is eight cents for four ounces, or any fraction thereof. Secs. 223 and 245, Laws 1866..... A. E. P., C——, N. Y.—Handbills or circulars distributed through a post office where there is not a free delivery must be charged the same as drop-letters, viz., one cent each..... H. S., G——, N. Y.—A postmaster is not required to put the address on papers coming to his office in a club, unless the postage is paid on the whole packet for one quarter in advance (Sec. 211, Reg. 1866); but subscribers to weekly papers may receive the same free if they reside in the county were printed and published (Sec. 228), but the publisher should address and properly fold the paper.... E. W. W., H——. Conn.—A package of county papers addressed to one person not a news-agent, and delivered to him, should not be afterward delivered to individual subscribers through the post office unless postage is paid.... W. K. G., P——, Pa.—Seeds, including seed potatoes, may be sent by mail at the rate of two cents for four ounces; but they must so be put up or wrapped as that they may be inspected, otherwise they are chargeable as letter postage. Sec. 222. Laws 1866..... R. J. F., T——, Conn.—The laws require at least one-quarter postage in advance; if the paper is discontinued in the meanwhile, the postmaster has no authority to return a proportional part of the postage paid.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland, or to or from the North German Union (including Austria and the States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England. In the case of such letters arriving in the United Stetes, the fine is five cents on each letter. This is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery

REGISTERING FOREION LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United Stetes for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German Stetes and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundiend. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gembia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Lahuen, Liberia, Malta, Meuritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victorie and Western Australia, on peyment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and pisces reached vie the North German mails, except the pieces in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph, and Egypt,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. The registration fee on letters to Egypt is eight cents each. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered lettars and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

FRANCE, ALGERIA, CORSICA, BOURBON, NICE AND SAVOY.—Postage on Registered Letters: 8 cents per quarter ounce, and 10 cente per half ounce additional. Registration Fee: 8 cents per quarter ounce, and 8 cents additional on each letter, irrespective of weight.

ALEXANDRETTA, TANGIERS AND TUNIS.—Postage on Registered Letters: 12 cents per quarter ounce, and 10 cents per half ounce additional. Registration Fee: 12 cente per quarter ounce, and 8 cente additional on each let'er, irrespective of weight.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed: Mail addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference shonld he entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclnsively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

DOMESTIO POSTAGES.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited.

Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

Section 123, Regulations 1866, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as a personal privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weight of four ounces. Mail matter to those possessing the privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertains to official business. Section 124 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides these, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenue officers, also, besides those mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No communication, official nr otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can he sent free.

UNITED STATES MAIL
AND
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. X., NO. 3. NEW YORK, DECEMBER, 1869. WHOLE NO. 111.

We give below so much of the Report of the Postmaster General as we can find room for. The appendix, not yet published, will contain some statistics of interest to our readers, which we will endeavor to obtain in time for publication in our next:

Raport of the Postmaster-General.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Nov. 15, 1869.

The ordinary revenues of this Departrsent for the fiscal year ended Jone 30, 1869, were $18,344,510 72, and the expenditures $23,698,131 50. For the year ended Jnne 30, 1868, the ordinary revennes were $16,292,600 80, and the expenditures $22,730,593 65. The increase of revenue for the year 1869 over the preceding fiscal year was $2,051,909 92, and the increase of expenditures $967,538 85. The increase of revenne for 1868 over 1867 was $1,055,573 93, and the incresse of expenditures for 1868 over 1867 was $3,495,109 19 The ratio of increase of revenue for tbe year 1869 is 12.59 per cent., and of expenditures 4.25 per cent., compered with receipts and expenditures for the year 1868. The iocrease of revenue for 1869 is greater than the increase for 1868 by $906,835 99, and the increase of expenditures for 1869 le less than the increase for 1868 by $2,527,570 34. If, therefore, the increase of receipts he compared with the increase of expenditures for the year last ended, it will appear that the increase of receipts exceeded the increase of expenditures in the sum of $1,084,371 07; while o like comparison of the receipts and expenditnres for the year 1868 will show an excess in the incresse of expenditnres over the incredse of receipts for thet year of $2,439,535 26.

STAMPS AND STAMPED ENVELOPES.

The number of postage stamps issned during the year was 420,896,540 representing	$12,706,220 00
The number of periodical stamps was 150,922, representing	16,348 00
Stamped envelopes, plain, 46,265,750, representing	1,332,862 50
Stamped envelopes, request, $31 814,100, representing	950,726 00
Newspaper wrappers, 3,595,250, representing	71,905 00
The whole number of stamps envelopes and newspaper wrappers was 502,722,566, of the aggregate valns of	$15,078,061 50

Showing an incresse of $1,214,937 50 over last year.

The issne of periodical stemps was discontinned by my predecessor about February 1, 1869.

The number of packages of postage stamps lost in the mails during the year was 22, representing $818; and of stamped envelopes 15, representing $259 50, being much less than the losses from like deliuquencies in 1868.

CONTRACTS.

There were in the service of the Department on the 30th of June, 1869, 7,056 contractors for the transportation of the mails.

Of mail routes in operation there were 8,449, aggregating in length 223,731 miles, in annual transportation 90,723,403 miles, and in annual cost $10,406,501. If the compensation of railway post-office clerks, route agents, local agents, mail messengers, mail route messengers, and baggage-masters in charge of mails, amounting to $1,275,227, be added, the aggregate annual cost will be $11,681,728. This service was divided as follows:

Railroad routes: Length, 39,537 miles; annual transportation, 41,396,284 miles; annual cost, $4,723,680—about 11.41 cents per mile.

Steamboat routes: Length, 20,779 miles; annual transportation, 4,841,011 miles; annuel cost, $774,536—about 17.88 cents per mile.

"Celerity, certainty and security:" Length, 163,415 miles; annual transportation, 44,993,103 miles; annual cost, $4,908,285—about 10.9 cents per mile.

There was an increase over the preceding year in length of routes of 6,803 miles; in annual transportation, 6,499,078 miles; and in cost, $140,445. To the last add increased cost for railway post-office clerks, route, local and other agents, $160,594, and the total incresse of cost will be shown to be $301,039.

The foregoing statements of distances and costs do not include service for "special" offices. There were, at the close of the year, 1,962 of these offices, each with e mail carrier, whose pay from the Department is not allowed to exceed the net postal yield of the office. "Special" routes and their carriers are included in the number of contractors and routes as given ehove.

POST-ROUTE MAPS.

Dnring the past year, the preparation and publication of the series of post-route maps of the United States have been continued, under the supervision of the Topographer of the Department.

The map, in four sheets, of the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, and of the District of Colnmbia, having been completed, copies ere now beiug furnished to such postmasters and other agents of the Department as the interests of the service require.

The map of the State of Maine, which embraces portions of New Hampshire and the Dominion of Canada, and one sheet of the double-sheet map of the States of Ohio and Indiana, ars nearly finished, and will be ready for issue during the coming winter.

The drawings for a double-sheet map of the States of Michigan and Wisconsin have been placed in the hands of the engraver, to be completed next summer. To continue the series as projected, there come next in order the States of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Minnesota.

THROUGH MAILS.

Since the completion of the railroad line to the Pacific, arrangements hove been made to have records kept showing the time occupied in the transit of mails from Washington, New York, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis to Denver City, Salt Lake City, Sacramento City and San Francisco, and back. The appendix contains a copy of the circular giving the necessary instructions to postmasters and others. The records of arrivals on the Atlantic side during the month of October have reached the Department. They show that mails are carried through from San Francisco to Washington in 6 days, 23 hours and 15 minutes; to New York, in 6 days, 15 hours and 20 minutes; to Boston, in 7 days, 4 hours; to Chicago, in 5 days, 7 hours and 30 minutes; to Cincinnati, in 5 days, 23 hours and 30 minutes; and to St. Louis, in 5 days, 1 hour and 30 minutes. The above figures show the time of the shortest trips. The average time was: to Washington, 7 days, 7 hours and 11 minutes; to New York, 7 days, 2 hours and 23 minutes; to Boston, 7 days, 19 hours and 25 minutes; to Chicago, 5 days, 14 hours and 55 minutes; to Cincinnati, 6 days, 8 hours and 32 minutes; and to St. Louis, 5 days, 16 hours and 23 minutes.

RAILWAY POST OFFICES.

On the 30th June last, there were in operstion 37 lines of railway post offices, extending in the aggregate over 7,201 miles of railroad and steamboat lines—being an lucrease of 3 lines and 182 miles of service over the year 1868. The number of clerks employed during the last year was 324, at an annual cost of $384,300. During the previous year, the number of clerks employed was 307, and the amount expended in compensation $329,700. No increase was made during the last year in the twice-daily service, except by interchangeable pouches between the principal post offices and between the several lines. The railway post office, by reason of the additional facilities it affords in mailing important letters up to the moment of the departure of the trains, and in receiving, assorting and distributing the mails during their transit, thus saving many hours, and in some instances days, in the communication between important points, has become an essential port of the service. It is in fact indispensable, and, as the population and wealth of the country shall increase, it will he necessary to extend it to keep pace with the wants and demands of the people.

FOREIGN MAIL SERVICE.

The total number of letters passing between the United States and foreign countries (Canada excepted) during the last year was 12,596,654, of which 6,638,858 were sent from, and 5,957,796 received in, the United States. The increase over the number exchanged in 1868 is 1,468,122. Estimating the nnrsher exchanged with the dominion of Canada, of which no accurate account is reported, at 3,000,000, the whole number of letters exchanged in the mails with foreign counirles exceeded 15,500,000. The total postages on letters exchanged with foreign countries, estimating the postage on letters to and from Canada at $350,000, amounted to $2,014,183 15.

The aggregate amount of postage, inland, sea and foreign, upon the letter correspondence exchanged with Great Britain and other European countries, during the year 1869, was $1,503,773 05, being $202,694 71 less than the postage receipts of the previous fiscal year. The number of letters (single rates) exchanged in the mails with the same countries was 11,428,551, an increase of 1,359,892 over the number exchanged in the previous year. Notwithstanding the recent reductions of postage to all the countries of Europe, except France, smounting in most instances to fifty per cent., the increased correspondence has produced a revenue only twelve per cent. less than that derived from the higher rates of the preceding yeer.

The postages upon letters sent to European countries exceeded the postages upon letters received from Europe in the sum of $44,968 13, the excess of letters sent being abont six per cent. This very small excess of postage on correspondence sent over that on correspondence received is a convincing argument in favor of simplifying our postal arrangements with other countries by dispensing with the present complicated and expensive international postage accounts. This can be readily accomplished by adopting the rnle of compulsory prepayment of postage, and by providing (upon general principle, now well established, that every letter brings a reply) that the postages collected on all international correspondence shall belong wholly to the dispatching office; that no charge whetever shall be made at the office of destinntion in the country wherein the correspondence may be delivered; and that in all cases the dispatching office shall defray the expense of intermediate transmission. The inconsiderable pecuniary disadventages which might result to either post department under the practical working of such a system would be more than compensated by the convenience of the arrangement and the abolition of intricate and vexatious accounts. This principal has nlready been adopted in the conventions with some of the countries with which the United States has direct postal relations, and it is hoped that the post departments of others will also see the propriety of adopting it as a menns of simplifying and promoting internationnl postal exchanges.

The steamship lines employed by this Department in the transportation of the rsils to Great Britain and the Continent of Europe performed four weekly services from New York, a weekly service from Quebec in summer and Portland in winter, and three outward trips from Baltimore, receiving as compensation the sea-postages on the mails conveyed.

The earnings of the respective lines amounted to the sum of $336,207 49, as follows:

The North German Lloyd line, for fifty-two trips from New York to Southampton	$80,432 71
The Cnnard line, for fifty-two trips from New York to Queenstown	71,578 08
The Hamburg-American Packet Company for fifty-two trips to Southampton, &c. (estimating fourth quarter nt $20,000	103,839 10
The Iornan line, for fifty-two trips from New York to Queenstown	74,563 32
The Canadian line, for fifty-two trips to Liverpool	5,750 03
The Baltimore and Liverpool Steamship Company, for three trips from Baltimore to Liverpool	44 25
Making a total of	$336,2..7 49

The cost of the United States transatlantic mail steamship service for the fiscal year 1867 was $551,338 01; and for the year 1868, $421,774 44—the reduced rates of sea-postage established by the present postal convention with Great Britain having been in operation dnring the last six months of the year 1868.

The necessity of some legislation to enconrage the re-establishment of American lines of transatlantic steamers is apparent from the fact thnt, of the many lines of steamships now profitably employed in the carrying trads between this country and Europe, there is not one steamer bearing the American flag. It is humiliating to our netional pride to find not only lint our vast commerce with Europe is monopolized by foreign steamship lines, but that even the mails we send abroad have to he transported under the protection of foreign governments.

A proposition is under consideration for e postal convention establishing a direct exchange of correspondence between the United States and the Argentine Republic.

Preliminary steps have also been taken toward a direct postal arrangement with Denmerk, including Sweden and Norway, with the purpose of reducing the existing postage rates on correspondence exchanged between the United States and those countries.

The report of the Appointment Office shows the following:

FREE DELIVERY.

The free delivery system has been in operation during the year in forty-eight of the principal cities, with the following aggregate resnlts:

Number of lattor-carriers	1,246
Mail letters delivered	80,071,052
Local letters dallvered	18 38·,627
Newspapers delivered	21,954,898
Letters collested	89,865,009
Amount paid carriers, including incidental expenses	$1,183,915 31
Postage on local matter	666,167 42

This shows an increase over last year of—

Letter-carriers	48
Mail letters delivered	15,730,566
Local lattors delivered	4,298,721
Newspapers delivered	5,744,183
Letters collected	26,720,394
Amonet paid carriers, including incidental expenses	$187,980 72
Postage on local matters	190,185 06

The free delivery system, though rapidly improving, has not attained such a degree of efficiency as to command the universal confidence of the public. Much can yet be done to promote the celerity and precision of the collection and delivery of mail matter, and thereby commend it to popular favor. For some time to come, the attention of the Department should be directed to the attainment of more thorough organization and more sat sfactory results in the cities wherein the system has already been established, rather than in seeking its further extension.

Excess of issues over payments		193,935 47

The amount received by postmasters as fees for the issue of orders was $176,190 90. During the previous fiscal year, ended Jnne 30, 1868, the aggregate amount of orders issned was $16,197,858 47; of orders paid and repaid, $16,118,537 03; and of fees, $124,487.

It appears, upon comparison of these snms with the corresponding trausactions of the last fiscal year, as above stated, that there has been an increase over the year 1868 of $8,650,200 46, or of 53 2-5 per cent., in the amount of issues; of $8,535,586 43, or of 53 per cent., in the amount of payments; and of $51,703 90, or of 41¼ per cent., in the amount of fees received. The smaller percentage of increase in the fees, as compared with the issues, is to be attributed to the fact thnt by the act of July 27, 1868, the fees for issning money-orders were diminished. Before that time the fee for an order not exceeding twenty dollers was ten cents, and for an order exceeding twenty dollers twenty-five cents; but by the act last mentioned the fee for an order for one dollar or any sum not exceeding twenty dollars was fixed at ten cents; for an order exceeding twenty dollars and not exceeding thirty dollars, at fifteen cents; for an order exceeding thirty dollars and not exceeding forty dollars, at twenty cents; and for an order exceeding forty dollars, at twenty-five cents. No change was made in the maximum amount for which an order can be issned, which is limited to fifty dollars.

The receipts and expenditures during the last fiscal year, as adjusted and reported by the Auditor, were as follows, viz:

Fees received for money-orders issued		$176,190 90
Amount received for premium on drafts		56 97
		$176,247 87
Commissions to postmasters and allowances for clerk hire	$101,062 19
Allowances for remittances lost in transmissions by mail	5,797 00
Incidental expenses for stationery and fixtures	3,874 81
		110,694 00
Excess of receipts over expenditures, being the amount of profit to the department from money-order business		$65,553 87

During the year, payment of six money-orders was obtained fraudulently hy forgery of the payee's signature, or by means of false pretenses. In four of these cases, the amount of the order was refnnded to the remitter hy the issning postmaster, in compliance with instructions from the Department. In one, the postmaster who had erroneously paid the order was directed to pay a like sum to the true payee. In the remaining case, the person who improperly obtained payment of the order was compelled to pay over the amount thereof to the rightful owner.

I cannot better illustrate the great success and rapid extension of the domestic money-order system than by a presentation of its operations frors its establishment on the 1st November, 1864, to the present time, a sumrsary of which is contained in the following table:

The great and constant increase, from year to year, in the transactions of the money-order system, clearly indicates its utility as a safe, convenient, and expeditious mode of making small remittances, and shows that it is steadily increasing in favor with the public, as practical experience demonstrates its advantages. I regard it as thoroughly established, and recommend its universal use by the people wherever practicable.

Detailed regulations for the execution of the convention of October 12, 1867, for an exchange of postal orders between the United States and Switzerland, were finally agreed upon and signed at Washington July 2, 1869, by the Postmaster-General, under the authority given by the act of July 27, 1868, and at Berne on the 26th July, 1869, by the chief of the federal post department of Switzerland. This first attempt to establish an international money-order system by this department, was put into operation, by mutual agreement on the 1st of September, 1869, and, notwithstanding frequent and considerable fluctuations in the value of currency, it has been conducted without difficulty, and thus far has worked satisfactorily in all its details.

MISCELLANEOUS.

When I accepted at your hands the position of Postmaster-General, I propounded to myself two questions: How can the postal service of the country be made most efficient? and, How can it be relieved from the heavy deficiencies annually charged against it? Knowing it to be your desire that the Department should be restored to a self-sustaining condition as rapidly as a faithful discharge of its duties would permit, I have diligently sought the true answers to the above questions. As far as lay in my power, during my short administration, I have reduced the expenditures and increased the revenues of the Department; but, notwithstanding my efforts, I found myself, at the end of the fiscal year, confronted with a deficit of $5,353,620 80. Though this amount is less than the deficit provided for by appropriations, it is yet large enough to stimulate me to inquire carefully into the causes of such enormous arrears.

The principal causes operating to prevent the Department from becoming self-sustaining are three, to wit:

1st. The depreciation of the paper currency.
2d. Unpaid postages on printed matter.
3d. The franking privilege.

The first of these is temporary, and will, in a short time, it is hoped, cease to operate. While it continues, however, it greatly affects the proportion between the receipts and expenditures of the Department. The truth of this will be admitted when it is stated that the postages are fixed by law, and remain the same nominally, no matter what may be the fluctuations in the value of the currency; while, on the other hand, all contracts made by the Department, except those for railroad transportation, are based on current rates, whatever they may be. Hence, when paper currency is depreciated, the postages are reduced in effect by the exact amount of the depreciation; so that, when gold is quoted at 133¼, the single rate of letter postage is no longer three cents, but, in reality, only two-and-a-quarter cents.

Again, the Department is defrauded out of a large amount of postage on newspapers by parties who, while professing to be sending out papers from known offices of publication to regular and bona fide subscribers, are, in fact, loading the mails with "specimen" papers and mere business circulars, disguised in the form of newspapers. The act of March 3, 1863, and the regulations made in pursuance thereof, require that all such matter, if sworn through the mailing office, shall be sent to the office of delivery, and that the postages, whether charged at newspaper rates or at letter rates by way of fine for fraud, shall be collected by the office of delivery. If not paid for and delivered, it often happens that no other disposition of this matter can be made than to return it to the mailing office for the prosecution of the offender. The double transit thus encouraged is frequently attended with no result, except that the matter in left in the office and ultimately sold for waste paper. For this mischief there is but one adequate remedy, and that is to require prepayment on all printed matter. A due regard to the convenience of the publishers of newspapers would require that postage on newspapers should be charged according to the weight of packages. To accomplish this reform, a considerable reduction on present rates might be conceded by the Department. To make the remedy of prepayment complete, it would be necessary, furthermore, to confer ample power on postmasters at mailing offices to open and inspect suspected packages of newspapers, and to impose upon them, if found to be violated by fraud, full letter postage, to be paid invariably in advance. This summary proceeding should not relieve the offender from liability to prosecution and punishment by the imposition of the fine already provided by law.

THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

The foregoing are evils which, doubtless, ought to be corrected. It is possible, however, for the Department to endure them, and yet retain a fair degree of efficiency. But the remaining cause of complaint has become intolerable, and must be removed, if the Department in to be saved from utter demoralization. The franking privilege has grown to be an abuse so monstrous that it now threatens the very life of the service.

[We regret that lack of space prevents us from publishing in full the very able argument of Mr. Creswell in favor of the abolition of the franking privilege. It conclusively meets every objection which could be urged against such a step, and clearly shows the hopelessness of substantial progress in postal affairs so long as the Department is compelled to bear this most oppressive burden. The following extracts are all that we can give of this portion of the Report:]

It reduces the Departrsent to a state of hopeless dependence, and destroys to a great extent its usefulness. It makes it the pack-horse of every other branch of the public service, and compels it to assume, without a question, whatever burdens may be laid upon its back. Work as steadily and as skillfully as they may, the managers of the Department know that at the end of the year their accounts must show the inevitable deficiency. Is this just? Will this encourage activity and vigilence? Will this promote economy and efficiency? When the Departrsent, with its forty thousand or more employes, has labored to discharge every duty faithfully, has carried its mails ninety-one millions of miles and distributed them according to order among forty millions of people, and, to accomplish this, has fought every inch of its way against frauds which Government itself has licensed, it is at least entitled to a respectful recognition of its services, instead of being consigned to everlasting insolvency.

There is no sound reason for believing that, estimating by weight, the present basis of the postage rates, the proportion of free matter is really less than thirty per centrs, as ascertained by the careful investigations of a committee of the British Parliament; but, even if we adopt the results of the imperfect information attainable in this country, and assume twenty-five per cent. of the ordinary annual expenditures as the just equivalent for the unpaid services of the Post-Office Department, it will appear that the Government is bound in honor and justice to appropriate $5,000,000, instead of $700,000, for this service.

But the most potential reason of all for the abolition of the franking privilege is found in the incurable abuses and frauds which seem to be inseparable frors its exercise. When the nursber of persons who are clothed with the franking privilege, and of judges who are expected to pass upon the genuineness of franks, is considered, the opportunity for boundless frands will appear to be almost infinite. The following statement, made up from official sources, will show how far the privilege is extended under existing laws:

Statement of Officials Exercising the Franking Privilege.

President of the United States and his secretary	2
Vice Presidsat	1
Members of the Cabinet	7
United States Senators	74
Members of Congress	241
Delegates in Congress	5
Secretary of Senate and Clerk of House of Representatives	2
Assistant Secretaries, chief clark etc., State Departmast	4
Assistant Attorney-General and chief clerk	2
Assistant Secretary, Commissioners chief clerk, etc., Interior Department	13
Chiefs of bureaus, chief clerk, etc., of Navy Department	17
Chiefs of bureaus, chief clerk, etc., of War Department	21
Assistant Secretaries, chief clerks, etc., of the Treasury Department	42
Assistant Postmasters-General, superintendents of foreign mails and money order system, and chief clerks Post-Office Department	9
	440
Add internal revenne officers (assessors and assistant collectors and deputies)	4,115
Postmasters on 1st November, 1869	27,378
Total	31,933

In this statement alone is an army of 31,933, who, generally speaking, load the mails at will with whatever matter they please. Some of them, to be sure, are granted only a limited privilege, yet, practically, the restrictions are no longer operative. To these should be added the countless host who address communications to members of Congress, delegates, the Clerk of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of the Senate, heads of departments, heads of bureaus, chief clerks, and all others authorized to frank official matter. How is it possible that any checks whatever can be imposed and enforced against a privilege so widely extended?

It has been well said that "there is no middle ground between boundless franking and no franking." The truth of this observation will be perfectly manifest to all who will take the trouble to inquire into the subject. With the appliences now as the command of the Department, or that can be devised in its interest, it would be a sheer impossibility to eliminate fraud from the exercise of the franking privilege. The privilege itself is the fruitful mother of frands, and cannot be reformed. Estimating the frands and evasions perpetrated under cover of this system to be equal in amount to the postages upon matter bearing genuine signatures (and this is no exaggeration), the total expense is swelled to an amount equal to the entire deficit of the Department for the last fiscal year. Certainly, these stupendous frands should be prevented; and, as they cannot be separated from the practice of the system, the only remedy is to abolish the system itself.

How is it possible for the Department to escape from the slough into which it has been cast, so long as Government fastens inextricably about its neck an ever-increasing weight? Under the frightful burden imposed by the franking privilege, no further reforms can ever be made in the way of reducing domestic postages. An appalling deficit will be a perpetual bar to all progress—all substantial improvement.

In England, the postal service was rescued from pitiable imbecility and inefficiency by the illustrious Rowland Hill and his associates, in 1839; but it was necessary first to destroy this badge of subservience to rank and class, although in that country it was limited both in the nursber of privileged persons and in the number of letters each could frank per day. So here, as the initial step to reform, I earnestly urge the total abolition of the franking privilege.

It is not proposed or desired that Government officials should be personally taxed for the transmission of their public correspondence. It is asked, on the other hand, that every Department, every member of Congress, and every other public officer, shall have a liberal allowance of stamps for postages, subject to a proper accountability, and that the sum necessary therefor shall be appropriated out of the general treasury.

THE PENAL LAWS.

Regarding the present as a favorable opportunity, I call the attention of Congress to the penal laws providing for the punishment of offences against the postal service. The penalties prescribed are in many cases too severe, and, by reason of their apparent harshness, have tended to create a sympathy in the minds of jurors and others in behalf of this class of offenders. Experience has showo thet the certainty of punishment, more than its severity, deters from crime. I recommend that the terms of imprisonment in most cases be shortened and graduated, with a more careful regard to the nature and character of the offences which the framers of the laws designed to punish and prevent.

A reorganization of the Department has become a necessity. The recommendation of my predecessor in that regard is cordially approved.

It would be unjust to close this report without making a proper recognition of the important services of the heads of the respective bureaus of the Department, including the superintendents of foreign mails and of the money-order office. They are all gentlemen of singular fitness for their several positions. In all things they have come up to the full measure of my expectations, and I esteem myself most fortunate in having secured their valuable aid. In consideration of the ability, integrity, industry and zeal they have continually exhibited, I earnestly recommend such an increase in their salaries as will afford them the means of a respectable livelihood, their present compensation being inadequate for that purpose.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

The President.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, August 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

Postmaster-General.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, Nov. 29, 1869.

Sir—I inclose an important notice to Postmasters and the public, respecting the postage chargeable on correspondence to and from France on and after the 1st of January next, and request that you will please cause the same to be published in the December number of THE UNITED STATES MAIL.

I am, very respectfully, your obt. servant,

JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Supt. Foreign Mails.

J. GAYLER, Esq.,
Editor "U. S. Mail."

Important Notice to Postmasters and the Public.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, Nov. 30, 1869.

On and after January 1, 1870, the exchange of mails between the United States and France will cease, in consequence of the abrogation of the present Postal Convention between the two countries, to take effect on that date.

The correspondence addressed to France or received from France on and after the 1st of January next by steamships or other vessels running direct between the two countries, will therefore be subject to the following rates of United States postage, to be prepaid by stamps at the office of mailing no matter sent, and collected at the office of delivery on matter received:

Letters, 10 cents per single rate of half an ounce or under;

Newspapers, 2 cents each; and Book Packets, and Samples of Merchandise, 4 cents per each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Letters for France may also be sent from the United States in the ordinary open mail to England without prepayment of postage. But printed matter and samples cannot, under existing regulations, be so sent.

Inasmuch as all direct postal relations between the Post Departments of the United States and France will cease on the 1st of January next, it will not be practicable to forward correspondence after that date to any foreign country or place "by French mail." The rates of postage "by French mail," as stated in "Table of Postages to Foreign Countries," will, therefore, be inoperative after 31st December proximo.

By order of the Postmaster-General.

JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Supt. Foreign Mails.

Resignation of Mr. Earle.

On Nov. 30th, GEORGE EARLE, Esq., who since March last has most acceptably filled the position of First Assistant Postmaster General, resigned that office to resume the practice of the law. He is succeeded by JOHN M. MARSHALL, Esq., of New Jersey.

Sundry Post-office Matters.

Our first letter contains a very pertinent request—"to give a good article on the reasons why persons should not send money [through the mails] without money-order or registry." We might embody our reply in the sentence—For the same reason that a person should not or would not leave a pocket-book lying around loose in a bar-room, and that is—because everybody who may have access to it may not be honest, or, if honest, may not be able to resist temptation to dishonesty. The practice of putting money in ordinary letters is objectionable, not only because it is necessarily unsafe, as you cannot tell into whose hands they will fall, but because it is a temptation to many that cannot resist it, and who, if not so tempted, would continue honest. We do not think it advisable to go further into the matter at present, except to say, Do not, unless through most imperative necessity, inclose money in ordinary letters; if you cannot send money-orders, register your money letters—every postmaster is obliged to register letters on demand. The same correspondent put some questions on the transfer of mails at stations, to which, however, we cannot reply, because local arrangements enter into the question. We refer him to the Second Assistant Postmaster-General. . . . . Our next letter recommends alcohol for cleaning marking stamps. We have no doubt it would be very effectual, but not so cheap as benzine. . . . . Another contains a complaint of the sheets of postage-stamps adhering to each other, and suggests that oiled paper be laid between them, or they be put on rollers. As comparatively but few sheets out of the thousands used are not easily separated, we think the remedy would be too expensive, although the use of oiled paper has certain valuable features. . . . . Our next contains a plan for prepayment of postage on printed matter at the mailing office. The desire for the prepayment of postage on printed matter has often been expressed in our columns and in letters from our subscribers, but very few plans have been offered to us. The plan before us is good and feasible for small offices, but would be very difficult at large offices like the New York office. For ourselves, we are something like the cook who gave a recipe for cooking hare—first catch your hare. We would first have a law that prepayment at the mailing office on all matter should be required, and then would be time enough to decide on the plan. . . . . Our next is an inquiry why the postmasters at New York and Philadelphia put postage-stamps on their money-order and registered-business letters. This question has been answered before in the MAIL, but we repeat the answer here. The Act of March 1, 1869, requires all franks to be written by the person franking. The postmasters at the cities named could not possibly frank all the envelopes required, and hence postage-stamps are used for some of their official correspondence. . . . . It is a celebrated publishing house in Hartford, Conn., that writes as follows: "Permit us to say that we have oftentimes found it [i. e., THE UNITED STATES MAIL] to be worth ten times its cost when we have been befogged."

COMMUNICATIONS.

P. O. INSCRIBUS, Oct. 1869.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL—I closed my last letter with expressing my satisfaction at the promised results of my first visit as a self-constituted special agent; and I assure you it was with no less satisfaction that I leaped into my buggy and gave the rein to my colt for a call on the postmaster at the office next on the route, some six miles distant. The road for about four miles was nearly level, and in excellent condition for travel; my colt seemed to sympathize with me in an evident very deep satisfaction with himself. He could not, indeed, feel that he had done a good deed as I had done, but in his quick, elastic step, disdaining, almost, to touch the earth with his hoofs, his curving neck and the playful motion of his ears and occasional toss of the head he showed a (horse) mind well at ease with itself. I had had this horse but a few weeks, though I had known him for three or four years, having watched his growth and manners from colthood, and early discerning that he "was to the manner born," had determined to become his owner if ever opportunity offered. He is already a great favorite with myself and my assistants, whom I generally allow to "air themselves" at least once a week, behind whatever horse I own at the time. It is an old time custom to name horses as well as men, older than the good old days of the Mayflower and the Puritans, than that "merrie England" of which we so often hear, or the days of the Conqueror who turned Saxon society upside down. Back as far as the great Alexander, who wept that there was no other world to conquer (and who, by the way, with all due deference to his soldierly acquirements and nature, would, measured by his known deeds, have made a quite respectable Brigadier under our own great "Captain"), horses were named, for every school child has heard of the famous Bucephalus whom none could mount but the said Alexander; he, discovering that the horse was frightened at his shadow—how shadows at the present day frighten men as well as horses—led him into the shade and leaped upon his back, to the admiration and wonder of his attendants and no small credit to himself. Horses, too, often become famous as do men, and like men, some in the reflected light of others, some through their own inherent good or bad qualities. Bucephalus whom I have mentioned, though not without personal merit, owes his fame rather to his owner than himself. So, too, of Saladin, the famous horse of one of the crusader kings of England—Richard the First, I believe—but Eclipse and Fashion and others who have left the scenes of their horsely triumphs have a fame depending wholly on themselves; how many of the present day know or care for the name of the owner of Eclipse. What a fame, too, has Dexter made for himself in our own time, so great, indeed, that although by the stern realities of the law, his ownership is vested in but one man, yet, by a pleasant fiction he is public property, and his "feats of legs" bring almost as much pleasure and satisfaction to their fictional owners as they do to his owner in law. But you say what has the names of horses to do with postal investigations? I answer, nothing. And it is well the query brought me back to the point I had started to elucidate—the choosing of a name for my horse—for I had always followed the good old custom, but somehow I had not yet decided on a name for this one. I rather favored "Morgan." My partner in the domestic arrangements was inclined to Dick, being an old family name on the homestead, at a time when old Dick bore her on his back through the deep snows of a New England winter, to and from the "common school," or drew her and her rollicking companions in an old farm wagon to and from the "country store" when the "men were too busy" to attend to the purchases. Our "first assistant," a sprightly boy of twelve, pleaded for Prancer while our "second," whose assistance chiefly consisted in making a great deal of amusement and scattering things, from hot teapots to kindling wood, most promiscuously about, lisped for Juthbie. My official "first assistant" suggested "Grant," while the second wanted "Creswell." Amid these many suggestions my horse had gone unnamed for weeks, and known only by the designation of "the pony."

But now, as the object of my ride presented itself to me in all its various phases and connections, and I reflected on some of the remarkable characteristics of your lamented predecessor, and then noticed how gaily, yet firmly, my horse carried himself on that bright morning, and knew that he would probably take me frequently on such excursions, I thought of a fitting name, and I determined, in spite of domestic partners or domestic or official assistants, that my horse should be named "Sharp." With a chirrup, and an utterance of the name aloud, by way of initiation, I gave Sharp the rein for a half-mile stretch over a piece of peculiarly excellent road to which I had by this time come.

The lumbering old stage that carried the mail, and was dragged along at the varying rate of two to five miles an hour, depending on the condition of the roads and the driver, by a pair of horses that suggested the doubt whether they were frames just set up for horses in the course of construction, or whether they were horses in a course of destruction, in which the destructive process was so far completed as to leave their frames exposed to view, had had considerable start of me in point of time; and as I had driven quite slowly on first resuming my ride, it was just entering the village, when "Sharp's" rapid flinging of his legs brought me in sight of it. The difference in speed, between "Uncle Sam's" certainty, celerity, and security," and my "private enterprise," enabled me to reach the door of the post office just as the driver flung the mail pouch from his box to the ground, where it landed safely enough, but by some perversity of nature, the mouth, with the lock, had first to pass through a small but not respectable, puddle of water. I had a curiosity to see how long the pouch would lie there, so consumed as much time as possible in fastening my horse and re-adjusting the harness; probably five minutes thus passed, when a non de script, but not uncommon, specimen of the order man, shuffled out of the door of the store where the office was kept, shuffled along to the pouch, shuffled his hand into the cleaner strap at the bottom, and then shuffled back again, dragging the pouch after him. I followed him into the store. For some reason, which I did not care to discover, there were not the usual number of loungers waiting for the mail; but what there were evidently did not belong to the "working" classes, whatever might have been their connection with the "poorer." The store and office were in charge of a young man I recognized as having been, some years before, a child, residing with his father near me, and whom I had known to have left his home about two years ago at the age of seventeen or eighteen to "seek his fortune" in your great city. I had lost sight of him and did not know whether or not he was successful in his city enterprises, till I saw him here before me, and at once perceived that whatever else was the result of his city life, he had graduated in the school of bejeweled snobbery, and learned to despise homespun, and to feel that "store clothes" for every-day wear was his inherent, constitutional right. He was too dainty to handle the mail pouch himself, and so he tossed the key to his unsworn, unkempt and waiting assistants, one of whom, after some scrambling among them, obtained possession of it, and while he proceeded to open the lock, another seized the strap ready to draw it from the staples, a third the loop at the bottom to empty the pouch, which a fourth stood ready to pounce upon the contents, which were to be poured upon the floor, a not particularly clean one, by the way. The pouch emptied and thrown aside, the unsworn assistants proceeded to sort out the matter for that office, which they handed to the elegantly gotten-up clerk waiting to receive it, not, however, before appropriating, or, perhaps, I should say, delivering to themselves sundry papers and a couple of letters, but whether or not they were delivered to the wrong person is a question in my mind. The remainder was hurriedly gathered up and thrown into the pouch, which was locked and then taken to the door to await the stage-driver's convenience. I had noticed when the pouch was emptied that a small note had slipped away from the bulk of the contents and became half hidden by a piece of wrapping-paper that lay crumpled on the floor. Doubtful of its fate I kept my eye upon it, and was not in the least surprised to find that no notice was taken of it in replacing the matter in the pouch, and it might have shared the fate of the letter for Mrs. Brown, and been hidden for weeks behind a nail keg or box of soap, but for me. I did not call the clerk's attention to it, however, till the stage had taken away the mail. I probably should have had the letter forwarded at once, but in the delay I saw so good an opportunity for a lesson to the lazy clerk that I could not let it pass. Engaging in conversation with him first on general matters, during which I learned that, though his father was owner of the store, he was seldom in attendance, being engaged with a saw and grist-mill some five miles away, I came at length to postal affairs. "By the way," I said, "I am somewhat surprised to find that the business of this store and post office are so extensive as to require the aid of four clerks besides yourself." "Oh! no, sir," he replied; "we have no other clerks than myself, and there is not enough to employ me steadily." "Oh, indeed," I answered, "I supposed the four gentlemen I saw opening the mail were sworn clerks of the Department. Do you let any one or more that happens to be present perform the duties which you alone should do, for I presume you are the sworn clerk to attend to the post office in your father's absence?" "Why, yes, sir; I did not think there was any harm in it, and it is generally such dirty work that I am glad to get rid of it." "But how faithfully and properly do you think the duties are performed by your volunteer assistants? Do you never have complaints of letters failing to reach their destination?" "Oh, yes, sir, quite frequently; but we never pay any attention to them, or some people will grow at anything, you know."

"And sometimes they growl for good cause," I replied, "as no doubt the young lady would to whom this letter I hold in my hand is addressed;" and I read to him the address. "Why," said he, "where did you get that letter?" "I picked it off the floor, where your assistants left it a few moments ago. Probably you would have found it and forwarded it by the next mail, probably not. At any rate, the young lady will no doubt inquire for it, and failing to receive it, will make another complaint of the inefficiency of the mails." I then told him of my experience as narrated in my last letter, and concluded my interview by advising him not to be above his business, and by no means to allow any one not duly authorized to have anything to do with the mails, referring him to Sections 24 and 25 of the Regulations of 1866. Though finding much to condemn in this office, I was glad to see that the records of registered matter were correctly and even neatly kept.

Resuming my seat in my buggy, I gave "Sharp" the rein and was soon well on my way to the next office. NICOTINUS.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Papers in Packages Delivered by Postmasters.—G. B. M., S——, Mich.—Where papers that arrive at a post office in a package to one address are delivered by the postmaster to individual subscribers, postage should be charged on each paper at the quarterly rates. Sec. 211, Reg. 1866.

Official Envelopes.—L. B. C., L——, Pa.—All offices are not entitled to all the different kinds of official envelopes, but such as they are entitled to are furnished by the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, whom you should address on the subject.

Distributing Letters on the Cars, etc.—J. S. M., P—— H——, Cal.—It is not always practicable to reply to questions on mailing or distributing letters on the cars, as so much depends upon local arrangements and the character of the service on the route. But all railway postal cars are, in practice, distributing offices, and letters may be mailed to them the same as to distributing offices. The ordinary mail cars in charge of route agents are more like separating offices; but letters may be sent to them for separation, if by so doing they will reach their destinations sooner than by sending them to a distributing office. You had better apply to the Second Assistant Postmaster General for instructions. 2. The same remarks apply to registered letters. Postmasters should be careful to get the receipts as required by the registration regulations.

Delivering Letters.—C. M. L., A—— R——, S. C.—A route agent has no right to deliver from his car letters to the parties addressed; nor should letters be delivered from any other post office than that to which they are addressed, except in case of discontinued offices. Sec. 63, Reg. 1866.

Publishers' Exchanges.—C. C. G., L——, Ill.—The privilege of publishers to exchange is not limited by the frequency of publication nor the size nor value of their publications. A penny monthly may exchange free with a ten-dollar daily. The only limits are the weight and one copy of each publication. Sec. 258, Laws 1865.

Withdrawing Letters Written by a Minor.—O. R. G., W—— O——, Iowa.—When minor children are dependent upon their parents for support and maintenance, the parents should control the correspondence; but postmasters should exercise a sound discretion in such cases, and be fully satisfied that such children are dependent on the parents. Section 65 of Regulations of 1866 should be faithfully complied with.

Refunding Postage.—F. S. E., L——, Mass.—As the law does not allow of the payment of quarterly postage for less than one quarter, it follows that a postmaster having collected postage for a quarter has no right to refund a proportional part on the discontinuance of the arrival of the matter on which it was paid. Where postage, however, has been paid for more than a quarter, the amount beyond any quarter in which papers have been received may be refunded. If you collect postage for more than one quarter, you should, nevertheless, report and return the same quarterly. Sec. 311, Reg. 1866. A great many postmasters do not seem to be aware of this section.

Franking.—W. S. C., M—— H——, O.—Soldiers of the late war are not entitled to franking privilege, but the Adjutant-Generals of the several States and Territories may frank testimonials, etc., awarded by said States and Territories, to soldiers in late war.

County Papers.—E. E., E——, O.—By a late decision, newspapers of which only one side is printed in the county where the subscriber resides, may be forwarded free through the mails to such subscriber. . . . . I. H. D., B——, Me.—If the paper is edited and published in the county and is a bona fide county paper, we should judge, under the above decision, that it may pass through the mails free, although not printed in the county.

Credit for Burned Stamps.—C. C. D., S——, Cal.—We refer you to Section 181, Regulations of 1866, for instructions to obtain credit for burned stamps.

Date of Postmark on Letters.—H. S., H——, N. Y.—Letters should bear the postmark and the date on which the mail containing them is actually sent off, although they may have been made up a previous day. Sec. 91, Reg. 1866.

Unpaid Letters.—E. C. T., C—— C——, Mass., and J. D. W., G——, N. C.—Unpaid letters requiring prepayment, should be marked "Held for Postage," and sent to the Dead-Letter Office. The instruction in the edition of the Post-Office Directory of 1867, to forward unpaid matter and charge double rates, is incorrect and was printed there by mistake, that provision of the law having been repealed. A correction appeared in the MAIL for May, 1868, Section 150, Regulations of 1866, is correct.

Forwarding Foreign Letters, etc.—C. R. T., G—— B——, Wis., and A. C., S—— S——, Pa.—1. All prepaid letters, whether foreign or domestic, or whether addressed to the care of any one, may be forwarded free at the request of the party addressed. 2. According to a late decision, papers may be forwarded and the postage collected on delivery. Though this decision does not mention circulars, we have no doubt but that it applies as well to them as to papers.

Registration.—U. W. R., B—— C——, Pa.—We cannot give any plainer general instructions for registering than those furnished by the Department. If you will inform us what parts or sections you do not understand we will try to explain them. . . . . O. B., C——, N. Y.—Registered package envelopes should be addressed to the postmaster at the office to which sent, and without the initials D. P. O., if the office is a distributing office. . . . . J. B., S—— J——, Mo.—A postal clerk is required to give an original receipt for registered letters only to the party from whom he receives them; he should have an entry in his record, from which he can at any time give a duplicate receipt if the original should be lost, and on the demand of a special agent a copy of the original receipt. The clerk does not become any more responsible on account of such copy, for he should have a receipt from the party to whom he transfers the registered matter. With regard to postal clerks paying for printing, we cannot express our opinion, because we do not clearly understand the question, as the Department furnishes all the blanks and books necessary.

Postage.—A. R., I——, Pa.—THE U. S. MAIL is chargeable with postage the same as any other paper. . . . . E. E. T., M——, Mass.—Proof sheets, not so wrapped that they may be examined without destroying the wrapper, are chargeable with letter postage. Sec. 89, Reg. 1866. . . . . J. S., P——, Ill.—Charts that are printed may be sent at the same rate of postage as maps and prints. Sec. 37, Reg. 1866. . . . . J. B. M., B——, Pa.—Book manuscripts are chargeable with postage at the rates for miscellaneous matter, but manuscript for newspapers is chargeable at letter rates. ..... R. W. H. B., M——, Iowa.—All mail matter deposited in a post office for delivery is chargeable with postage, except weekly newspapers published in the county where the subscriber resides, and matter lawfully franked ....L. D., C——, Me. —Blanks of whatever kind, filled in with manuscript writing, are chargeable with letter postage.....H. B. J., H——, Wis.—We have noticed the matter of postage on seeds in the last two numbers of the MAIL. Seeds, put up in boxes and securely wrapped and tied, may be sent at miscellaneous rates, but if they are sealed against inspection, letter rates should be charged. Sec. 255, Laws 1865.....T. C., R—— F——, Ill.—Samples of mittens of no intrinsic value but as samples, may be sent at miscellaneous rates.....C. A. F.—Cuttings of natural flowers are chargeable with the same postage as other cuttings, but a bouquet, or flowers for a bouquet, can hardly be called cuttings. The distinction, however, depends on individual cases, which, of course, we cannot decide.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland, or to or from the North German Union (including Austria and its States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, are charged to with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England. In the case of such letters arving in the United States, the fine is five cents on each letter. This is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersine, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Lehuan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE. — Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hercafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must he made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuence of the provisions of a resolntion of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hemburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to he collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The emount to be collected in Unitad States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchenge Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain nnchangcd, and, when prepald, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—-papers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, s or other printed papers, (including maps, ı, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, graphs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when anbscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene hooks, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rnle excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly he considered as heving on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 onnces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 onnces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may he enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

VOL. X., NO. 4. NEW YORK, JANUARY, 1870. WHOLE NO. 112.

Down Among the Dead Letters.

Strangers visiting Washington and admiring the style and architecture of the General Post-office building, would never know that there are a number of ladies seated behind the plate-glass of the second-story windows. Indeed, few people residing in the Capital are really aware in what part of the building those female clerks are stowed away. I had passed on every side of the building—morning, noon and night—but never had seen anybody that looked like a "female clerk," till I found myself of their number one morning; and then I discovered the right entrance to the Dead Letter Office. It is on F street, so close to the Ladies' Delivery that any person entering here would be supposed to be inquiring for a letter at that delivery. There is another entrance on E street, but it is not much patronized by the ladies until after fifteen minutes past nine o'clock; for punctually at that time, the door-keeper is instructed to lock the ladies' door on F. street, and those who are tardy are compelled to go up the gentlemen's staircase or pass in at the large public entrance on E street. Crowds of visitors walk through the building, day after day, but not one of the ladies employed here do they see, unless they request to be shown, the rooms of the female employes.

In this Department, working hours are from nine o'clock in the morning till three o'clock o'clock in the afternoon. Ladies are not allowed to leave the office for lunch, nor do they waste much time in discussing the lunch they may have brought, as it is only in consideration of their industry and close application that they are allowed to leave the office at three o'clock instead of four.

This Dead Letter Office is one of the most complicated pieces of machinery in the "Ship of State." I will try to explain and elucidate as much of it as came under my observation. Letters left "uncalled for" at the different post offices throughout the country are sent to the Dead Letter Office, after a certain length of time. Letters not prepaid, or short-paid, through neglect or ignorance of the writer, also find their way here; and so do foreign letters, from all parts of Europe, which have been prepaid only in part, and therefore come here, instead of reaching their destination. Sometimes mails are robbed and the mail-bags hidden or thrown away, but are afterward searched for, and their remaining contents brought to this office. Then again, a vessel at sea, homeward-bound, brings letters from ships meeting it, of sailors and passengers, who send their letters in firm faith that they will reach their anxious friends at home; but if our Government happens to have no treaty or contract with that particular Government to which the writer belongs, of course the letters cannot be forwarded, but are laid at rest here. These letters are carefully preserved for a number of years. They are sometimes called for, and found, a long, long time after they were written; in fact, only "dead" letters are destroyed.

Though I wish to speak more particularly of the duties and labor performed by the ladies employed in this Department, I must begin by saying that all letters pass through the hands of, and are opened by, a number of gentlemen—clerks in the Department—whose room is on the ground-floor of the building. A great number of letters contain money, valuable papers and postage stamps. These are sent to the Superintendent's room. Letters without contents are folded, with the envelope laid inside the letter, tied in bundles and sent up-stairs for directing. Money, drafts and postage-stamps, however, are not the only articles considered "mailable matter" by the public. One day I looked over a box filled with such matter, taken from dead letters and parcels in the opening room, and found in it one half-worn gaiter-boot, two hair-nets, a rag doll-baby minus the head and one foot, a set of cheap jewelry, a small-sized frying-pan, two ambrotypes, one pair of white kid gloves, a nursing-bottle, a tooth-brush a boot-jack, three yards of lace, a box of Ayor's pills, a bunch of keys, six nutmegs, a toddy-stick, and no end of dress samples. This matter is allowed to accumulate for three months, and is then sold at auction; but a register is so carefully kept, that the person mailing the doll-baby without prepaying can follow its progress from the little country town where it was mailed to the end of its career under the hammer at the Dead Letter Office, and here can claim the amount it brought at auction.

Every clerk, male or female, has his or her letter, from A to Z, and beginning again with AA, when the alphabet "runs out." Before the ladies take their places at the desk in the morning, the messenger has already placed there the number of envelopes each lady is expected to direct in the course of the day; and large baskets filled with bundles of letters, sent up from the opening room (the bundles marked with the letter of the clerk through whose hands they have passed) are brought into the rooms. The envelopes are stamped in one corner with the lady's letter, in red; so that the ladies are spoken of, by the Superintendent or the messengers, as Miss A, B, C, D—not as Miss Miller, or Mrs. Smith. Fifty of these envelopes are contained in one package, so that it is easy to calculate whether any of them are wasted by misdirecting or blotting. The work looks simple enough when you see a number of ladies seated at their desks, writing addresses on envelopes, with the greatest apparent ease. "And then," as a gushing young lady said to me one day, "how romantic it must be to listen to the outpourings of love and affection that these letters must contain in many cases and the dark secrets that others disclose." She thought it a rather cruel restraint when I told her we were only allowed to read only so much of a letter as was necessary to discover the name of the writer, and to read no part of it if the name was signed clearly and distinctly at the end. Let the lady reader pause a moment and ask herself, "Do I sign my letters so that one of these clerks could return them from the Dead Letter Office without going over the whole of their contents?" By the time you have finished reading this paper, I hope you will have formed the resolution to sign your name "in full," and just as it is, to every letter you send by the mail. Don't sign your name "Suida" when it is really Sarah Jones" in full;" and if you will call your father's brick-house on Third street "Pine Grove," because there are two dry pine-trees in the front yard, don't neglect to add "No. 24 Third street, Cincinnati, Ohio." The greater number of letters passing through this office are badly written and uninteresting; many of them so perfectly unintelligible that no human being can read or return them; not that the greater portion of our community are uneducated or unintelligent people, but that they are either reckless or careless. Letters directed with any kind of common sense are most always sure of reaching their destination without visiting the Dead Letter Office. Not only do people, in a number of cases, neglect to prepay their letters, but frequently letters without direction or address of any kind are dropped into the letter-boxes. In writing to individuals residing in the same city with them, people think it is necessary only to mention the name of the individual; the "post-office man" is expected to know that the letter is not to go out of the city. The post-office people are, if not omniscient, at least very obliging. I have found a letter directed to "Carlton in America," and the letter had been forwarded to, and here the post-mark of, every Carrollton in the United States before it was sent here.

The work of the ladies falls under two heads: "Common," and "Special." We will get the best idea of what "Common" means, in contradistinction to "Special," by watching Miss A on "Common" work this morning. Taking one of the bundles of letters from the basket, she opens it and takes up the top letter; spreading it on the desk, she finds the envelope inside; it is directed to "William Smith, Philadelphia, Penn.," and the words "uncalled for," stamped on the envelope, show why it was sent here. Now, the signature is to be looked for: it is here—"John Jones;" next, where was it dated?—Somerville, Ohio,' but does the post-mark on the envelope correspond with that? Yes, it is post-marked from where it was dated; so "John Jones" will receive his letter back again: his friend, "W. Smith," may have left Philadelphia, or may have died. "John Jones'" letter is returned to him in a coarse, brown, "P. O. D." envelope, stamped with the letter A in one corner, and he pays three cents for the privilege of knowing that his friend "Smith" never received his letter. The next is a delicate pink affair, dated, "White Rose Bower"—signed, "Ella;" "only this and nothing more;" so the letter is hopelessly dead, and thrown into the paper basket at Miss A's side. The epistle following this is signed, "Henry Foster,' and could be returned if it had not been dated at "White Hall" and postmarked "Harrisburg." On looking over the Post-office Directory we may or may not find a White Hall in Pennsylvania, but there is nothing in the letter to show whether "Henry Foster's" home is in Harrisburg or White Hall; consequently that letter is dead, too. Here is one, signed plainly and legibly, but the writer has omitted to date it from any particular place. From the tone of the letter it is plainly to be seen that he lives where the letter was mailed—but where was it mailed? The post-mark on the envelope is so indistinct that any lady not employed in the Dead Letter Office would throw it aside as "unreadable;" but ladies here learn to decipher what to ordinary mortals would be hieroglyphic or simply a blank. After consulting the pages of the Post-office Directory beside her, Miss A passes the envelope to Miss B. "Can you suggest any post office in Indiana beginning with M, ending with L, with about four letters between?" Miss B scrutinizes the envelope closely. "The post-mark is not from Ind. (Indiana), it is from Ioa." (Iowa), is her decision. Misses C, D and E, at work in the same room, differ in opinion, and at last Miss A steps across the hall to the room of the lady superintendent, where a "blue book" is kept, and with the assistance of this lady and the book, Miss A discovers the place in Indiana, directs the letter, and continues her work. When she has directed fifty letters she ties them (with both envelopes—the "P. O. D." and original one—inside each letter) carefully together, and the messenger carries them into the folding-room, where other ladies, employed in this branch, fold and seal them. Of these "Common" letters every lady is required to direct from two hundred to three hundred a day—a task by no means easy to accomplish.

"Special" work is generally disliked by the ladies, and is of a somewhat "mixed" character. Letters held for postage—consequently not "dead"—come under this head. They, too, are sent back to the writer, if the signature can be found, and the place from which they are dated corresponds with the post-mark; if not, they are assorted according to letter and put away into "pigeon-holes" marked with the letter corresponding. Foreign letters, such as I spoke of before, come under this head too. Then there are official letters—in relation to military and judicial matters—short paid, and therefore brought before this tribunal. These require minute attention, as three or four documents are inclosed in one envelope sometimes, making it difficult to discover who is the proper person to return them to. Again, there are letters with postage-stamps to be returned, and money letters containing not over one dollar; these, with larger amounts, are directed in the superintendent's room. Ladies directing stamp and money letters keep account of them in a book, submitted, together with the letters, to the superintendent, at the close of office hours, every day. Money letters are marked with red stars, stamp letters with blue. Stamps taken from dead letters are destroyed by the proper authorities. Then there is copying to do—orders and circulars, rules and regulations to be transmitted to the different local post offices, and translations to be made of communications received from foreign post departments. All this is "Special" work. A large proportion of the letters passing through the office are German letters—some French, Italian, Norwegian and Spanish; but two German clerks are constantly employed, while one clerk can easily attend to the letters of all the other different nationalities together.

Sometimes it comes to pass that the Superintendent visits one room or the other, with a number of letters in his hand; these have been misdirected or badly written. The red letter stamped on each letter guides him to the desk of the lady who has directed it; and very sensitive is each and every lady to the slightest reproach or reprimand received, because of the universal kindness and respect with which they are treated by all the officials with whom they come in contact.

If the task of poring over these epistles of all kinds, day after day, is, on the whole, tiresome and wearing, there are certainly many incidents to relieve the tedium of the occupation. Incidents, I say; letters, I should say. The deep respect we entertain for a well-known army officer was justified to me by the insight his own letters gave me into his character. It is against the rules of the Post office Department to read any part of a letter, unless it is necessary to do so in order to discover the correct address of the writer; but, as the General's handwriting is a little hasty and peculiar, and his military honors and titles were not appended to these letters I speak of, it was natural that they should be read by the clerks, in order to ascertain whether they could be returned to the place they were written from. One of these letters had been written to an old lady (I judged so from the fact of his inquiring about her son and grandchildren), somewhere in the South, who, it appeared, had entertained the General at her house one day during the war, when the General was very much in want of a dinner to eat. He had not forgotten her kindness and hospitality, though it was now after the close of the war; but the old lady had probably removed from the little village to which the letter was directed, or, perhaps, she had died; so the letter came into our hands, and was returned to the General. Another was to an old friend of the General's. They had played together as boys, perhaps, but his friend had not risen to fame and fortune, like himself; he was giving words to his deep sympathy with a misfortune or bereavement that had befallen his friend—sympathy expressed with such tender, true feeling, that we felt as though it were another bereavement that he should have lost this letter of the General's.

The remark was often made among us that the Dead Letter Office afforded the very best opportunities for making collections of autographs of celebrated people—only the authorities could not be made to see it in that light. It was always with a sigh of regret I must confess, that letters signed by such names as Bancroft, Whittier, Beecher, Grant, Greeley, were returned to their rightful owners. The most interesting accounts of foreign travel were sometimes contained in the dead letters—accounts more interesting than any book ever published. These were, as a general thing, written by ladies—and that sealed their doom. Gentlemen writing letters almost always sign their full name; but a lady will write a dozen pages, telling her friends all about the Louvre and the Tuileries, the Escurial and London Tower, in one long letter, and then sign Kate, or Lillie, at the end, thus precluding all possibility of having her letter returned, though we know from it that she has returned to her home in Boston. It is almost incredible what a large number of letters passing through our hands are "finished off" by that classically beautiful verse—"My pen is bad, my ink is pale; my love for you will never fail"—and it is impossible to believe in how many different ways and styles these touching lines can be written and spelled, till you find them dished up to you a dozen times a day, in this office. Eastern people don't appreciate this "pome" as Western farmers do. Missouri rustics are particularly addicted to it. What the predilection of the Southern people might have been, I cannot say; it was just after the close of the war, and their letters were pitiful enough. Of course there was not a Federal postage-stamp to be had in any of the Southern States; and no matter how deeply the contents of some of these letters affected us, we could not forward them to the people they were addressed to. These letters from the South portrayed so terribly true the bitter, abject poverty of all classes, at that time that the Northerners to whom they were written would not have hesitated to assist these friends of "better days," could they have received the letters; but, even had we been allowed to forward them, the chances were extremely slender that people were still in the same position and location after the war as before the war.

Not these letters alone were sad; for sometimes a whole drama could be read from one or two short letters. One day we found among the dead letters a note written in a feeble, scrawling hand. It was by a boy—a prisoner and sick—in one of the penal institutions of New York—sick poor fellow! and imploring his mother—oh, so piteously!—to come and see him. He was in the sick ward, he said, and if he had been wicked, and had struck at his step-father when he saw him abuse his mother, would she not come to see him, only once, for all that? She must not let his step-father prevent her from coming; he was dreaming of his mother and sister every night, and he knew his mother would come to him; but she must come soon, for the Doctor had said so. Perhaps the letter had not reached the mother because the step-father had taken her out of the son's reach; for, in the course of a day or two, we found another letter addressed to the same woman, by one of the prison officials: the boy, Charley, had died on such a date—about a week after his letter had been written—and he had looked and asked for his mother to the last.

About letters written by German people I have noticed one peculiarity—they never omit to write the number of the year in some part of the letter, or on the envelope, outside. Sometimes it is written where the name of the county or the State should be found on the envelope, so that the direction would read, "Jacob Schmied, St. Louis, 1865;" or they write it at the bottom of the letter, instead of signing their name, and then write their name at the beginning of the letter, as though they were writing the letter to themselves. Everything is heavy and clumsy about their letters; they never indulge in joke or sentiment; and through the negligence of one of the German clerks, the most serious trouble had almost been brewed in a German brewer's family at one time. It happened in this way:

A substantial German brewer had written to Hans Biersöffel, dunning him for money, owing on several barrels of lager. Hans must have left the city—at any rate, the letter came to our office, and was returned to the brewer; but, unfortunately, a very sentimental letter, containing a copy of some love-sick verses, written by a German lady, and held in the office as a curiosity for a little while, had (by mistake, of course) found its way into this letter. The honest Dutchman had meant to return this piece of property to our office at the first opportunity, and therefore carried it in his pocket-book, where his wife discovered it, seized it, and held it over his head, as the sword of Damocles, forever after—as he could not prove to her satisfaction that the letter and verses had not been sent to him by the writer.

At the time I belonged to the corps of Dead Letter Clerks there were three rooms fronting on Seventh street, fitted up as offices for the lady clerks, and one very large room on the other side of the hall. A straw mat was spread on the stone floor in our room; one office-chair was furnished for each lady, and desks barely large enough for two ladies to work at, without elbowing each other; and in one corner, wash-stand and water. In the large room some twenty ladies were writing, while four or five folders had their desks in the same room. Of the other rooms, one was occupied by the Lady Superintendent, together with whom were from four to six ladies; the next room also accommodated six ladies, and the last one, which had the look of a prison, from a high grating running through it, afforded room for four others. There were old Post-office Directories, boxes containing printed matter, and such like valuables kept behind this grating; and one day, when a party of sight-seers came unasked into our room, the youngest lady there—whose spirit had not yet been broken by the weight of the responsibilities resting on her shoulders—exclaimed to the gaping crowd that behind this grating were kept the silver and household furniture of General ——'s—the Assistant Postmaster—boxed up while he was recruiting in the country. This was a twofold revenge, the young lady said to us: it was punishing the visitors for their inquisitiveness, and "old ——" for having the grating put up there. Several years have passed since I last saw the post-office building; the ladies of room No. — were then petitioning to have this grating removed. Whether their petition was granted I have not learned.

Sundry Post-offies Matters.

From far-off Idaho comes an inquiry where publishers find authority for publishing as "Newspaper Law" that a postmaster who does not notify a publisher that his paper is not taken from the office becomes responsible to the publisher for the amount of subscription? We answer, no where. Postmasters are required to give such notice, but the neglect to do so is merely a neglect of official duty for which they are responsible to the Department alone. Sec. 392, Reg 1866.....And from our near neighbor, Ohio, comes the inquiry, whether a postmaster has the right to send to an office of similar name in another State, letters addressed to persons whom he does not know? Whether right or wrong, we know that many postmasters do send such letters "kiting" about the country, but the authority for it, or the sound reason, we cannot find. It is presumed the writer of a letter knows where he wishes it to go, and addresses it accordingly; if he makes a mistake, it is not for the postmaster at the office of delivery to think he can correct it; the course prescribed for such mistakes is plainly laid down in Chapter XXXV. of Regulations. Besides, in our changing, traveling, roaming population, how is a postmaster to know that such a letter will not be called for within the five weeks allowed by the Department? The same correspondent asks if we "don't think the P. O. D. is a little ungenerous in not allowing its lady postmasters to marry?" and confesses to being a little interested, but uncertain of her chances, even if not postmaster. If we may be allowed to press into our service a by no means fresh or original wordplay, we should say, we suppose that the Department is a little jealous, and fearful that its lady postmasters can "love, honor and obey" only one mail at a time; while seriously, we would say that the main feature of the objection is doubtless that marriage does or may affect the bond required of a female postmaster.....The "Automaton Postmaster" in our November issue has called forth two or three letters stating that a similar contrivance has been in operation for some years in the offices of the writers and others—in one case for twenty-two years. So there is nothing new under the sun; and the "Automaton Postmaster" is at the service of all who wish his aid; and twenty-two years of faithful service is a sufficient recommendation for any one, "bond or free".....Our subscribers who have expressed their wishes for fuller tables of departures of mails from this and other countries, are informed that it is our intention to improve the MAIL in this particular as soon as we can obtain the information needed.

A Just Tribute.

We have already announced the retirement of the Hon. George Esrle from the First Assistant Postmaster Generalship, and the complimentary letters which have passed between the clerks of his Bureau and himself. There is one letter, however, from a veteran clerk in the Contract Office which we now add as a link connecting the "olden time" with the present:

Although I have not had the honor of being a clerk in your Bureau, my heart dictates a gratifying duty—that I express to you the many obligations I am under for your uniform kindness and attention whenever business has called us together.

Having served under nineteen Postmasters-General, commencing with Return Jonathan Meigs in 1819, and still a greater number of Assistant Postmasters-General, I beg leave to add, from personal observation and official intercourse, that during that long period no First Assistant Postmaster-General has labored more assiduously or more efficiently than yourself in promoting the interests of the great Postal Department, and the convenience of the millions in our country dependent thereupon for frequent and regular mail facilities, with vigilant, faithful postmasters to dispense them.

In these particulars, sir, a debt of gratitude is due you, the cancellation of which, even at my age, I hope to live to witness.

Heaven's best blessing ever attend you and yours,

JAMES LAWRENSON.

"ORDERED: That each Postmaster in the United States be instructed to take an accurate monthly account of all franked or free matter deposited at their respective offices for mailing, for the period of six months commencing January 1 and ending June 30, 1870; and to make special reports thereof to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General at the close of each month, embracing the following particulars, viz.:

"1st. The number of franked or free letters, and the amount of postage that would be chargeable thereon at the established rate of postage.

"2d. The weight of franked or free matter OTHER THAN LETTERS, and the amount of postage that would be chargeable thereon at the current rates of postage."

Postmasters will carefully conform to the foregoing instructions, USING THE INCLOSED FORM, which must be promptly forwarded to this office at the close of each month.

Should this Circular fail to be received at any Post Office in time to commence taking an account of free matter on the 1st of January, 1870, let the return for that month include such portion of the month as may remain when the Circular is received.

BY ORDER OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL:

W. H. H. TERRELL,
Third Asst. P. M. General.

Changes in the Tables of Foreign Postage.

Special attention is called to the following changes which have been made in the rates of postage to foreign countries:

1. The rate of postage on letters to Great Britain and Ireland has been reduced to SIX CENTS per half ounce.

2. The rates of postage on letters to other foreign countries (except France and Algeria) "by British mail" (or, "via England") has been reduced SIX CENTS per half ounce. Thus, letters to Liberia, via England, formerly chargeable with postage at the rate of 22 cents per half ounce, are now chargeable at 16 cents only, etc.

3. The rate of postage to France and Algeria (direct) is now as follows (propayment compulsory): on letters, 10 cents per half ounce; on newspapers, 2 cents each; and on book packets and samples, 4 cents per four ounces. The rate on letters (no other matter sent) to France via England, is four cents per half ounce—which is the United States inland and sea postage only—prepayment optional.

4. No correspondence can now be forwarded to any foreign country or place "by French mail." The rates by that route are therefore omitted from the Table. See Note e in Table.

HOW TO DO IT.—Many postmasters at money-order post offices are applied to by persons to whom they have issued orders, who desire to ascertain whether or not the orders have been paid at the paying office. As this is a matter which concerns the parties interested only, and is in no sense public business, the proper course for postmasters who are thus applied to is to suggest to the applicant that he or she shall write a prepaid letter to the P. M. at the paying office, making the inquiry, and inclosing a stamp (or, better, a stamped and directed envelope) for reply. Of course, in those cases in which the money orders are drawn in favor of bogus lottery and gift enterprise proprietors, pretended dealers in counterfeit money and similar swindlers, it would be a waste of stamps and stationery for anybody to write to anybody.

Why Money should not be Inclosed in Ordinary Letters.

In our Sundry Post-office Matters, last month, we gave a short and pithy reply to this question. We now propose a more extended argument.

We adduce two propositions, which we think conserve all that can be said upon the subject:

1. No one should expose property of value to others, with whom they are not acquainted, unless means are taken to trace it in case of disappearance.

2. Human nature is very weak, and, if honest, is likely to become dishonest through temptation.

We will take the case of one letter, and apply these propositions. We will suppose it is alleged that this letter was mailed at Lettersville, Ill., addressed to Brown, Smith & Co., New York, who everybody knows has had box 17,000 for forty years; the letter contained five dollars to pay for a package of "Non-explosive baking powders," or a year's subscription to "The Mirror of Intellectual and Fashionable Appanages."

This letter is not received by Brown, Smith & Co., and straightway complaint is made that there's a thief in the Post-office Department, and it's a shame that the Government don't punish him. We will grant the thief theory; that is, that there is a thief—somewhere; but to catch him! When your good wife looks into her pantry in the morning, and finds that a rat has been making free with the cold chicken she had put away for your morning's relish, she will exclaim nearly as you did when you learned that your letter had not been received: "There's a rat about the house, and he must be caught." You agree with her, and at once you set a trap; you bait it with cheese, and hope the next morning to find the depredator past all further depredations, but you are disappointed; you try clams as bait—they fail; you try buttered toast; you try cooked meat and raw; you try fish; you go back to cheese, but toast it most daintily; you hold solemn consultation with your wife and your neighbors, and all this while, morning after morning, you go, with beating heart, to your trap, to find it—empty, and all this while the cold chicken and the doughnuts and the cheese disappear nightly from your pantry. Or if, at last, you catch your rat, it may not be the one that stole your chicken, or if it be, you certainly will not recover the stolen property. Suppose you think it a shame that you cannot put eatables unprotected in your pantry, as you think it a shame you cannot send valuable letters unprotected in the mails. When you have learned to catch your rat at notice, then complain that the Post-office Department does not immediately catch the thief that stole your letter. Would the rat have stolen your chicken if you had taken proper means to guard it? and would your letter have been stolen had you taken proper means to secure its safety?

But we will try to follow the course this letter should take.

We must first be sure it was properly mailed, and contained the money as alleged. We must be sure the letter is not in the pocket of some other coat, or hidden between the leaves of some book, where you placed it for safety till you could go to the post-office; or that you properly stamped it; or properly addressed it; or that you did not scrawl something on it which you knew meant New York, but which every one else would take to be the superfluous ink from the body of some fly that had been taking a bath in your inkstand, and then raced over your letter to dry himself.

But you are sure the letter was plainly addressed, properly stamped, and certainly deposited in the post-office—you'll swear to it. We will not put you on oath, because we do know of similar cases where even the oath when confronted with the letter itself, would not prove that some such mistake had not been made.

But the letter is in the post-office at Lettersville; now, which clerk in that office made up the mails that day, and does he remember a letter for Brown, Smith & Co? "Why, no, sir; we send so many letters to New York, it is impossible to tell who they are addressed to, unless they are registered." But the letter leaves Lettersville all right, and reaches the hands of the route agent on the Lettersville and Chicago Railroad, but which route agent? for there may be two or more, or a substitute may be on duty;—but let that pass, the letter reaches Chicago: now, which of the distributing clerks in that office sends it to New York? and does he send it to New York or to San Francisco? Do you not begin to weary of this hunt for the rat?—however, the letter reaches New York in safety, but which of the assorters in that office sends it to the box-clerk? and which box-clerk boxes it? and are we certain that in his hurry or carelessness the box-clerk did not slip it into an adjoining box, and deliver it to the person who calls for the letters for that box, and he finding a letter not for his employers, opens it and pockets the money? Such things have happened, and some such persons are now serving out their terms in State prisons.

Now, had your good wife adapted our first proposition to the case of her cold chicken and doughnuts, you would have had the benefit of them instead of the rat; and had you applied that proposition to the case of your valuable letter, you would have the benefit of your money instead of the thief.

We will grant that your letter was stolen by some clerk in the postal service; probably he is an old offender; letter after letter, and dollar after dollar, have never been able to pass his hands safely; but the time was that he was honest; the time was that letters were as safe in his hands as in yours; but many like yourself heeded neither our first or second proposition, and as day after day valuable letters reached his hands, he lost sight of their sacredness, and in time one went no further, and then another and another stopped there, and that was the case of yours. If this thief is caught, shall he not be punished? The punishment exacted by impartial justice for his crime is ten years in the State prison; and who led him there but you and you and you, who tempted him by your carelessness, we might say wickedness, in committing valuable letters to the mails in the manner you did? Why did you not register, that every one handling your letters might feel an increased degree of responsibility in his duty. For the crime of the thief we condemn him to ten years' imprisonment; for your crime we condemn you to the remembrance that through you one of your fellowmen has become a felon, with a felon's doom.

We have before us a letter complaining that small sums of money cannot be sent safely through the mails, and asks: "Why should we be compelled to pay fifteen cents to register a letter containing fifty cents or a dollar?" The answer is readily found in our two propositions. The writer of the letter and all other post-office complainants, should bear in mind that letter rats, alias thieves, do not stop to examine if letters contain money or not, or what amount of money, but take letters on a venture. We close this article with the following extract from "Suggestions to the Public," in The British Postal Guide:

"Any person who sends money or jewelry in an unregistered letter, not only runs the risk of losing his property, but exposes to temptation every one through whose hands his letter passes, and may be the means of ultimately bringing some clerk or letter-carrier to moral ruin."

Postal Information.

Occasionally we have complaints that the U. S MAIL does not furnish the information needed, and the wish is expressed that the Department would publish some reliable guide to the public and to postmasters, by which they could be certain they are right in the conduct of their postal affairs. Without stopping to submit proof that any three consecutive numbers of our paper will furnish all the ordinary and probable information required, we proceed to state that when we "boil down" these complaints, we invariably find them still very watery. The trouble lies, not in the U. S. MAIL, but in the endeavor to evade the postal laws by giving to them forced, and, in many cases, ridiculous, constructions. Take the case of the party who mailed photograph albums at the rate of two cents for four ounces, and complained he could find no authority for a charge of four cents, as photograph albums are not books, but transient matter. Section 222 of the laws of 1866 states what shall be mailable matter, and divides such matter into three classes. Passing by the first two—of letters and regular papers—we conclude a photograph album, if mailable matter, to come under the third class. The mailer asserts it is not a book. What, then, is it? Is it a "pamphlet," "an occasional publication," "map," "print," or any of the articles named except books, and if not, then it is not mailable matter, and should be charged at letter rates, according to section 245 of the laws. Had this complainant come squarely up to the mark, and called his albums—what they are—books, he would have found in the U. S. MAIL the rate of postage he should have paid on them. The same remarks apply to the case of the party who endeavored to pass through the mail, at the two-cent rate, bound writing portfolios. Which of all the third class of mailable matter is a portfolio if not a book, and if not a book, it is not mailable matter. And then we have a case of a teacher who bothered a postmaster by insisting that a quarterly sheet, issued for gratuitous distribution, was a bona fide weekly newspaper, published in the county, and hence entitled to pass free through the mail to subscribers (?) living within that county. Now, how large a book would the Department have to publish to meet the wants of such people? Nor need they wait for the Department, if they will procure a spelling-book, and a "Webster Unabridged," and after thoroughly becoming acquainted with them, take the MAIL regularly and interpret it honestly, they will seldom or never fail to be correct in rating postage or in any other postal matter.

In the meanwhile we will continue to give in the MAIL standard information; letters from the Department of general application; to answer correspondents such questions as arise and involve doubt; and to furnish such editorials as are called forth by circumstances; and publish such communications as may be adapted to our purpose, and for which we may have room.

Postmasters, Beware.

Postmasters will do well to be on their guard against sundry swindlers who are sending large numbers of circulars through the mails, offering high premiums and "prizes" in money, "gronie watches" and sewing machines to clubs of subscribers to certain pretended weekly and monthly publications. We are in receipt of several letters from postmasters who have been induced to get up such clubs, and who have found not that the papers and periodicals thus advertised either have no existence at all, or exist only to the extent of one or two numbers, and that the "prizes" do not arrive. We are not speaking of established and well-known publications, whose proprietors, we do not doubt, fulfill all their promises; but only desire to warn postmasters not to be misled by the specious representations and promises of rogues in to raising "clubs" which will bring them more maledictions than money. In cases of doubt (when the circulars emanate from New York), subscribers can refer to the Editor of THE MAIL, enclosing stamps for reply.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Refusal to Pay Postage, etc.—H. S., R——, Ill.—1. Where a subscriber refuses to pay the postage on a regular paper sent to him, the paper should be returned and said at the end of the quarter, while the publisher should be notified that the paper is not taken from the office, according to Sec. 392, Reg. 1866. 2. There is no prohibition in the Laws or Regulations on the sale of intoxicating drinks in a post office; probably because it was never thought a postmaster could be so lost to common decency as to require the wives and children of his neighbors to go through a crowd of drunken loafers to attend to their postal matters. 3. The New York Messenger is discontinued; it was one of those enterprises supported by the cupidity and credulity of those people in the country, who, grasping after prizes, think that New York City contains some generous individuals who will give gold watches worth two hundred and fifty dollars for ten, and pure diamonds worth any where between five hundred and one thousand dollars for five or six dollars.

Unclaimed Newspapers.—C. K., E—— S——, Mass. —Unclaimed printed matter should be sold at the end of the quarter, and the proceeds credited to the Department. In the meanwhile the publisher should be notified, according to Sec. 392, Reg. 1866. If the publisher wishes such matter returned to him, he must provide for the prepayment of the postage.

Carrying Letters Outside the Mails, etc.—L. E. W., S—— M——, O.—1. Letters may be carried outside the mails if they are enclosed in Government stamped envelopes of sufficient denomination to pay the legal postage, Sec. 44, Reg 1866. 2. If your office is not supplied wholly or in part by a railway post office, you should wrap letters. See. 88, Reg. 1866.

Forwarding Quarterly Prepaid Matter.—C. M. M., N—— B——, N. J.—By a late decision, quarterly prepaid newspapers may be forwarded; postage at transient rates to be collected at either the forwarding office or office of delivery.

Post-Office Blanks.—B. C., C——, Tenn.—Post-office blanks are furnished by the First Assistant Postmaster-General; if your requisitions are not filled it must be because they are defective in some one or more particulars. Probably you embrace more than one subject in one letter. See Sec. 84, Reg. 1866.

Exchange Papers.—J. B. T., W——, Ind.—The privilege of exchanging free is confined to one copy of each publication using the privilege. Sec. 258, Laws 1866.

Post-Office Directors.—P. M., S—— B—— Tenn.—Every postmaster, or rather post office, is entitled to a Post-Office Directory. If your office is not supplied, apply to the First Assistant Postmaster-General.

Withdrawing Letters after Posting. J. A. B., O——, Kan.—Letters may be withdrawn from the mails according to Sec. 64, Regs. of 1866, which should have added to it the words, "except to the writer thereof.")

Rate of Box Rents.—H. S. W., T——, Iowa.—The Department has not fixed any general rate of box rents. Postmasters are allowed to fix their own rates, but all box rent must be accounted for to the Department. Chap. XLII., Reg. 1866.

County Papers.—D. A. C., M——, Ill.—1. A weekly county newspaper may be delivered free to a resident of the county, although it is delivered from a post office not in the county, provided it is the usual office at which he receives his mail matter. 2. It is the duty of postmasters to deliver local weekly papers free, provided they are properly folded and addressed. Sec. 3, Act of July 27, 1868.....J. J. R., M——, Mo.—See reply to D. A. C. The duty extends to all the local papers published in the place.....I. S., B——, O.—Same reply.

Date of Postmark, etc.—B. F. O., G——, N. Y.—1. The date of the postmark should be the day on which the mail leaves, and you cannot give another date without practically committing perjury. You might as well swear that a legal paper left your office on a certain day when it did not as to postmark it so as to make it appear to have left on that day. Lawyers should take care that their papers are mailed in time to satisfy State law, and not require you to violate the regulations of the Department, which are law as long as they are in force. 2. The writer of a registered letter has the same privilege of having the letter returned to him according to request, as the writer of an ordinary letter has. 3. A returned letter readdressed is chargeable with postage, the same as though it were originally posted. 4. Not less than one quarter's postage can be collected; if a person is not willing to pay for that time, postage should be collected at the mailing office at transient rates. Sec. 251, Laws of 1865. 5. It has been decided that a mere address written in a printed circular, does not subject it to letter postage. This privilege, however, does not extend to any other writing, not even to the insertion of a date.

Office Hours, etc.—E. F., C——, N. C.—1. It is not required to open a post office on Sunday, unless a mail arrives on that day; in which case it is to be kept open one hour or more, if the public convenience require it, after the assortment of the mail, unless it be during the time of public worship, when the people will be after the religious services have ceased. Sec. 27, Reg. 1866. 2. See above for reply to box rents.

Railway Mail-catchers.—T. C. M. S., B——, O.—We presume your question relates to the mail-catchers put up on some railroads by order of the Department. It certainly is the duty of postmasters to put the mail, or see that it is put, on such catchers.

Mail Messenger Service.—W. A. W., C——, N. J.—A mail messenger is obliged to receive prepaid letters delivered to him more than a mile from the post office, but is not obliged to take from the office letters to be delivered to the parties addressed. Sec. 232, Code of 1869.....J. P., H——, Tex.—Write to the Second Assistant Postmaster General for authority to employ a mail messenger.

Changing the Name of a Post Office.—M. H. P., G——, Va.—Apply to the Postmaster General to change the name of your office.

Postage.—S. H. F., W—— S——, N. H.—We have repeatedly stated in our columns that only weekly papers published in the county can be delivered to subscribers free. The subscriber must actually live in the county, and the paper must be published in the county. A paper published in Boston, Mass., and sent to a newsdealer in a county in New Hampshire, and by him delivered to a regular subscriber, cannot by any possible distortion of language be said to be published in the county in which the subscriber resides. .....P. B. G., D——, Ind.—Postage should be charged at letter rates on newspapers containing anything but a bona fide supplement, or a bill for subscription (Secs. 209 and 226, Regulations, 1866), and if not paid at the mailing office, should be collected on delivery (Secs. 150 and 151, Regulations, 1866). Besides, the person who incloses such, in order that it may be carried free of letter postage, is liable to a penalty of five dollars. Sec. 316, Laws, 1866.

Registration.—D. T., P—— H——, W. Va.—The postage on registered letters, at the rate of three cents a half-ounce, or fraction of half-ounce, must be paid besides the fee for registering, which is fifteen cents: thus every registered letter should be prepaid at least eighteen cents; but if such a letter weighs over half an ounce, the charge would be even more—as we have said, at the rate of three cents each half-ounce or fraction.....C. McV., S—— M——, Pa.—The Department assumes no pecuniary responsibility for registered letters; but by registration greater care can be given in the transmission and delivery of such letters over what it is at all possible to give ordinary letters.....J. M. B., O—— C——, O.—1. The numbering of registered letters should commence with each quarter. See "Instructions" at the head of The Registered Letter Bill. 2. The commissions allowed on Money Order business are plainly stated in the Instructions and Accounts; of course none other are allowed.

The above table gives all the information as to the departure of mail steamers for foreign countries obtainable as we go to press. The refusal of the Cunard, Inman and Hamburg lines to carry the British mails on the terms offered by the United States Department, has led to serious temporary embarrassment; but as we write we are informed that in addition to the Bremen line (sailing on Saturdays), the Liverpool and Great Western line will carry the Europ an mails weekly, sailing from New York (every Wednesday).

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland, or to or from the North German Union (including Austria and its States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. This is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labnan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, to Italy and the Roman or Papal States, and to Middle and Lower Egypt, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

Until January 1, 1870, letters could be registered, on payment of certain special postage rates, to France, Algeria, Corsica, Bourbon, Nice and Savoy; also to Alexandretta, Tangiers and Tunis. This, however, cannot be done at present. The registration fee on letters, etc., to all foreign countries to which registration is practicable will be found noted in the Table of Postages to Foreign Countries. On such letters, etc., only the postage rates as given in the table need be prepaid, in addition to the registration fee.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed: Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

RATES OF POSTAGE ON PRINTED MATTER FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

1. TO OR FROM GREAT BRITAIN.—Newspapers and circulars, 2 cents each. Book packets (including printed papers of all kinds, maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, etc.), and patterns or samples, 6 cents per four ounces or fraction of four ounces, if four ounces or over in weight. For rates on less than four ounces see Foreign Postage Table. The above charges must be fully prepaid at the office of mailing, by means of U. S. postage stamps affixed outside the packet or its cover, and are in full to destination in the United Kingdom. If not so prepaid, the packet cannot be forwarded.

Newspapers, book packets, and patterns, or samples of merchandise, originating in the United Kingdom and addressed to the United States, will be received in the United States fully prepaid, and must be delivered free of charge to the party addressed at the office of destination in the United States.

2. TO OR FROM FRANCE, ALGERIA, &C., IN FRENCH MAIL.—Newspapers, periodical works, books stitched or bound, pamphlets, catalogues, papers of music, prospectuses, circulars, and all other kinds of printed matter addressed to France, Algeria, or cities of Turkey, Syria and Egypt, in which France has post offices [viz.: Alexandria, Alexandretta, Beyrout, Constantinople, Dardanelles, Galatz, Gallipoli, Ibraila, Ineboli, Jaffa, Kerasound, Latakia, Messina, in Asiatic Turkey, Mityiene, Rhodes, Salonica, Samsoun, Sinope, Smyrna, Sulino, Trebizond, Tripoli, in Syria, Tultchia, Varna and Volo], can be dispatched to France direct, on prepayment of the following postage, viz.: newspapers, two cents each; books, periodical works, catalogues or pamphlets, four cents per four ounces or fraction thereof; to be in all cases collected in the United States, whether sent or received. France in like manner collects its own postage on all kinds of printed matter, whether sent or received.

3. TO OR FROM THE NORTH GERMAN UNION (INCLUDING ALL THE GERMAN STATES AND AUSTRIA) AND TO OR FROM BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS, BY CLOSED MAIL VIA ENGLAND.—Newspapers 4 cents each, if not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional rate of four cents for each additional weight of four ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. Book packets, prints of all kinds, and patterns or samples, 8 cents per four ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. If, however, the postage on any article shall be insufficiently prepaid, it will be, nevertheless, forwarded to its destination, charged with the deficient postage, and also subject to a fine on delivery.

4. TO OR FROM ITALY AND SWITZERLAND, BY CLOSED MAIL, VIA ENGLAND, BELGIUM AND GERMANY.—The rates and conditions on newspapers, book-packets, prints of all kinds, and patterns or samples, are the same as the above, (paragraph 3.)

5. TO OR FROM THE NORTH GERMAN UNION (INCLUDING ALL THE GERMAN STATES AND AUSTRIA), BY DIRECT MAIL VIA BREMEN OR HAMBURG—Newspapers, if not over 4 ounces of weight, 3 cents each, and if over 4 ounces an additional 3 cents for each additional weight of 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. Book packets, prints, patterns and samples, 6 cents per 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. But unpaid or part paid letters and other articles insufficiently prepaid will be forwarded, charged with the deficient postage, and subject to a fine on delivery. The registration fees on registered letters or other postal packets is 8 cents to all the above mentioned countries; prepayment of postage and fee compulsory.

The above rates (paragraphs 1, 3, 4 and 5) are in full to destination; and no charge is to be made on the delivery of newspapers, book packets or samples arriving from Germany, Austria, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy or Switzerland, by the above mails, except the deficient postage or fine on such matter when insufficiently prepaid. But the postage on all printed matter to or from FRANCE AND ALGERIA must, in all cases, be collected here, at the rates mentioned in paragraph 3.

REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All communications on official business, of whatever origin, addressed to heads of the executive departments of government, or heads of bureaus therein, or to chief clerks of departments, shall be received and conveyed by mail free of postage without being franked or indorsed "Official Business."

By a joint resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Adjutants General of the several States and Territories, are authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, any medals, certificates of thanks or other testimonials, awarded, or which may be awarded by the Legislatures of said States and Territories, to the soldiers thereof, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may direct.

Section 128, Regulations 1866, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as a personal privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weight of four ounces. Mail matter to those possessing the privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertains to official business. Section 124 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides these, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenue officers, also, besides those mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may only frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No communication, official or otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can be sent free.

The Act of March 1, 1869, relating to franking, makes no change in the privilege, but merely enacts that the signature of the franking party must be written, and not printed.

The rate of postage on mail letters to any part of the United States is three cents a half ounce or fraction thereof. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent. All drop as well as mail letters must be prepaid.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

Mailable matter passing between Kansas and California pays the usual rates of postage from and after the 1st of October, 1868, repealing section 259, Postal Laws, and, of course, rescinding section 229 of Regulations.

BOOKS, not over four ounces in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over four oz. and not over eight oz., 8 cts.; over eight oz. and not over twelve oz., 12 cts.; over twelve oz. and not over sixteen oz., 16 cts.

Post Office Blanks.

The agency for supplying postmasters with blanks is located at Washington, D. C.

When the postages collected at an office amount to $100 a year, the name of the postmaster and of his office will be printed on the post bills. When the postmaster's compensation exceeds $12 50 a quarter, the postmaster is entitled to wrapping paper and twine, at the above agencies.

Orders for wrapping paper and twine must be on separate sheets from orders for blanks; but both may be inclosed in one envelope.

All postmasters whose compensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

Applications for blank registers of arrival and departure of the mails must be made direct to the "Contract Office, Inspection Division, P. O. Dept." For special instructions, to the First Assistant Postmaster General.

UNITED STATES MAIL
AND
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. X., NO. 5. NEW YORK, FEBRUARY, 1870. WHOLE NO. 113.

LOST IN THE POST OFFICE.

BY HESBA STRETTON.

The will lay upon the counter before me, and my eyes were riveted upon the large cover which contained it, and which bore the inscription, "R Grey, Esq., Mitre Buildings, The Temple, London." Within it lay Kate's destiny and mine. Whether we were to be married or no before our hair was gray was the secret wrapped up in its folds.

To go back to the beginning. My father had been the junior partner in the old bank of Fletcher and Stacey, of Thornbury, which had come to grief, and after an honorable old-fashioned manner, paying off all its debts, according to the custom of forty years ago, at the expense of the firm, who thereupon became poor men. My father had many friends, and in those times, when political influence had its finger in the bestowal of all public offices worth having, the members for our Tory borough had little difficulty in procuring for the ex-banker the office of post-master, then vacant. The bank-offices, occupying the ground floor of our residence, were altered somewhat to suit the new purposes to which they were put. The public business room became a sort of outer office, and my father's private apartment the stamping and sorting place for the letters. The upper portion of the partition wall was thrown down, but left at a sufficient height to screen the inner room from the observation of any one in the outer one; yet it was open enough to make every word audible in either part, unless intentionally spoken in a whisper. In the course of a few years my father appointed me his head clerk, upon the promotion of the previous clerk to an office of his own; and our united salaries then amounted to £400 a year, beside the numerous perquisits which, at that time of day fell to the share of the postmaster, such as private letter-bags, and the postage upon local letters. We had two under-clerks, and the duties were light; very different from what they have since become, as I am told. The penny postage had only just come in; postage-stamps were still an institution of the future, and money orders had been a recognized branch of the establishment only two years. Only four years before, the stamp duty on newspapers had been 3½d apiece, and the wildest Whig had not yet dreamed of a penny paper. There were hours in our post-office, when our two subordinates were more than sufficient for all the work of the place, and my father's post was little else than a sinecure. One of the borough-men who had been most active in procuring this comfortable berth for us, was an old crony of my father's,—both of them were Masons, and both dabblers in chemistry,—and also the wealthiest man in the whole neighborhood. He was a batchelor, and continued to live very much in the simple and inexpensive style he had been used to in his poorer days. His money had grown by lucky speculations, and careful economy. A good number of his kindred lived about the town, all moderately well off and more or less successful in life, except the brother next eldest to himself, who, having entered the Church, had gained no higher promotion in it then a poor curacy in his native town, with an income of £100 a year. Old Lawrence treated him with a kind of fretful irritable brotherliness, which was but poorly plastered over by a yearly gift, grudgingly given, of another hundred. I need scarcely say that all the kindred were specially affectionate to old Lawrence.

His niece, Kate Lawrence, the curate's daughter, was,—well! I shall not try to describe what she was, except by saying that I was in love with her, and had been ever since I had first seen her in church, listening, with a beaming and loving face, to her father preaching one of his prosiest sermons. Everybody knew I was in love with Katie, for I made no secret of it; and Katie was just as simply and frankly in love with me, and made no secret of it, either. Yet I am quite sure I had never asked her, in so many words, if she would become my wife; but we were tacitly without pledge or promise given, engaged to marry one another as soon as fickle fortune would permit it. When that would, be the most prophetic soul could not foretell; for our lavish household expenditure at home, which had not been materially reduced upon the failure of the bank, swallowed up the united income of my father and myself; while my three sisters, now portionless, did not seem in a fair way to make eligible settlements. There was only one chance, a distant one, —when old Lawrence died, would he leave Katie or her father any portion of his accumulated wealth?

Six or seven years had passed without any brightening of our prospects, when, quite unexpectedly, one morning, old Lawrence's housekeeper rushed in with the news that she had found her master dead in his bed. Only the night before he and my father had been trying some chemical experiments, and the shock to the latter was so violent that he was insensible for some time, and continued speechless after his consciousness had apparently returned. Of course, my mother and sisters were in great agitation, and it was an hour or two before I could leave them, after assisting to get my father to bed, and sending for his doctor. As soon as I could, however, I hastened to the poor solitary old man's house. The streets were all in commotion, and the whole town seemed in a fever of curiosity concerning the sudden event, and what might result from it. In the house itself I found everyone of the relatives who lived in the town, including two younger brothers, and a married sister of the deceased; and by the side of the dead man sat Katie's father, genuine tears of sorrow blinding his eyes.

The excitement once awakened, did not seem likely to slumber again till curiosity was satisfied. It was plain that the old man had died from natural causes; but as soon as the town was assured of that, the question upon every tongue was, "Has he made a will?" or, "How has he left his money?" I was myself devoured by anxiety, of which I was half ashamed. If he had died intestate, Katie's father, as heir-at law, would come into possession of his landed property, and into a fourth part of his personality, which would be no insignificant windfall in itself. It was a subject which might well thrust itself upon me, in spite of my father's serious attack, which seemed not unlike a stroke of paralysis.

During the course of the afternoon, old Lawrence's solicitor, Mr. Snape was announced, and I went to speak to him. He requested to see my father, with a very important tone and expression of countenance.

"It is impossible," I answered. "quite impossible: he cannot see any one. He has not spoken since this morning, when he heard of the sudden death of his old friend. Arnold is apprehensive of paralysis. Is it anything I can do?"

"No, No," replied Mr. Snape; "your father is one of the executors to Mr. Lawrence's will, and, I have brought here with me, to it consult him about it. The other is Grey, of the Temple. Under these circumstances. I suppose I must forward it to him; and perhaps it is best. It must be proved at Canterbury, and he can see to it at once."

"Why at Canterbury?" I asked eagerly.

"Because there is landed property in three different dioceses." he answered. I'll send it to Grey by to-night's mail."

"Well, my father can do nothing," I said, wondering all the time whether Mr. Snape knew what were the provisions of the will, so momentious to Katie and me.

There was a will, however; that far was certain. A kind of wild hope which had been kindled in my breast, was quite quenched by the visit from Mr. Snape. I felt myself sinking into a gloomy depression, which appeared exceedingly ominous to me. For three or four hours I brooded despondently over the fact that there was a will, scarcely allowing myself to cherish a spark of hope that Katie was provided for in it; for how often does a rich man leave his money to the poorest of his kindred? I had nothing else to occupy my mind. My mother and sisters sat weeping in my father's darkened and silent room. All the windows in our house had the curtains drawn. At last it occured to me that this was the last day of September, and that the money order account, which was made up quarterly, ought to be balanced, and sent up to London by that night's mail. Glad of any thing to work at, I went down stairs to the inner office found the necessary forms, and set myself steadily to the task.

I had just completed it and folded up my balance-sheet, when I heard a footstep and voice in the outer office, both loud and of a kind to arrest attention. They belonged to one of Snape's clerks who had come in to post his master's letter.

"Look here," he said; "I was to see you take this one straight in to Mr. Slaney; it's on no account to be left here with ordinary letters. It's old Lawrence's will, I guess. By George! I only wish that my name was inside of it."

It was brought in to me immediately and placed before me on the counter. I did not touch it, but there it lay, a long, narrow packet, not over-large or bulky, yet containing the whole of Kate's future and mine.

I cannot say how long I sat before it, fascinated, perfectly spell-bound; my eyes riveted upon it as if they could see through the thick cover and read the momentous lines within. I never touched it with my finger even. I felt as if I no more dare do that than I would have dared to tease and arouse some deadly serpent. I am conscious, however, that not the shadow of an idea of opening it ever crossed my mind. At last I felt a low, smooth little band laid upon mine, and Katie's voice whispered close to my ear, "What is it you're staring at, Harry?"

There was, of course, an entrance into this inner office from the house, and Katie had stolen in several time before when I was alone and had always spoken in the lowest of whispers, lest the clerks in the office beyond should overhear her: yet I started nervously at the sound of her voice and the touch of her hand, and she was obliged to repeat her question before I seemed to comprehend it.

"That's your Uncle's will," I answered.

Her eyes met mine, and there was a strange look in them such as I had never seen before —an uneasy, troubled, almost elvy expression. She had been crying until they were red and appeared smaller than usual under their swollen lids. She dropped her eyelids hurriedly and then she whispered again.

"It there had been no will?"

I answered her as if that were a question, but afterward it occurred to me that it was but an involuntary utterance of her wish.

"Your father would have been heir-at-law, Katie," I replied, "and you a great heiress."

As I was speaking, an alarmed and hurried voice called loudly for me from the interior of the house—a voice so urgent and strung to such a pitch of terror, that it drove every thought of anything else out of my mind. At two or three bounds I sprang up the staircase and into my father's bedroom, where every one was in confusion and dismay. Some crisis of his sudden attack had come on and he was to all appearance in the agonies of death. A friendship, too rare between father and son, existed between him and me—a very close friendship which had grown with my growth from boyhood. To lose him would be to lose half my life. I did not give a thought to my official duties; the Queen's mail was nothing to me; and during the whole of that long night I never left my father's side.

The next morning he was pronounced to be out of immediate danger, though he continued speechless and seemed scarcely conscious of our presence. By dint of persevering entreaty my mother persuaded me to lie down, whom I fell into one of those utter and awful lethargies, deeper and more deathlike than sleep, which now and then seem to come to obliterate any impression stamped too deeply upon the brain. When I awoke I felt calm and strong again. Katie was in the house and she and my sister lavished upon me those trivial feminine attentions so inexpressibly soothing after any great emotion when one is suffering from the languor which usually follows it.

When the hour for making up the mail arrived, I went down into the office and made some slight inquiries as to how the clerks had managed the work the evening before. They had been late, of course; but the mail-coach —there was no railway near Thornbury then —had waited for them to complete their evening's dispatch, and they believed everything had gone off as well as usual.

But the return mail proved that everything had not gone off as well as usual. Our mail, leaving Thornbury at eight P. M., reached the London office about noon the next day; and the return mail, not quitting London until eight o'clock on the following morning, threw the arrival of the answers to correspondence to the fourth morning. On the fourth day after old Lawrence's death, to the serious inconvenience of all parties, there appeared no reply to Mr Snape's communication to Mr. Grey, which had been enclosed with the will, and in which he desired to be immediately acquainted with any instructions left by the deceased in regard to his funeral. The next London mail was waited for, but there was still no letter; and the interment necessarily took place, while the solicitor addressed a second communication to the executor.

I awaited, with the keenest anxiety, the arrival of Mr. Grey or his reply, and all the town was on the tip-toe of expectation. The relatives did nothing but meet one another and discuss the will in all its possibilities. There was a wistful look about Katie's face. It was nine days now since old Lawrence's death, but the wonder, instead of dying out, was growing greater every day. Why did not the executor come to satisfy the general curiosity and set the general mind at ease? The mail-bags reached Thornbury about midnight and were ordinarily deposited in the office to await the appointed hour for opening them at seven in the morning, which was considered quite early enough for the accommodation of the public. But upon this occasion Mr. Snape spent the evening with me, and when the mail arrived he and I went down alone into the quiet office, where I picked out the London bag, opened it, took out the bundles of letters, ran my eager fingers and eyes over them until I came to the one I was in search of and handed it over to the lawyer.

There was a dead silence in the hour and place, only the clock ticking off the seconds as evenly as if nothing was happening. I watched Mr. Snape's face hungrily, as if it would reflect and disclose what he was reading. The letter was brief, but he read it over twice. It seemed a very long pause of suspense to me, yet I suppose three minutes had scarcely passed.

"He says he has never heard of old Lawrence's death!" exclaimed Mr. Snape at length; "he knows nothing about his will—has never received it!"

"Never received it!" I repeated, "not received it! But I could take my oath it went from this office."

"Did you see it go into the bag yourself?" asked Mr. Snape.

I hesitated a minute or two, for that deep, lethargic sleep I spoke of had dimmed my recollections of that night. I remembered it was the night I had left the two under-clerks to do all the work alone while I was watching beside my father; but I recalled also the exact spot where I had left the will on the counter, seated ap against the folded money-order account, which had been acknowledged as received. If one had gone safely, why not the other?

"No," I answered, after that long pause; I took it in and left it here on the counter; but the clerks did the work that evening. It would be impossible for them to overlook it. Besides, we should have found it the next day if it had been left behind; and I should certainly have informed you of the irregularity. No; it must have gone from here."

So said the elder clerk when we questioned him in the morning. He could not positively swear to it, because they had been hurried and flurried over their work; but he was quite sure it must have gone if it had been on the counter as I described. The other clerk, who had taken it in, and knew it to be old Lawrence's will, had not made up the London bag or he would have taken special notice of it and would have been able to swear to it. Still both of them were positive that it had not been left behind; though it might have got into the wrong bag and been missent.

"I'll go up to London by to-night's mail," said Mr. Snape.

Nothing could be more significant of the importance of the document; for a journey to London by coach, occupying eighteen hours at the swiftest, was not undertaken for a trifle. The anxiety which had been devouring me was now sharpened to a keener point; but both Mr. Soapo and I wished to keep the affair quiet as long as possible, and I said nothing about it to any one, my father being still too ill to have it confided to him. As for the clerks, both being unmarried men, there was little danger of their telling tales out of school after being once warned to keep it to themselves for the present.

But the anxiety I had suffered before was security itself compared with my consternation and disquietude when Mr. Snape returned accompanied by Mr. Grey, who asserted that he had seen nothing whatever of the packet which had been posted in our office. There was not the shadow of a doubt of that last circumstance. The clerk who received it and I myself were compelled to admit that it had been safely deposited with us; but no trace of it could be found beyond that. Both Snape and Grey had been to the General Post-Office to make inquiries there, but nothing was known of it. The whole onus of the disappearance rested upon our office and the three persons within it. It was simply impossible to keep the mysterious loss of old Lawrence's will any longer a secret. The relatives were ready to pull Mr. Grey to pieces as soon as he showed his face in the town. Was it not shameful, scandalous, that a fortnight had already dragged by and no one knew how a quarter of a million of money—for rumors said the old man's wealth was no less—had been bequeathed? With real reluctance Grey made known the facts. There had been a will; he and the postmaster were executors; it had been posted for him on the night after old Lawrence's death and nothing more was known about it.

The excitement in the town was ten fold, a hundred-fold greater now than on the occasion of the testator's sudden death. Our post office was besieged and the clerks plied with questions, while I kept myself safely out of sight in the inner office, brooding in perplexity over the singular occurrence. I could arrive at no other conclusion than that the packet must have slipped into a wrong bag and so been missent. Of course there were worrying inquiries made by the London authorities to which I could give no other reply than this supposition. The affair was of such importance that official circulars were dispatched to most of the offices in the kingdom, requiring any information concerning any missent letters; and in the course of a few weeks a handsome reward was offered for the discovery of the missing document.

CLAMBANK, NEW JERSEY, Jan. 1870.

MR. EDITOR—"The cup of pleasure ne'er shines bright without some mingling drops of sorrow." Mammoth Wallow is no longer our home. I sold it (with Jane Mary's consent), and purchased this lookout, close to the sea-girt shore of Cranberry Island. My delicate wife was apparently failing, and her avordupoise fearfully decreased during our last few weeks' residence at the old homestead. You can judge when I tell you that on the 4th of July last she weighed two hundred and twenty-six pounds, and on Christmas Day after dinner but two hundred and nine—a clear loss of seventeen pounds in less than six months. Evidently the locality was unhealthy, and we determined on a change of base, and as Foxbroth, the great whale tamer, wanted our place, and was willing to pay for it—and as we could negociate for this higher and drier country-seat for half his purchase money, I (Jane Mary consenting) accommodated matters, and here we are. Clambank is rather a new place, but it is thriving. We have two stores, a hotel (they call it a tavern out here—whatever that means), and eleven dwelling houses, one of which, under the pressure of progress, is putting on a new roof. There is any quantity of vacant land around, some swampy—some less swampy, and some with trees on it.

Our nearest post office is Peachblow, about seven miles away; and this inconvenience has suggested the idea of asking for the establishment of an office at this point. My Pastor (that is, Jane Mary's and mine), the Rev. Wolsey Moddle; our family physician, Dr. Cupper; Counsellor Blather (our squire), and myself (with J. M.), having talked the matter over, a petition, covering nine pages of legal cap paper, to be forwarded to the P. M. G., was drawn up by the cunning pen of Blather, which received the signatures of all the inhabitants except McPhat, the hotel keeper, who felt certain that an opposition hotel would be started the moment it was known we were to have a post office. However, his refusal to give his name to the project will not affect the result, and we feel pretty sanguine of the matter going through under the manipulation of our member, who will be furnished a duplicate petition. No particular individual was named for postmaster; seven out of the nine signers desired me to take the responsible position, but I positively declined; although I presume I know more about the business than any man in the village. It will be given, probably, to a returned soldier, who lost his—blanket and canteen on his way back from the seat of war after his three-months term of service had expired; he was not wounded, having had no opportunity of getting into a battle, and his time expiring the day before he reached the front; but judging from the way he talks and shoots now, somebody would have been hurt on the other side—or ours if he had had a show. He is, therefore, worthy and well qualified. If we get the office—and I have no doubt we shall—I will give the new incumbent the benefit of my knowledge, and I think Clambank will be a model establishment. The first thing the new functionary must do is to subscribe to the U. S. MAIL, and carefully read and remember its teachings; he must fit his office up in respectable style, and have a proper case for letters and papers, instead of sticking them into bureau drawers, or old coat pockets, or throwing them about the floor for children and other domestic pets to play with and cover with smears, which is the case in some small offices. No newspapers will be opened and read, and then loaned out by the Postmaster, if they are addressed to any one else. I will impress upon his mind that this is not his business, nor his privilege, no matter what may be done elsewhere. If letters addressed to Concord or Cincinnati come to his office they will not be kept there because their destinations are spelled with a C, and might be intended for Clambank, but back they must go by the next mail. No letters will be opened out of curiosity, and indorsed "opened by mistake," without saying by whom it was done, and then kept six months if not called for before being forwarded to the D. L. Office. He will open and close his own mails, and not leave it for the stage-driver or mail-carrier to do while he eats his meals or goes fishing. He will be very particular in keeping a record of the registered matter that comes to his office, whether intended for it or sent there by mistake. He will not receive pay for a new stamp and put on an old one and hide the old canceling marks by a chicken-foot daub. If mail bags should accumulate, the canvas ones will not be used for grain sacks and the leather ones cut up for blacksmiths' aprons or to mend harness. The mail key will be kept in a secure place, where he can always find it, and not be carried about in his pocket to be lost, or thrown among wrappers or mail matter to be sent off in the bag—which is done, no doubt, sometimes. These and many more things will not be done—if we get the office—and I have no doubt of it, and a good many things will be done creditable to the service and satisfactorily to the people which I will detail to you, with your permission, when the institution gets under way.

The winter, thus far, has been rather a quiet one with us. We anticipated great sport on our rink (a pond-up stock concern), but the water would not freeze; we emptied an ice-house and paved it, but the joints of the block shrunk instead of uniting, and the surface looked more like a plowed field than anything else I can compare it to, and of course skating and sliding were out of the question. We were to have a course of lectures; but after the first one, on "The Age and Origin of the Onondaga Giant," the lecturer probably died, as we have never heard of him since. I thought at the time he would burst a blood vessel from the way he struggled and struck out with his legs and arms.

Independent of these little drawbacks we have got along middling well, and have game in abundance left. If Jane Mary's health does not soon improve we will take a trip South for her benefit, and if anything worthy of record in the post-office way comes under my observation, I will be glad to communicate it, as the passion for that kind of thing is as strong as ever. In the meantime, forward me the MAIL to Peach Blow, where we send for our letters and papers tri-weekly.

Ever truly yours, MONS. TONSON.

Letters addressed to street and number will be delivered accordingly, free of charge.

Collections from street letter-boxes are also free.

Postmasters, before rating book-packets for Great Britain, etc., should consult the Foreign Postage Table, for the rates according to weight.

☞ A comprehensive system of mail robbery has been discovered in Marseilles. Seven persons, who had combined for the purpose, carried their audacity to such a pitch that they actually robbed the waggon carrying the mails from the post office to the railway station, of a bag containing nearly three thousand letters. These criminals were put on their trial at the last session of the Bouches du Rhone, and convicted of stealing the letters, forging the requisite signatures to make the securities available for procuring the sums specified, and of passing the bank notes and disposing of whatever articles the letters contained. As one of these criminals was employed in a post office he was able to steal any letters that passed through his hands, as well as to take moulds of the keys which opened the letter boxes.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, August 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

Postmaster-General.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 29, 1870.

SIR—I inclose an important notice to postmasters and the public, respecting a reduction in the rate of international letter postage between the United States and the Netherlands, to take effect February 1, 1870, and request that you will please cause the same to be published in the February number of the U. S. MAIL.

I am, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Supt. Foreign Mails.

J. GAYLER, Editor U. S. MAIL, New York.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 29, 1870.

An additional Postal Convention has just been concluded between the United States and the Netherlands, reducing the rate of international letter postage on letters exchanged in closed mails via England, from 15 to 10 cents per single rate of 15 grammes (½ ounce) or under, prepayment optional, to take effect February 1, 1870.

The rates of postage, conditions of payment, etc., on newspapers, book-packets, and samples of merchandize, remain unchanged.

Postmasters will levy and collect postage accordingly, on and after February 1, 1870.

By order of the Postmaster General,
JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Supt. of Foreign Mails.

One More Step Needed.

We have alluded elsewhere to the probability, if not certainty, of the speedy removal of one incubus upon the Post Office Department, viz.: the Franking Privilege. We sincerely trust that this most salutary step in advance will soon be followed by another—we mean the enactment of a law that ALL MATTER DEPOSITED IN THE POST OFFICE FOR MAILING SHALL BE PREPAID AT THE MAILING OFFICE—including newspapers and periodicals sent to regular subscribers. In our opinion, prepayment on this class of matter can be secured without "imposing a tax on intelligence" (as some virtuous publishers call the requirement that they shall pay their postage like the thirty odd millions who don't publish newspapers pay theirs). In fact, the Department can well afford to reduce that "tax" by a reduction of thirty-three per cent. on the present rates.

Some curious arguments we have seen against this reform, but none more curious than this, from the New York World:

> If Congress were to require prepayment on all newspapers going through the mails, the press of the country, great and small, daily and weekly, city and country, would combine in protest; and we judge that such a protest would by Congress be heard and heeded.

Which proves—what? That such a requirement is unjust, oppressive or unnecessary? Not at all; but only that in the opinion of the World the united shriek of the publishing intetest would terrify the people's representatives into undoing what, when they did it, they must have thought wise and necessary. Perhaps it would; but perhaps the shriek would not be so loud as the World supposes. The New York Tribune, for instance, which would probably "suffer" as much as any other paper by such a change, says, replying to the statement we have quoted:

> The World may speak for itself on this point; it does not speak for the Tribune. We stand for the rule of prepayment for everything sent through the mails. If any one deposits a single copy of a periodical for transmission and delivery, let him pay the required postage; if a publisher sends half his edition for like treatment, let it be duly weighed when received at the Post Office, the proper postage thus ascertained, and that postage paid down on the nail. That will save the bother and delay of collecting it by pennies through the letter carriers and the risk of its non-receipt by the Department. We understand that only about $500,000 per annum is now realized by the Department from the postage of all printed matter, which cannot be one cent for every five sheets conveyed through the mails. Reduce the charge to two cents per pound or $40 per ton for all printed matter, when mailed in quantities of ten pounds or over, and far more postage would be realized than now, while, by the abolition of franking, the weight of the mails would be sensibly reduced. But let there be no deviation from the rule that everything deposited for transmission shall be charged with postage, and that this shall be paid in advance.

The postmasters throughout the country have done a good work by the assistance they have rendered in forwarding the movement for the abolition of the franking privilege. Can they not work with as hearty a good will to help along this scarcely less needed reform?

The Franking Privilege.

The House of Representatives has, by a very decisive vote, passed the bill for the abolition of the Franking Privilege. The bill now goes to the Senate, and as we write we learn that it has been reported upon favorably by the Senate Post Office Committee, without amendment. Before our next issue we hope to hear of its final passage and approval by the President. Whether or not such action is taken, however, there can be no doubt that public opinion on this subject has been so thoroughly aroused that this oppressive burden upon the Post Office Department must soon be removed. The administration of Postmaster-General CRESWELL will always be honorably distinguished through his able and fearless exposure of the evils of this gigantic obstacle to postal efficiency and improvement; and the support he has received from Hon. Mr. HILL (a name of good post-office omen) and others will be held in grateful remembrance by all who have the true interests of the Department and of the country at heart.

MONSIEUR TONSON ONCE MORE!—We feel assured that our readers will join us in welcoming the reappearance in our columns of our and their old friend, MONSIEUR TONSON. We really don't mean anything personal, but it strikes us that a more subdued tone than usual characterizes this latest effusion of our venerable correspondent. We have thought it possible that Jane Mary had revised his letter before allowing—(beg pardon; we mean before he posted it.) This would account for the change we think we detect in his style. The softening influence of the gentler sex is so well known that our inference can scarcely be considered far-fetched. That influence is so universally recognized that we hardly need the evidence contained in the poet's oft-quoted lines:

> "Oh, woman! in our hours of ease,
> Uncertain, coy, and hard to please;
> But seen too oft, familiar with thy faes,"
> Etc., etc., etc.

Proposed Postal Reforms.

By invitation of the Postmaster-General, a number of the Postmasters at the larger post offices, and certain Special Agents of the Department, assembled at Washington on the 12th ult., for consultation with him and among themselves, concerning such improvements and reforms in the Postal service, as their experience suggested. They were in session four days, and on the 15th presented the results of the conference in the following letter:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15, 1870.

To the Hon. A. J. CRESWELL, Postmaster-General:

SIR—The undersigned Postmasters and Special Agents having met at Washington, by your invitation, for consultation in regard to the general good to the Postal service, respectfully submit the following recommendations and suggestions:

REGISTRATION OF LETTERS.

First: That the registration fee on letters be reduced from 15 to 6 cents, and, in addition to said fee, the regular rate of postage as now fixed by law be continued.

Second: That at your discretion there be established agencies in the large cities for the registration of letters.

Third: That it would be expedient to establish a through registration service between the large post offices, either by the means of a combination lock or sealed pouch, thus avoiding the giving of intermediate receipts.

Fourth: We recommend the adoption of a more secure envelope for transmitting registered letters.

MONEY ORDERS, ETC.

That the fees for money orders in amounts not exceeding $10 be reduced to five cents.

That in view of the reduction in the fees for the registration of valuable letters and money, and for transmitting money by money orders, it is advisable for the Department to urge the public to use these means of transmission, and especially that attention be called to the case with which lost or missent letters or packages, when registered, may be traced; also to the certainty and safety of the money-order system, discouraging, as far as possible, the transmission of money and valuable papers by ordinary letters.

DEAD-LETTER OFFICE.

That at your discretion there be located in the Post Office of each large city an agent or deputy of the Dead-Letter Office, who, under the specific regulations of the Department, may open and properly dispose of such held for postage, matter that may come into said office, "request" letters excepted.

POSTAGE.

That all unsealed circulars, printed on single note or letter-sheet size of paper, all newspapers, weeklies excepted, and periodicals not exceeding four ounces in weight, dropped into a free delivery office for delivery by the office or its carriers, be rated at one cent., prepaid by stamp; periodicals weighing over four ounces, two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof. That authors' manuscript unsealed, for periodicals, and all publications, when passing between the publisher and author, be rated uniform with book manuscript. That during the coming week we will separately submit in writing to the Postmaster-General our views upon the feasibility of a reduction of the postage upon newspaper matter when mailed by the publisher, provided the same be prepaid by weight in bulk at the office of mailing, publishers being allowed to transmit specimen copies and to inclose their posters, prospectuses and supplements.

We recommend the postage on unsealed circulars, printed on letter or note-sheet size paper, be fixed by law at one cent each, prepaid by stamp, whether intended for local delivery, or for transmission through the mail.

That the Department be requested to furnish a one-cent stamped envelope for mailing circulars.

We respectfully recommend the Department to use every possible means to increase the use of stamped envelopes, with the writer's name indorsed or printed thereon.

LETTER CARRIERS.

That we are of opinion that the present system of uniform compensation in the carriers' service is inequitable, and we recommend a division of letter carrier offices into three classes, to wit: First class to consist of cities having a population of 100,000 or upward; second class, cities having a population of 50,000 and upward to 100,000; third class, cities having a population of 50,000 or less.

That carriers appointed to the cities of the first class should be compensated at $800 when appointed, and at the expiration of six months' service should be compensated at $900, and at the expiration of the next succeeding six months' service should be compensated at $1,000.

That carriers appointed to the cities designated as second class should be compensated at the rate of $700, when appointed, and at the expiration of six months' service should be compensated at the rate of $800, and at the expiration of the next succeeding six months' service should be compensated at the rate of $900 per annum.

That carriers appointed to cities designated as third class should be compensated at the rate of $600 when appointed, and at the expiration of six months' service should be compensated at the rate of $700, and at the expiration of the next succeeding six months' service should be compensated at $800 per annum. It is further submitted that carriers designated for appointment in second and third class cities may be employed at stations in the suburbs of large cities, on the recommendation of the Postmaster of said large city.

We submit that the result of our experience justifies the indorsement of the carrier system as being preferable to any existing service for general mail delivery in the large cities.

That we recommend legislation providing that no letter-carrier shall be removed from office except upon specific charges of misbehavior, incompetency, or detection in the violation of the Postal laws.

In our judgment it is advisable to use horses in connection with the free delivery service in the suburban districts.

THE NEW YORK AND BOSTON OFFICES.

That we have carefully examined the plans and designs for the New York and Boston Post Offices, as submitted by Supervising Architect A. B. Mullett, and commend the same as being thoroughly adapted to the wants of the Department in the respective cities, and we feel that the early completion of said buildings is demanded by the exigencies of the postal service.

STREET LETTER BOXES.

That we condemn the street letter box now furnished the Department under the contract known as the "Strong Patent," and we would respectfully recommend the adoption of a street letter box about one and a half feet in length, about six inches in depth, and twelve inches in width, with an opening at the top sufficiently large to receive newspapers and magazines; the openings or receptacles specially protected from the weather, with a curved top to carry off the water, and a door in the side or front with side flanges to take the matter from; and that the hours for collection be distinctly shown upon the outside of the box. Upon the request of the Postmaster at any office the aforesaid described box should be furnished with an aperture for the reception of letters only.

POSTAGE STAMPS AND GUM.

We have carefully examined the specimens of the new series of postage stamps as submitted by the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, and heartily approve of the steps taken by the Department to provide this series, which, in our opinion, is more in accordance with our national character, and in better taste than the stamp now used. We further recommend the special attention of the Department to the securing of a safer and better article of gum for the new stamp about to be adopted.

FREE DELIVERY.

That all have carefully examined the existing regulations of the Department for the free delivery service, and have indicated in detail, on the margin of the printed regulations relating to the same, and submitted herewith, the various changes which we respectfully submit for your consideration.

FRANKING PRIVILEGES.

That we avail ourselves, on this occasion, to express our approval and earnest indorsement of the efforts now making by the President and Postmaster-General to secure the abolition of the franking privilege.

SAMUEL SMITH " "

Sundry Post-office Matters.

We take up first a letter which has a rich golden ring, and at the same time a "good word" for the registry system. It is from a place in Oregon where greenbacks are very scarce and remittances have to be made in gold dust. According to our correspondent, the 'dust is inclosed in tin boxes, four inches wide, six to ten inches long, and half to three-fourths of an inch thick, open at the end till filled, when a cap is soldered over it." These boxes are sent by mail and registered, and we are informed over three hundred and fifty ounces of gold dust were safely sent in this way during the last postal quarter. One hundred and ninety-three registered letters, about one-half of them containing gold dust, and sent from that office in one quarter, and not one loss reported. Though gold dust is not included in the list of mailable matter, it must not be thought that the stealing it from the mails is not a postal offence. Gold dust, with the wrapper or case, is a postal packet, containing an article of value, and as such comes with the scope of section 399, Laws of 1866. . . . Our correspondent from Illinois, who cannot find any law for sending letters to Canada West free of postage is informed, that there is no such law; they may be sent not prepaid, but not free of postage. We can give no reason why the Department does not furnish the Regulations to Postmasters free of charge. Though, by the change made the book becomes the personal property of the postmaster, we cannot doubt but that he will be allowed credit for it, when he turns over to his successor the books—including the Regulations—and papers of his office..... A postmaster who is allowed by the Department fifty dollars a month for clerk hire, and takes a receipt for that amount, while he pays only thirty dollars, is in plain words a perjured thief, and if reported to the Department would undoubtedly meet with some punishment, if not to the extent he deserves. We have not a very high opinion of a clerk who would lend himself to a fraud of this kind; in fact, we think an office with such managers should be thoroughly cleaned out.....A letter on swindlers claims our attention. The Postal Department has taken bold of this matter with a determination to put a stop to the use of the mails for this business; but it must be considered that it takes two parties to make a swindle, as well as to make a bargain, with this difference, that in the one case both parties may be innocent, while in the other only one may be, or both may be, rogues. Now, the party who sends ten dollars to pay for a gold watch worth two hundred and fifty, which he has drawn as a prize on a ticket he never 'sent for, or even saw, and in a gift enterprise whose managers he does not know, may be very innocent, but if so, is very "green." We advise all such to go to their nearest neighbor, who has a two hundred and fifty dollar horse, and offer ten dollars for him. If the offer is accepted, then send ten dollars for a two hundred and fifty dollar watch; but if not accepted, to keep his ten dollars, and conclude that gold watches, as well as horses, are worth their value. But there are cases of swindling where the victims are hardly deserving of censure, and certainly not for cupidity. We allude to those cases where people have been misled by specious and well-written prospectuses of publications, for which they send money, and receive only one or two numbers. These publications, if conducted according to the prospectuses, would be welcome visitors to a family and do credit to the tastes of the subscribers. There is no way to guard against this kind of fraud, however, but to know the character of the publication and its publishers from actual experience, and not judge of them by prospectuses, handbills, circulars or advertisements. We are sorry to say that even an advertisement appearing in a respectable and influential paper is no evidence that the truth of the advertisement can be relied on. It is not pleasant to make this assertion, but if through it the public become more wary in being misled and swindled, and such papers more careful in the admission of advertisements, we will have done great good, the pleasure of which will far outweigh the pain the assertion has caused. We have at hand a very popular magazine, the circulation of which is numbered by hundreds of thousands; on looking over its advertisements, we find one of a revolving pistol for sale at $1 50. Now, can any man of common sense suppose such a pistol, good for anything, can be sold at such a price? And yet many finding the advertisement in their favorite magazine will be misled to think so, and be swindled through that very advertisement.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Attendance at an Office.—J. S., F——, Md.—A postmaster is required to take the precaution in all cases to appoint an assistant, etc. See section 22, Regulations of 1866. This is what you should have done on taking charge of your office. In cases where it has not been done, and yet it is absolutely necessary to leave an office on short notice, a person might be temporarily employed, without taking the oath, but such person would, nevertheless, be liable to all the penalties incurred by infraction of postal laws, the same as if he had taken the oath. Sec. 52, Laws 1866.

Walnut Meats.—G. R. F., E—— S——, N. Y.—We do not find walnut meats mentioned in the list of mailable matter, hence the postage should be at letter rates. We judge the party who called them Seeds, and wished them rated as such, must be of the class whom our "Postal Information" last month was intended to educate.

Missing Letters.—A. C. S., C——, B—— S——, Mass.—There is no penalty for missending letters, but where it is so frequently done as to show willful carelessness, the matter should be reported to the First Assistant Postmaster-General.

Unpaid Letters.—G. K. D., M——, N. Y.—With four unpaid letters and only nine cents in the letter box, to decide to which letters to apply the payment, is a problem not yet solved by the Department, and which is beyond our skill in figures. We know a clerk who, in such cases, used to "toss up," and probably that was the only way. Strictly speaking, a postmaster is not called on to decide, and he would be justified in sending all such letters to the Dead-Letter Office. Parties who cannot procure stamps should wrap their letters and money together and then there would be no chance of mistake.

Departure of Mails, etc.—A. E. M., B——, O.—1. If a mail carrier does not depart at the proper time, he should be reported to the Department, either in the regular register of arrivals and departures, or specially, according to the circumstances. 2. You have no right to examine any sealed matter. Sec. 71, Reg. 1866. But letters addressed to fictitious persons or firms are not to be delivered. Sec. 60, Reg. 1866. 3. Collection papers may be sent to the Paymaster-General free of postage. Have you read section 124 of regulations of 1866? If not, do so at once.

Ribbon Marking Stamps.—O. B. M., L—— R——, Pa.—Ribbon marking stamps can be purchased of E. D. Chamberlain, 79 Nassau street, New York. You can clean your marking stamp with benzine. The sample you send looks as if your ink pad was bad. Make one of buckskin or some soft, strong tenther: stuff it with wool.

Separating Office, Etc.—S. G., J——, O.—1. A Separating Office is one where mails from other offices are separated and forwarded. 2. All offices are allowed envelopes for registry business, and why you are not supplied we are unable to say; probably your requisition is not distinct and clear, and by itself. See Sec. 34, Reg. 1866.

Request Letters.—G. P. L., W——, Ind.—A request letter, the request on which does not state to what place the letter should be returned, and which has the post-mark illegible, should be sent to the Dead-Letter Office at the expiration of time stated in the request.

Transcript of Unpaid Letters Sent.—H. C. S., H——, Mass.—No account of mails sent should now be kept, consequently a transcript of such an account is not required to be sent with the Quarterly Returns.

Newsdealers.—C. S., U——, N. Y.—A written bill in a newsdealers' package does not subject the package to letter postage.

Delivery of Mails.—C. V. M., G——, N. Y.—At all offices within eighty rods of a railroad station the mails must be delivered by the railway company.

Post-Office Balances.—G. J., O——, Pa.—The Appointment Office supplies letter balances. Sec. 16, Reg. 1866.

Compensation or Salary.—J. H., T——, Conn., and A. W., P—— R——, Pa.—We have repeatedly stated that we have no means of giving information respecting the salary of any individual office. We can explain the law and the method upon which salaries are adjusted, but as we have said, why the salary of any particular office is adjusted on a few dollars more or less we have no proper means of knowing.

Lottery Circulars.—W. S. C., M—— H——, O.—Section 13 of the Act of July 27, 1868, provides that "it shall not be lawful to deposit in a post office to be sent by mail, any letters or circulars concerning lotteries," etc. Any matter positively known to be such should be sent to the Dead Letter Office.

Post Routes.—A. P., L——, O.—Post routes are established by law, but the service on such routes is ordered and regulated by the Postmaster-General, to whom you should apply, or to the Member of Congress for your district.

Delivery of Printed Matter.—D. M., D——, Mass.—Printed matter deposited by newsdealers is not entitled to be delivered free, except weekly newspapers published in the county.

Closing of Mails.—R. C., M——, Wis.—Except at some of the larger offices, mails may not be closed till half an hour before the time fixed for their departure, unless their departure is between 9 o'clock P. M. and 5 A. M. And they should be delivered immediately on their arrival. Sec. 76, Reg. 1866.

Drafts on Europe.—H. W. B., N—— L——, O.—Drafts on Europe can only be procured through the usual bankers, except in the case of Switzerland, with which country a money-order system is in operation.

Place of Publication of a Magazine, etc.—J. C. R., S——, N. Y.—The publication office of a magazine is where it is issued to the public and to subscribers, and where the business is generally done, although it may be printed elsewhere. The manuscript for such magazine is chargeable at letter rates, but it is proposed to reduce the rates to the same as those charged for book manuscript.

Signature to Money-order Report.—W. B. B., F—— D——, Iowa.—The Regulations provide that the sureties, or one of them, should take charge of an office on the death of a postmaster, and we consider that this should have been done in the case in question. You should then sign the surety's name as acting P. M. by your own, as clerk.

Office Hours.—G. W. H., W——, O.—We cannot decide upon the hours that any one post office should be kept open. The Regulations require it to be done "the usual business hours of the place," and this must be decided by local custom. Though we cannot think that it is necessary to keep an office open till 11 or 12 o'clock at night, because one or two shops or stores are not closed till that time. In most localities, 8 o'clock is late enough, unless a mail arrives about that time. The intention is to afford facilities to people to get their mail matter after the arrival of a mail.

Carrying Letters out of the Mail.—W. F. D.—A mail-carrier should not receive letters after the mail has closed, unless there is good reason to think they could not have been posted in proper time. Sec. 99, Reg. 1866.

Exchanges.—L. P. H., W—— E—— C——, Wis.—Exchanges are usually designated by an X on the wrapper, though without it there is little chance of making a mistake, as they should be addressed to the publisher or by the name of the paper to which they are sent.

Account of Franked Matter.—In reply to very many postmasters who have addressed us on this subject, we state that the Order of the Postmaster-General to keep an account of the franked and free matter embraces all such matter, that sent by postmasters on official business as well as other.

Registration.—H. C., H——, Nev.—The person who sent the letter is entitled to the return registered letter receipt. Sec. 13, Reg'n Reg., 1868.....D. W. P., H——, N. Y.—Registered package envelopes received, containing letters, should be kept on file at least six months, and then sent to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General.....J. L., S——, H——, Mass.—The numbering of Registered Letters should commence anew with "1" at the beginning of each quarter (see Instructions at the head of the registered letter bills), the same also with the numbering of registered package envelopes (Sec. 11, Reg'n Reg.), but these numberings have no relation to each other; you may put a dozen letters, numbered from 1 to 12, in one registered package envelope numbered, say, 1, your next letter would be number 13, while the next package envelope should be number 2.....W. K. McM., O——, O.—You have not the latest registration regulations—those of October 1, 1868—in which it is provided that the letter bills should be separated, the origioal bill to accompany the letters in the registered package envelope, and the return bill, properly filled up, to be sent in a red envelope, specially provided for the purpose, by the same mail. Sec. 10, Reg'n Reg., 1868. You should send to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General for a copy of these regulations.....R. E. M., M——, O.—1. The final destination of registered letter bills and return bills is the paper mill. They should be kept on hand for at least two years, when they may be sold and the proceeds credited to the Department, under item 18 of the quarterly account current.

Postage.—W. K., S——, N. Y.—The quarterly postage on a semi-monthly weighing four ounces or less is six cents. Sec. 202, Reg. 1866.....M. L. B., G—— S——, O.—Postage should be collected on all insufficiently prepaid matter that is received at an office, although no bill accompanies it. Secs. 150, 151, Reg. 1866.....H. J. B., A——, Ind.—A monthly journal which weighs five ounces is subject to a postage of six cents a quarter. Sec. 202, Reg. 1866. The postage on a dress pattern, that is, the material for a dress, should be charged at letter rates; but if you mean a paper pattern by which to cut a dress, the postage should be charged at rates of miscellaneous matter, viz., two cents for four ounces, unless the pattern has writing on it, which would subject it to letter rates.....P. H. G., L——, Ind.—1. Postage on transient printed matter is two cents for four ounces or fraction thereof, and should invariably be prepaid. Secs. 148 and 251, Reg. 1866. 2. Letters not prepaid one full rate should be sent to the Dead-Letter Office. Sec. 360, Reg. 1866. 3. Quarterly returns must be sworn to.....P. P. W., P——, Conn.—By section 250, laws of 1866, the postage on book manuscript is fixed at two cents for four ounces, without any restriction in address, whether of author or publisher, while section 244 provides that book manuscript passing between author and publisher may pass at the rate of printed matter, and this seems to be the meaning and spirit of the law.....H. N., L—— L——, and W. R. B., N—— C——, Cal.—A postmaster is not obliged to receive postage stamps or stamped envelopes in payment of postage on regular papers received. Stamps are for the purpose of prepaying postage at the mailing office.....R. E. W., M——, O.—1. Two regular newspapers, though weighing together less than four ounces, cannot be folded in one wrapper and pass at the quarterly rate for one paper; the rate is for each paper. 2. The Laws and Regulations of 1866 are the latest issued, but they have been modified and changed in many places. All such modifications and changes are published in the UNITED STATES MAIL, and this, with the table of Foreign Postages and other matters, makes the MAIL invaluable and indispensable in the proper conducting of a post office.

POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. X., NO. 6. NEW YORK, MARCH, 1870. WHOLE NO. 114.

LOST IN THE POST-OFFICE.

BY HESBA STRETTON.

[CONCLUDED.]

About five weeks after old Lawrence's death I received a summons to present myself before the post-office surveyor of the district, a Mr. Talbot, who lived sixteen miles or so from Thornbury. He, too, was an old friend of our family, and had succeeded in obtaining the post office for my father. He was one of those jovial, courteous old gentlemen of a past generation, who liked to make his own, and every one's life as easy and agreeable as possible, and who had somewhat of an aristocratic contempt for the exacting public—far less exacting then than now. I received a cordial greeting from him, was set down to a good dinner, and forbidden to speak of business until he began, which he did over our wine.

"Now, Harry, just tell me all about it as shortly as possible," said Mr. Talbot: and I obeyed him.

"But this is a dence of a mess!" he exclaimed, when I had finished. "The will must be found, sir. The authorities insist upon it, and I will not answer for the consequences if there is much longer delay. Do you know what your townsfolk are saying, my boy?"

His manner had changed from consternation to anger, and then into compassion, as he spoke; but I only looked into his friendly face and shook my head in reply.

"They say just this," he continued, "neither more nor less—that the will is in your own possession. They say you are going to marry Parson Lawrence's only daughter, and by keeping back the will you expect him to come into possession of all the property."

"I should be a fool if I did," I answered, stammering; for this phase of my position had not failed to occur to me.

"A confounded fool," he added, dryly; "the estate will be thrown into Chancery, and the lawyers will get the best pickings out of it. Come, Harry, we are old friends; I knew you when you were a baby, and your father and mother years before. You might tell me anything, my boy."

"Thank you," I cried, grasping his offered hand, "but I have nothing more to tell. I swear I know no more about the will than you do."

"Could anybody else know of its being in your office besides you and the clerks?" asked Mr. Talbot.

Strange to say—so strange that I marveled at it myself—until that moment I had altogether forgotten, or it had been kept back from recurring to my memory, that Katie had been with me when my mother's agonized voice called to me. Like some vivid revelation made by a flash of lightning, lurid and blinding, came back the position in which we stood, and the last words I had uttered. The events which followed had been so hurried and engrossing, the sleep succeeding to them so exhausting, that the impression must have been, for the time, almost obliterated. It returned all the keener now; and my pulse stood still, and my heart sank heavily. Katie had been there: Katie had seen her uncle's will; I had left her behind me in the office alone.

I answered incoherently, stammered, contradicted myself, and at last, for almost the only time in my life, fairly burst into tears. Never did a poor, weak wretch appear more guilty than I did. My friend—for he was truly my friend—urged me, implored of me, in vain, to confess all, and make him the confidant of my temptations and my fault: he gave it no harsher name. It was impossible for me to cast a suspicion upon Katie, though as I come to think quietly over it in my bedroom—I stayed all night at Mr. Talbot's—I could not banish from me the dread misgiving that here lay the solution of the mystery. I said to myself that at first it would be nothing but a girl's thoughtless curiosity which had changed into shame and terror upon facing the consequences of her action; and that every day had made it more impossible for her to own her fault. Then returned powerfully to me the fascination the mere sight of the will had exercised over me, and the conjecture which had rushed to my brain as I sat staring at it. A tenth part of such a temptation, I was inclined to argue, would be too strong for the curiosity of a woman, especially a woman the most deeply interested in its contents. Yet Katie was so good, so simple-minded, so religious; should I be forced to lose my faith in her? No; I could not believe her capable of a dishonorable and criminal action. Yet where, then, was the will?

It will be readily credited that I did not sleep that night, and that I was haggard and miserable-looking in the morning. The surveyor made a last effort to gain my confidence, and my agitated reserve produced upon him the impression that I was guilty. The last sentence he uttered, with unusual sternness, was to the effect that unless the will was speedily found, there was no hope of my retaining my office, even if my father kept his, being shielded by his dangerous illness at the time.

I rode homeward, wretched enough, and found Snape awaiting my return. Mr. Grey had gone back to London, after staying no more than a few days in Thornbury.

"Nothing discovered yet?" said Soape.

"Nothing," I answered despondently. "If there was, you'd have no need to come to me. I should be only too glad to let you know."

"It heats everything in my professional experience," he continued.

"That's no satisfaction to me," I said in a testy tone; "the question is, what is to be done if the will does not turn up at all?"

"The very question all the relatives are asking," replied Snape. "Mr. Lawrence drew up the will himself, gave me no hint of its contents and has left no copy. We are, every one of us, utterly in the dark as to his intentions. We cannot proceed as if he had died intestate; all the world knows he did not; and no one has a legal right to touch a penny of his property."

"Will it be thrown into Chancery?" I asked.

"There will be nothing else for it if the will is not found," he said; "and, to let you into a secret which concerns you, some of the relatives are talking of a prosecution against you. But I ask them, What proof have you that Mr. Henry Slaney has abstracted this document? The abstraction of any letter or packet from the post office is felony, such letter or packet being the property of the Post-master-General during its transit, and the penalty is penal servitude or transportation. But how can the felony be proved? There may be good grounds for suspicion, strong and presumptive evidence—his own admission of having received the document and a sufficient motive; but there is no positive proof, and could be no positive proof, unless it was found in his possession or proved to have been in his possession or in the possession of some individual who could only have received it from him."

"It's a pleasant position to be in," said I, biting at my nails viciously, which is no habit of mine, but which seemed to come naturally to me in these circumstances.

"If the will could only be found," answered Mr. Snape, with a provoking significance of tone, "all might be smoothed over even now."

"If it could only be found!" I said, over and over again to myself. As soon as the solicitor was gone, I went up-stairs to my mother's usual sitting-room. My father had that morning been pronounced well enough to leave his room for a few hours, and he was sitting in an easy-chair near the fire, with a faint smile upon his sunken face which grew stronger when he saw me. It was a little brightness in the deepening gloom closing around me, and I forced a smile to my lips.

"All going on well down-stairs, Harry?" he said.

"Why not?" I answered, evasively; "why not? The work is simple enough."

He was easily satisfied about that, but not so easily about myself. What had I been over to Mr. Talbot about? What made me look so pale and anxious? Was there any coolness between Katie and me?"

"She is a girl after my own heart," said my father, warmly, "a perfect treasure. Don't you let her slip through your fingers, Harry. By the by, now we are alone, tell me how poor Lawrence made his will and what he has done for Katie—something handsome, I hope? Your mother would not let me speak about it for fear of excitement."

I hesitated for a moment, but so briefly that he did not notice it.

"The will cannot be found," I said.

"Not found!" he repeated.

"Yes," I continued, hurriedly, "but every search is being made for it. Snape is positive that there was a will executed a few months ago, but all he knows of the contents is that you and Mr. Grey are the executors."

"Poor Lawrence!" sighed my father. "Do you think they have searched his laboratory well? It is not unlikely he would deposit it there in his cabinet. Tell them to leave no corner unsearched in the laboratory."

I promised to do so, and made haste to get away. In the drawing-room I found Katie, in her morning dress and bonnet, come in to go a walk with my sisters, who luckily had just started off before her arrival. She advanced to meet me with both hands stretched out, and with her usual frank, pleasant, calm smile upon her face. There was no one there and I stooped down to kiss her, feeling myself an unhappy, guilty wretch, as if I were the culprit and unworthy to lay my lips upon her smooth fair forehead, which grew rosy with my kiss.

"Harry!" she murmured in a tone of remonstrance.

"I am so miserable, Katie," said I; and on the instant I resolved to lay before her my position, to exaggerate it even, to paint it in the blackest colors; and then to make it plain to her that, could the will be found, all might yet be explained away and smoothed over without any public exposure. I did my best and acquitted myself so well that she shed torrents of tears, her head resting upon my shoulder; but not a syllable did she utter which in the slightest degree hinted or betrayed that she had any knowledge of the missing will.

"Katie," I said, when I had exhausted all my eloquence, "you understand that no one now will come into possession of your uncle's property?"

"No one!" she cried, lifting up head and looking earnestly in my face. "I thought, if there was no will, my father would have everything. You said he was heir-at-law and I should be a great heiress. It will not signify if you do lose your situation, Harry; I shall have enough for us both; and, if everyone in the world thought you guilty, I should know you were innocent."

"But it will be thrown into Chancery instead of coming to anybody," I said, a cold, hard feeling toward her creeping over me.

"But Chancery could do nothing after all but give the landed property to my father," she persisted; "there can be no nearer heir, and if the will is lost it is the same as there being no will—if Chancery has any sense," she added, half gayly.

Very heavy indeed grew my heart. I attempted again to impress upon her the position in which her father, herself and all the relatives stood; but she either could not understand it or would not believe it. If it came to the worst, she answered, they would all agree to some arrangement for the division of the property, and her father, being the eldest and the heir-at-law, would receive the largest share. She would be an heiress, and why need I fret myself about a paltry place in the post office?

I could not for the very life of me look her in the face and say, "Katie, is it possible that you were over-tempted and took the will?" Yet I could not shake off the growing conviction that this was the truth. I despair of conveying to you the hundredth part of the mad seething conflict of my feelings during the next few weeks—my love for Kate Lawrance, my disappointment, my strong desire to believe her innocent, my pity for her, my close vigilance upon every word and glance which fell from her, my terror lest the truth should become known to any one else. There could be no suspicion of her in any heart but mine, which loved her so truly, and was willing to endure mistrust, cold looks and angry insinuations for her sake, yet which every day was growing colder toward her, and more full of severe judgments upon her crime. Expectation was dying away in the town, and hope was almost dead within me.

It was not possible to keep the secret any longer from my father, when he became able to attend to business. A London surveyor, accompanied by a detective, came down to investigate the matter thoroughly; but they could learn no more than was already generally known. It was a severe trouble to my father, and serious consequences threatened him in spite of his plea of sudden and dangerous illness. The fact that he was one of the executors told against him with the strangers who were appointed to investigate the affair; for they appeared to argue that he might have taken possession of the will, though it was illegal to do so after it had once been proved, and for some reason or other suppressed it, throwing the onus of the loss upon the post office.

When nothing could be discovered by the surveyor or detective, old Lawrence's relatives held a family meeting to consult upon what was best to be done. But it was not very clear what the law would permit them to do in such circumstances; and there was not one of them who would have agreed to proceed as if he had died intestate. Every lawyer in Thornbury had given some opinion, and received a fee for it, upon the point; but nothing was clear and certain.

These were the most miserable three months that ever passed over my head. The changed faces of my townsmen, the suspicion attaching to me, and the near prospect of ignominiously losing my post, were hard to bear. But the deepening conviction of Katie's guilt, and my gradually decreasing love for her, were incomparably harder. She did not fail to feel the coldness and distrust of my manner, and being a girl of spirit she did not fail to mark the change by a corresponding change in herself. I pondered over such questions as these—how was the will made, and what had she done with it? Had she destroyed it? Or was it still in existence to be discovered, perhaps, at some future day to work a just judgment upon her? However it might be, I knew that my Katie was lost to me forever; yet not for worlds would I throw upon her the burden of suspicion which weighed so heavily upon me.

The last day of the year came. There had been a semi-official letter in the morning from Mr. Talbot, intimating that the people of Thornbury were dissatisfied at my retaining an important and confidential place in the post office, and that their complaints were about to be noticed from headquarters. My father, only partially recovered, was very low, and my mother and sisters cried at intervals during the day. I found myself as usual, in the office about the same hour in the evening as when old Lawrence's will was brought in and laid before me on the counter, just as I had finished and folded up the quarterly money-order account. Another quarter was ended, and I said, with some bitterness of tone, "that there could be no objection to me making up the account once again. The forms upon which they were drawn out were kept in a small drawer in the counter, and I found them packed rather tightly, having evidently been pushed in in some haste and confusion. The drawer would only open with a sharp jerk, and as I gave it, I heard a sound of something falling behind, while the drawer came out in my hand. I stooped to look what had fallen, and—you will have guessed already—there lay old Lowrence's will, looking precisely as it had done when it lay on the counter before me, directed to "R. Grey, Esq., Mitre Buildings, The Temple, London."

I gave a great shout, which made my father spring up from his desk, and I fell down on my knees before the empty space where the drawer had been, scarcely able to stretch out my hand to touch the will. How it had got there was plain enough to me. I had left it lying among the forms, which were not unlike it in shape and size, and the clerks, coming in in their hurried and unaccustomed work, had cleared the counter after a summary fashion, by sweeping them all away together into the drawer beneath, which was used for no other purpose, and never opened except on the last days of March, June, September and December. It had been lying there all the while, under my hand a score of times a day, while I had been suffering one of the bitterest conflicts a man can suffer for it.

When I looked round, with the will in my trembling hand, there stood my father and the two clerks from the outer office, who had rushed in on hearing my shout, while through the door which they had left open, a lucky unit of the public surveyed the scene.

"Old Lawrence's will!" I gasped, and the unit immediately darted into the streets to proclaim the discovery.

Almost before I could recover my voice, which sounded choked and unnatural in my own ears, or had risen from my knees and picked up the fallen drawer, the outer office was invaded by a crowd of excited and anxious inquirers, some of whom pressed into our sanctum, and began shaking hands with me in that frenzy of good-will and congratulation which now and then breaks out among the sympathizing public.

Old Lawrence's relatives were not long behind their townspeople; they came in agitated numbers, Katie and her father among them, with Mr. Grey, who had been spending his Christmas at Thornbury. She looked pale, and my heart smote me for my base, treacherous, insane suspicions of her. She neither glanced at me nor spoke to me, and when my father invited all the relatives and Mr. Snape to go on into the house, she passed me, as I stood humbly at the door, with averted eyes and a high, dignified carriage.

As both Grey and Snape were present, it was unanimously agreed that the will should be opened and read upon the spot. Several persons, with no immediate interest in it, had made their way into our drawing-room, and as nobody seemed inclined to turn them out, I also remained, standing against the fireplace, and watching steadfastly for some guidance from Katie's eyes.

Mr. Snape opened the will sharply, and started off at reading it, with none of his professional deliberation and delay, but as if he was as eager to get at its contents as any person present. It was a short document, and did not take many minutes to get through at the pace he read it. The property was worth about £70,000; thirty thousand of which was left in legacies to old Lawrence's brothers and sister, and the residue bequeathed to the testator's beloved niece, Catherine Lawrence, on the sole condition that she married Henry Slaney, the son of his old friend, George Slaney, postmaster of Thornbury. If otherwise, it was to be divided equally among his brothers and sister.

All that followed may easily be guessed. I had to make a thousand protestations of my love, and implore Katie again and again to consent to be my wife—a thing which we had both taken for granted years before old Lawrence's will was lost in the Post Office. My situation remained my own, until she relented, which she did not do until by my father's advice I confessed to her the reasons which had caused my change of manner toward her—the painful suspicions which had thrust themselves upon me, and the bitter sorrow they had produced. We were married at last, to the concealed disappointment and chagrin of her affectionate relatives; and I ceased to be among the number of Post-office clerks.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

CLAMBANK N. J.,
Feb., 1870.

Clambank is a post town—Clambonk has a post office, and Ptolemy Lawl, Esq., or, as he is familiarly called Tollol, is Postmaster. The arrivol of our first mail created a sensation. The night before the eventful day, a meeting of the inhabitants was held in the lecture-room of the church (we call it the lecture-room during the week, for the pulpit candles are not lighted) for the purpose of adopting the proper measures to receive our first mail with becoming honors. Pastor Moddle was appointed master of ceremonies, with unlimited powers, and nobly he sustained himself. He returned thanks for the honor conferred upon him in a neat little speech, and wound up by imparting to his hearers the electrifying intelligence that, "to-morrow Clambank will be in postal communication with America, Asia and Africa, and all the proud cities of the world." There was but little sleeping done in our village that night. Everybody was feverish with excitement, and music was the only soothing application. In fact, we got up quite a concert at Mr. Moddle's. We all sung. The instrumentational part of the entertainment, consisting of a parlor organ, an accordion, a German flute and a triangle, was not to be sneezed at.

Everybody was astir betimes in the morning, and as soon as breakfast was over and the dishes washed, the best bib and tucker were put on by the ladies, and the other suit by the gentlemen—and we were ready. A procession was formed, to march out to meet the mail carrier; and four little girls, arrayed in four very short-waisted white dresses, and wearing sashes over their left shoulders, made out of blue mosquito netting, ornamented with rosettes of yellow paper, were placed in front. I tell you, sir, it was an imposing sight, and every one was in raptures.

The march to the hill-top, from whence the road beyond could be see for miles, was made with appropriate music from the accordion, flute and triangle, and the last of the line had just got there when we perceived the post coming. At the suggestion of Pastor Moddle, the column opened and fell back, so as to allow the Government messenger to pass between and receive its salutations; but this individual was either too fatigued, too much surprised by the demonstration, or too ignorant to know what it meant, for he stopped suddenly, and, staring round impertinently, he shouted out gruffly:

"What's your letter-shop?" And before any one could reply, he continued, "Here's a salt sack for the Postmaster—what is he?"

Of course this conduct took all the romance out of the affair, and disconcerted all our plans, and Lawl at once stepped forward and proclaimed himself, and was handed a very dirty canvas sack, tied with a string, which he threw over his arm, and started for his office—the procession breaking rank and following. At the request of the postmaster, being duly sworn, I assisted in opening the mail, which was quite as large as could have been anticipated, and in a little while the institution was open for business, and the citizens quietly repaired to their homes. I told Lawl it was wrong in the P. M. at Peachblow to send an unlocked bag, and that under no circumstances must he ever be guilty of such an impropriety, and he will not, I am sure; but the mail-carrier, who was present, impertinently remarked that I wasn't the Postmaster-General, and if postmasters wanted to send mail bags locked, or tied, or wide open, it was their business. He had been carrying mails for many a year, and he knowed plenty of offices that sent tied bags. I showed him, from the P. O. Regulations, chap. 9, secs. 85 and 86, what was said upon the subject, and suggested to the P. M. to write to the P. M. at Peachblow, which he did, and the bags have come all right since. I am a little afraid, however, that Lawl will not wear well. A visit to Peachblow, and a conversation with the P. M. there, has evidently inflated his ideas of the postal business, and he already talks of making application for allowances to meet imaginary increased expenses. He is going to ask for clerk hire. I told him he needed no clerk; he said he knew that, but if he got the allowance and did the work himself he was entitled to the pay. He said the Peachblow official got an allowance for clerk hire, a part of which he paid to a small boy, taking a receipt for the full amount, and the balance he put in his own pocket. I showed him what the last UNITED STATES MAIL said on this subject, and it rather disturbed his fine dreams. Post-office clerks are not at best paid very exorbitant salaries, and the postmaster who fraudulently appropriates a portion of their earnings is as mean as he is dishonest. He was further advised by his official neighbor that he could make money by renting boxes to "city speculators" (I told him that meant swindlers), who would use his P. O. for their address, and send or come for their letters at intervals. I explained to him what this meant, and although he appeared to comprehend the trickery of the thing, and the position he would occupy as a confederate, by furnishing facilities whereby the public could be cheated, still he acted and spoke as if he had a right to make money out of his office in any manner, so long as he accommodated our citizens and paid the Department what he owed it. Several other smart "dodges" were put into his head, all of which he took a fancy to, and all of which I denounced, to his apparent dissatisfaction. His statements, however, excited my curiosity, and I felt anxious to see his counsellor, and feigning a business-call to Peachblow, I determined to look into the P. O. there in my quiet way, and I did.

Now, you must understand that P. is quite a place. It has a population running into the thousands, and in the course of the year manages to transact a large amount of mercantile, manufacturing and agricultural business, and the post office, therefore, is an important accessory. The office is in the rear of a deep room, and to reach it one has to pass between a newspaper, gift jewelry and musical instrument affair on one side, and a candy, cigar, root-beer and mineral-water establishment on the other—in both of which the P. M. is interested, and in one or the other of which his clerk spends much time, which should be devoted to office duties. When I entered, about a dozen young men and half-grown boys were crowded in the avenue, and vigorously engaged in whistling an accompaniment to this clerk, who was agonizingly pumping "Shoo-Fly Don't Bodder Me,' out of an accordion. Never, I believe, since the earth was made was such an orchestra arrayed. Discord herself must have been dismayed by it. Several ladies and children attempted to get to the office, but a shake of the head or a shout of "Nothing," loud enough to be heard over the fearful clamor, turned them away—the enthusiastic musician in the meantime ceaselessly continued to blow his bellows. I was about to retire, supposing as a matter of course the Postmaster was out, when a loud knocking in the back of the room instantly silenced the concert, and a squeaking voice followed from the same direction, saying, "Shut up out ther', will yer? You'll kill all the cows 'round here with yer dog gon'd Shoo-Fly business—and you, Gabe (the euphonious name of the clerk), come yer and 'tend office, I must go out and get some more 'Godfrey's Cordial,'" to which Gabe responded, sotto voce, and slyly winking to his cronies, 'Godfrey's Cordial!' Godfrey's rum, ten cents a pint, and dear at that!"

Gabriel, however, obeyed the summons, and in a few moments the genius of the place made his appearance. His lathy frame was surmounted by a long, thin head, which looked as though it had been kept in a press until permanent triangles were made of his mouth and eyebrows; the upper part of his cheek bones stuck out like door knobs, and his nose was so pinched that the share of respiration usually performed by that feature, must have been added to the labor of the mouth, or else transferred to the ears. His hair was a bright yellow, and he wore a suit of the same color, and in repose he would have passed muster anywhere for a gold-beater's sign. As he was about to pass me I bowed, when he paused, and asked if I was waiting for anything. "Nothing in particular," I replied: "I am from Clambank, and as I was here on a little business, I thought I would just drop in and take a look at your post office, as we recently"— "Jest stop wher' y'ar," he abruptly broke in; "I guess I know you—you're the man that's bin tryin' to learn Tol Lawl how to run his machine out thar." I admitted the correctness of his statement by a nod, and he continued: "You ain't learnt him much yit, I reckon, from the way he talks. You outsiders think you know mor'n anybody else, but I bet you seven dollars I kin teach him mor'n a minute than you kin in a month." "That's very possible," I replied; "all I did was to aid him in starting; and from what he tells me since his interview with you, you certainly understand your business, and are competent to teach your style to new beginners."

This remark set him ablaze, and, glaring at me like a madman, he sung out, "What d'ye mean by that? I tell you what it is, my old gentleman, you must be dev'lish keerful of your insinyations round these diggins!" I deprecated the idea of saying anything offensive and his ire cooled immediately, and he straightway commenced to give me his views on post-office management.

As it is, however, a half-biographical and half-official statement, and pretty lengthy withal, I will reserve it for another letter.

Truly yours,
MONS. TONSON.

P. S.—J. M. does not understand what you meant by my being "more subdued." She says I "ar'n't a bit."

Another Caution to Postmasters.

In reply to our article in December number of THE MAIL, cautioning postmasters against swindlers who were attempting to defraud them hy means of circulars offering marvellous things in the way of prizes for clubs of subscribers to bogus newspapers and periodicals, we have received a nnmbor of inquiries somewhat in tbie form:

"I got up a club for the ———, and sent $20 to —— & Co., the publishers, but have got no papers except two or three old numbers. Please inform me if they are responsible."

Now, this inquiry should have been sent before the club was gotten np or the money forwarded to the pretended publishers, and the P. M. would have been $20 the richer if he had followed the advice. To send the money first, and then make inquiry as to the likelihood of getting any return for it, does not seem to us to be the most prudent course in such a case.

We now make this offer: If any snbscriber to THE MAIL desires to obtain information as to the responsibility of any person, firm or company (whether publisher or not), or any advice as to the wisdom of sending money to any such person, etc., for anything advertised by circular or in newspapers, and will write to us, inclosing a prepaid envelope directed to himself, we will send him, as soun as possible, a reply, giving very briefly the best advice we can on the subject. This should be done before, and not after, sending any money to the person or firms inquired about, and is for the benefit of SUBSCRIBERS only. (Those in arrears may remit their subscriptions at same time, if convenient.)

A Plan for Prepayment on Newspapers.

On January 28, a memorial was presented in the House of Representatives, from Mr. John W. Munday, of La Porte, Ind., which was referred to the Post-Office Committee and ordered to be printed. Mr. Munday, after demonetrating the difficulties and vexations incident to the present imperfect method of collecting postage on newspapers and periodicals sent to regular subscribers, presents for the coneideration of Congress a plan for that purpose, which he considers would, if adopted, prove a remedy for the existing evils, and as most of our readers take a lively interest in the matter, we give Mr. Munday's proposal in full:

Compel publishers to send with their first issue after January 1 of each year an invoice of subscribers' names, with date and duration of each subscription, to each post office addressed; the invoice to comprise all subscribers at the post office addressed, and to contain as a heading the name of the publication, where published, and how often published.

Compel the postmaster to make his returns to the Department from these invoices, by charging himself with the proper postage for each copy therein represented.

Compel publishers to send from time to time, as new subscribers are acquired, notice to the post office addressed of such new subscription by an invoice inclosed with the first copy sent. And if it is a single paper and addressed with the subscriber's name upon the wrapper, then, along with the address, the words "invoice inclosed," or "first copy," or some conventional mark should be placed, to inform the postmaster, and cause him to examine and charge the paper. Compel the postmaster to preserve these invoices, and at the expiration of each year to forward the same to the Post-Office Department as vouchers.

The practical working of this plan will be, the writer imagines, as follows:

Postmasters will collect the postage by simply marking the amount due upon each paper or magazine, either upon the first copy that is dated within the new quarter, or upon the first copy that arrives after the commencement of the new quarter. Such periodicals as are given out through the general delivery he will collect for upon delivery; such as are given out by carriers he will also collect for upon delivery; while such as are given out to box-holders he may distribute as ordinary prepaid mail, without further trouble; at his leisure he may look over the invoices and charge box-holders with postage due, as is already provided with the box rent. He will thus be relieved from the onerous burden of committing subscribers' names to memory, or of examining or making out long lists at his busiest hour. There will be small danger of mail matter slipping post unpaid, through his negligence, for he is immediately warned at the arrival of each new subscription by the invoice.

If through negligence he fails to collect postage the loss will be his own and not the Department's. Under such a check it would be very difficult for the postmaster to be dishonest with regard to this class of postages, as he knows vouchers will have to be forthcoming at the close of the year which must compare with his returns.

This system need not cause any additional labor to the Post-Office Department, as it will be sufficient if the postmaster knows that it is within the power of the Department at any time to compare his return and vouchers—even if it is never actually done except when actuated by suspicion.

This plan would certainly cause some additional labor to publishers, but not so great an addition as at first glance would seem probable. Most publishers, when their issue is by any means large, use some mechanical contrivance to attach subscribers' names, which are first printed in long lists in columns upon large sheets; the names for each post office together; the date of expiration being affixed opposite each subscriber's name; the number of copies taken being indicated usually in large figures placed between the name and date where more than a single copy is taken by one subscriber. An invoice might be easily made, by taking the names so printed and pasting them upon a blank properly headed. The fact that invoices made in this way would not give the commencement of subscription and date, is a trivial objection as the receipt by postmaster of an invoice is notice enough of the commencement. It will be sufficient if the invoice itself be dated without dating each separate subscription.

Under the present system of collecting postage upon the class of matter under consideration there is considerable swindling done by pretended publishers who send advertising sheets to pretended regular subscribers. The plan above suggested would have a tendency to check this sort of thing, as will be apparent upon consideration.

To enforce obedience of publishers it will be necessary to stop the delivery of all publications not properly invoiced. A correspondence held between the writer hereof and the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, Mr. W. H. H. Terrell, upon this subject, bears the following dates, viz.:

Letter to Mr. Terrell, September 28, 1869; reply from Mr. Terrell, October 27, 1869; letter to Mr. Terrell, November 23, 1869; of which copies may be obtained, probably, if desired.

Very respectfully submitted.

JOHN W. MUNDAY,
La Porte, Ind.

Sundry Post-office Matters.

We begin our usual article with referring to a letter signed "A small office postmaster," wherein exception is taken to some of the suggestions made to the Postmaster-General by several postmasters and others and which were printed in last month's paper. The objection seems to be that the practical working of these suggestions would lessen the salaries of smaller offices This may be so, but then post offices are not established to furnish salaries, but to meet the wants of society, and it was these wants which the Convention had in view when the suggestions were made. If salaries had been in view, other suggestions would have been presented. Our next letter is from a Pension Agent, who complains that postmasters do not promptly return "request letters," and asks us to give a "delicate hint" to such delinquents. We will give the hint, but it shall not be delicate, for we consider the prompt return of request letters one of the "higher" obligations of a postmaster, and its neglect one of the greater sins of omission. In our judgment the principle of "request" letters is one of the best and most valued improvements of the postal service for the public benefit that has been devised, and is particularly adapted to our country. We consider that postmasters should be specially careful to see that, so far as they are concerned, its fullest benefits are realized; and we would more than delicately hint to the postmaster who is delinquent—we would say, "Go! thou unprofitable servant."..... Our next letter, among other things, refers to matter which will be found mentioned in our "Answers," viz.: Postage on miscellaneous matter. "A white merino shroud for the dead attaching only a two-cent stamp," is certainly a very extended application of the word miscellaneous. Was this postmaster very sympathetic, or very ignorant? Our correspondent drew down upon himself the "wrath" of an editor's wife, because he would not recognize the privilege of free exchange as peripatetico. and charged postage upon papers sent to the editor, who was only temporarily within his delivery. He was right, notwithstanding the wrath. Is it a simple question for us to ask, "What do some people think the mails were established for?" .... Our next is on the subject of box rents—not the usual query—who is entitled to box rents? or who pays for erecting boxes? or whether it is not unjust for the Post-Office Department to claim them? but states that many postmasters do not report them and account for them, and asks—in some do not, why should any? While it is the duty of postmasters to make such report—and no postmaster can honestly swear to his quarterly returns unless he does—practically, it amounts to but little, for the theory and practice of the Department is that postmasters receive in return, in their salaries, all, or nearly all, they would receive as box rents; and on this theory salaries are adjusted, so that if a postmaster does not return box rents, his salary is just so much less. We must not be misunderstood to justify postmasters in this delinquency, we merely wish to show that it is not unjust to those postmasters who make correct returns. The same letter contains an objection to a reduction of the registry fee. Our reply will be found above.....Our next treats of plainly and correctly addressing letters. Most assuredly, this is a "Consummation devoutly to be wished," but it is not one of the duties of a postmaster, it lies entirely with the writers of letters. If A. B. wishes to send a letter to C. D., in 1261 Main St., Boston, Mass., A. B. should be particular to tell the mailing postmaster so by writing it plainly on his letter; and lest there may be more than one C. D., he had better add his business, by way of identification. Now if A. B. addresses his letter to E. D., or to 261 Main St., or to Buffalo, or to New York, it is not the fault of any one connected with the Post-Office Department if C. D. does not receive it. And both he and A. B. should be very careful about indulging in that "blowing up" process with which the public are so prone to visit postmasters who have not brains enough to deliver letters to the persons for whom they are intended, no matter how they are addressed.....The question of responsibility for the payment of newspapers is not within our province. The Post-Office Department does not undertake to manage affairs between publishers and subscribers, but only between them and itself....A "Post-Office clerk" is informed that we answer questions from subscribers, or their clerks, that come to us in proper form, that are of general interest, and over a bona fide signature.

Postal Telegraphy.

THE NEW ENGLISH SYSTEM.

The telegraph lines of Great Britain have recently been transferred to the control of the post-office authorities, and a number of changes and modifications have in consequence been made in the system, the results of which remain to be tested. The following interesting particulars are condensed from the London papers:

The transfer was made on the 29th of January, but the actual opening of the new postal telegraph offices took place on the 5th of February. It is expected that under the new arrangement the community will gain largely at once, and very considerably a little later, in three particulars, namely—in cheapness, in extended facilities, and in greater assurance of promptitude, correctness and secrecy. The charge for a telegram of not more than twenty words will be a shilling from any one place to any other place within the United Kingdom—the names and addresses of the sender and the receiver being free; and for each additional five words three pence will be asked. Telegrams may be repeated, at the option of the sender, by paying one-half the ordinary tariff. The charge for transmission covers the cost of delivery by special foot messenger within a mile of the terminal telegraphic station, or within the limit of the town postal delivery of that office, when it is a head office, and the delivery extends for more than a mile from it.

The preliminary administrative work has been enormous, and has somewhat checked the development anticipated at starting. But, after all drawbacks have been made, the real improvement is great, as may be inferred from the fact that the number of telegraphic offices in London and its nearer suburbs alone will be from 200 to 250. The total mileage of wire within the United Kingdom now settled or in immediate prospect, is 66,000 miles, of which 39,000 are on lines of railway, 6 000 miles represent short extensions, and 21,000 miles the wires along common roads. The list of post offices at which messages will be forwarded, transmitted or received, is not yet complete, and will, of course, constantly receive additions. But one rule may be safely laid down for public guidance. Every post office and pillar box will be a receiving place for messages. If the sender desires promptitude, he had better direct to the nearest telegraph office, where, besides securing quick dispatch, he can, if he pleases, arrange for speedy delivery; if, on the other hand, he is not particular for an hour, more or less, he has only to deposit his message, stamped and directed as a telegram, in the nearest box, and he has no further trouble. The number of hours during which a postal telegraph office will be open will average about twelve a day, say from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M; but the practice will vary according to the locality, in some large towns, as Liverpool and Glasgow, offices being open all night, and in others extra hours being given for press messages.

The use of stamps in payment of telegrams is a further valuable feature of the new system. Stamps, of various amounts, from one penny to five shillings, are to be on sale at all the offices. Forms of messages, singly or in books, are also to be on sale. The enumeration of the number of words is rendered quite unnecessary by the simple process of dividing each line into five spaces, in each of which a word must be written. A marginal note shows the charge for each line. All forwarded messages, whether inland or continental Indian or American, are to be entered and sent in the order of receipt from the public.

The postal officers are given to understand that the messages are to be regarded as strictly confidential communications, and that any breach of confidence will be visited with severe punishment; they are further enjoined to show no favor or affection in the retransmission or delivery of messages. No stranger is to be admitted to the instrument-room of any postal telegraph office "without the written authority of one of the Secretaries of the General Post Office," and even then he is not to be allowed to go near the instruments while they are at work or to send the messages. When news telegrams have to be delivered to more than one proprietor of a newspaper or news-room in one and the same town, every exertion must be made to effect a simultaneously delivery, without favor to any one. So jealously, in fact, are the rights of the public guarded, that even messages which are "indecently or obscenely worded, or which appear to contain abusive, libelous or slanderous matter," must not be refused by a counter-clerk at his own discretion; he must take the opinion of his superior officer and abide by that decision.

But one all-important point has still to be considered, and that is, the sources whence the numerous skilled staff required to undertake so extensive a duty will be supplied. A large and efficient body of operators was transferred from the companies to the post office, and, in addition, learners brought by hundreds from various parts of the country have for months been at work with the instruments selected. The postmasters throughout the kingdom, with members of their families, readily acquired the practice of the instruments, and the acquirements of each learner have been rigidly tested by experienced telegraphists employed for the purpose.

A hall in the General Post Office is now used as an instruction school, and there young men and women may be seen practicing all day, singly or in couples; dexterity of manipulation thus attained being followed up by the exercise in transmitting messages to one another. The telegraphic instruments to be employed in the various offices throughout Great Britain will be the single needle, the bell, the Morse's printer, the Hughes's type-printer, Wheatstone's automatic instrument and Wheatstone's A B C instrument—the last, however, being retained chiefly for private lines, and seldom for public messages. Wheatstone's automatic and Hughes's type-printing instrument will be in use at none but offices of the first class, and those chiefly used for general transmission; will be the single needle, the bell and the Morse.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Forwarding Letters to Canada.—C. B., C——, Ill.—Letters cannot be forwarded to Canada free of additional postage. The law says, "from one post office to another," which can only mean the offices in the United States, as it is only those over which the United States has control. They should be sent forward, and postage will be collected in Canada on delivery.

Posting Letters, etc.—H. B., W——, N H.—1. No one has a right to make a practice of collecting letters and posting them on the cars, as it is only letters, which there is good reason to believe were written after the usual hour for closing the mail, that may be so posted, unless it be on the railway postal cars. The matter should be reported to the Department. Section 99, Reg. 1866. 2. A route agent must receive letters written after the mail has closed and all prepaid way letters, and direct them to the proper office for delivery or distribution. Sections 400, 470. Reg. 1866.

Samples.—F. W. B., W——, Mass.—If the scrap of muslin you send is a bona fide sample, the package was properly rated at two cents for four ounces. Section 224. Reg. 1866.

Counting Letters the Last Week in the Quarter.—F. G. S., W——, Ill.—The count refers to the number of letters, and not of rates

Part Prepayment.—Circulars containing writing, and weighing not more than half an ounce, arriving at the office of delivery, paid only the rate of two cents, should be charged with an addition of one cent, as that is the "unpaid postage." Sec. 151, Reg. 1866.

Stamps Cut from Envelopes.—B. J. P., L—— G——, Oregon—A stamp cut from a new envelope, or one never used to convey mail matter, merely loses its value and is of no account, Sec. 174, Reg. 1866; but the attempt even to use for postal purposes a stamp or stamped envelope that has been used before for such purposes, renders the person liable to a penalty of fifty dollars. Sec. 179, Reg. 1866.

Delivery of Papers.—G. W. C., A——, N. Y.—Weekly papers, when deposited in the office nearest the place of publication, are to be delivered free of postage, if delivered from the office; but if delivered by carriers, they are subject to the regular quarterly postage.

Delivery of Mail Matter.—E. H. S., S——, Va.—It is contrary to regulation to deliver mail matter from one office that is addressed to another, although the postmaster may be certain that he delivers it to the party entitled to it. Sec. 63, Reg. 1866.

Returning Stamped Envelopes to the Department, etc.—J. J. B., M——, Pa.—1 If you have stamped envelopes for, which you have no sale, write to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General for permission to return them. 2. Persons removing to the delivery of another office should have the addresses on their regular papers changed: the postage already paid would then be good on presenting a receipt.

Carrying Letters outside of the Mails.—J. F. C., C—— C——, Ind.—1. A slip or piece of paper containing writing, and addressed to one person by another, is as much a letter as though inclosed in an envelope, and cannot be carried by a mail carrier, out of the mails, unless it relates to some article conveyed at the same time. Your duty was to tell your neighbor that you could not send his note in the manner he requested, and that if he wanted the driver to take it outside the mail, he should inclose it in a Government stamped envelope. Sec. 45., Reg. 1866. 2. It is forbidden that any person less than sixteen years old be employed in a post office. Sec. 8, Reg. 1866.....B. T. F., N—— C——, Mass.—A mail carrier is not allowed to carry letters outside the mails, unless in Government stamped envelopes, except they relate to some article carried by him at the same time. See preceding answer.

Fractional Currency.—M. J. G——, N. Y., and A. B. M., O——, Me.—Postmasters are obliged to take fractional currency, of which not more than one-tenth is missing. For instructions to guide you in this matter, write to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

Registration.—C. E. S., G—— P——, Ill.—A post-office clerk who carries the mail from the office and delivers it to a railway post-office clerk, has a right to carry registered package envelopes out of the mail pouch and deliver them to the postal clerk, obtaining a receipt therefor.....J. W., S——, Me.—It is required that postmasters should receipt from one to another for registered package envelopes, in transit. The mailing postmaster should attach a blank receipt to the registered package envelope. This receipt should be signed by the postmaster at the first office at which the pouch is opened, and returned to the mailing postmaster, while he should attach another blank receipt, to be signed and returned by the postmaster at the next office at which the mail pouch is opened, and so on, as long as the registered package envelope is on a route on which there is no route agent or postal clerk. Sec. 2. Reg'n Reg., 1868. .....M. J. N., W——, N. Y.—A postmaster is not liable, under postal law, for any loss by registered letter; what he may be under State law depends on the circumstances of the case, and it is not for us to decide. Of course we refer only to the civil aspect of the case; if there is criminality on the part of the postmaster he is liable to punishment.....I. Z. M, N—— L——, Conn.—Photographs and all other matter to be entitled to domestic registration, must have the postage paid at letter rates, and the registry fee of fifteen cents. Sec. 8, Reg'n Reg., 1868.....S. P., K——, Miss.—See preceding answer.

Postage.—J. R., P——, Vt.—A single issue of a regular newspaper weighing over 4 oz. where the usual weight of each issue is under 4 oz., and the increased weight exceptional, would be entitled to pass at the regular quarterly rate of a regular paper weighing four ounces or less....A. J A., B——, O.—Regular papers to Canada are charged the regular quarterly rates on domestic papers, to be prepaid at the mailing office, this pays only to the line of crossing. Sec. 261, Reg. 1866....W. L., C——, C.—Papers sent to a post office for a club should be delivered at that office and not a part of them forwarded to another office on the same payment of postage....T. G. T, N—— S——, Mass.—The franking privilege does not extend to Canada; letters to members of Parliament are chargeable with postage....M. S., M——, Conn.—The proper way to notify a publisher that a subscriber refuses a paper, is to inclose the notice in an envelope addressed to the postmaster. It will not then require postage. The Department furnishes envelopes specially for this business.....D. P. S., S——, Mass.—Postage is chargeable on papers delivered through an office, if such papers were brought from another place out of the mails by the mail-carrier ....J. R., P——, Vt.—A bill for printing, in a package of handbills or posters, subjects the package to letter rates, and the sender to a penalty of five dollars. Sec. 316, Laws 1866....C. A. F., H——, N. H.—Neither cotton nor linen shirts are mentioned in section 250 of Laws or 204 of Regulations. How your "postmaster out in Pennsylvania" could charge only two cents for four ounces on such articles is something of a mystery. Postmasters should adhere strictly to the definition of mailable matter, and rate all other matter, "that nevertheless may be mailed," at letter rates under Sec. 245, Laws 1866. But some postmasters seem to think that the word "Miscellaneous" refers to everything but letters and regular publications. Your friend is doubtless one of those, and so you must not be surprised if some day you find he has sent a portable steam-engine or a two-horse farm wagon at "miscellaneous rates."....T. B., N——, Conn.—The quarterly postage is to be charged on each copy of the periodical sent; that is, two copies weighing one ounce each must both be charged with postage, the same as if they weighed four ounces each. This does not apply to small religious, temperance, etc., publications rated under Section 207 of Regulations....T. E. M., W——, N. Y.—The postage on seeds, roots, etc., to England is the same as the rates on book packets to that country, for which see the Foreign Postage Table in the MAIL....S. C. T., T——C——, Mich.—1. Postage on medicine should be charged at letter rates, but all packages of medicine are not admissible in the mails. Sec. 38, Reg. 1866. 2. Paper-covered novels and almanacs issued periodically, or at stated periods, should be charged at two cents for four ounces; if not issued periodically, at four cents for four ounces. 3. Boots and such articles are not mentioned in Sec. 222 of Laws, or elsewhere declared mailable; but it not calculated to endanger the mails (Sec. 38, Reg.) may be mailed at letter rates, but the packages must not exceed four pounds in weight. 4. Yarn or dry-goods, however wrapped, should be charged with letter postage.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland, or to or from the North German Union (including Austria and its States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. This is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery.

RATES OF POSTAGE ON PRINTED MATTER FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

1. TO OR FROM GREAT BRITAIN.—Newspapers and circulars, 2 cents each. Book packets (including printed papers of all kinds, maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, etc.), and patterns or samples, 6 cents per four ounces or fraction of four ounces, if four ounces or over in weight. For rates on less than four ounces see Foreign Postage Table. The above charges must be fully prepaid at the office of mailing, by means of U. S. postage stamps affixed outside the packet or its cover, and are in full to destination in the United Kingdom. If not so prepaid, the packet cannot be forwarded.

Newspapers, book packets, and patterns, or samples of merchandise, originating in the United Kingdom and addressed to the United States, will be received in the United States fully prepaid, and must be delivered free of charge to the party addressed at the office of destination in the United States.

2. TO OR FROM GREECE, VIA BRITISH MAIL.—Newspapers not over 1 ounce, 4 cents; over 1 oz. and not over 2 oz., 6 cents; over 2 oz. and not over 4 oz., 10 cents; and 10 cents for every additional 4 oz. or fraction thereof. Book packets, patterns and samples not over 1 oz., 4 cents; over 1 oz. and not over 2 oz., 8 cents; over 2 and not over 4 oz., 14 cents, and 14 cents for each additional 4 oz. or fraction thereof.

3. TO OR FROM THE NORTH GERMAN UNION (INCLUDING ALL THE GERMAN STATES AND AUSTRIA) AND TO OR FROM BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS, BY CLOSED MAIL VIA ENGLAND.—Newspapers 4 cents each, if not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional rate of four cents for each additional weight of four ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. Book packets, prints of all kinds, and patterns or samples, 8 cents per four ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. If, however, the postage on any article shall be insufficiently prepaid, it will be, nevertheless, forwarded to its destination, charged with the deficient postage, and also subject to a fine on delivery.

4. TO OR FROM ITALY AND SWITZERLAND, BY CLOSED MAIL, VIA ENGLAND, BELGIUM AND GERMANY.—The rates and conditions on newspapers, book-packets, prints of all kinds, and patterns or samples, are the same as the above, (paragraph 3.)

5. TO OR FROM THE NORTH GERMAN UNION (INCLUDING ALL THE GERMAN STATES AND AUSTRIA), BY DIRECT MAIL VIA BREMEN OR HAMBURG—Newspapers, if not over 4 ounces of weight, 3 cents each, and if over 4 ounces an additional 3 cents for each additional weight of 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. Book packets, prints, patterns and samples, 6 cents per 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. But unpaid or part paid letters and other articles insufficiently prepaid will be forwarded, charged with the deficient postage, and subject to a fine on delivery. The registration fees on registered letters or other postal packets is 8 cents to all the above mentioned countries; prepayment of postage and fee compulsory.

The above rates (paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5) are in full to destination; and no charge is to be made on the delivery of newspapers, book packets or samples arriving from Germany, Austria, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and Greece, by the above mails, except the deficient postage or fine on such matter when insufficiently prepaid. But the postage on all printed matter to or from FRANCE AND ALGERIA must, in all cases, be collected here.

"We take pleasure in recommending Wade's P. O Book. It has long been a necessity that some simple and effectual system should be introduced for keeping postage and box accounts Mr. Wade has discovered the way to do it, and in our opinion, he is a benefactor to the whole official community of postmasters. It would be well if it were introduced into every post office of the land We have examined this book carefully and unhesitatingly say that it fills the bill completely. The Post-Office Department should adopt it and no postmaster should be without it."

Price, with postage, $5 30. Fifty-two pages sent, postpaid, for $1 50.

The United States inland and Atlantic sea postage (which in each case is 4 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (½ oz.) or fraction thereof.

b.—When the letter b is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case, is ascertained by deducting from the amount set down the sum of 2 cents, which is the United States portion of the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases the postage is for each newspaper without regard to its weight when sent in British mail.

The French and English Post Offices.

I.

FRENCH POST OFFICES.

The first attempt to introduce a regular postal system in France was made in the latter half of the reign of Louis XIV., under the minister Louvois. Boxes were then set up in several parts of Paris to receive private correspondence: but so meagre were the arrangements, so little important was the matter considered, that the boxes were often forgotten for several months, and, when the officials were at last reminded of them, the boxes only contained mice, which had colonized there, and had eaten to strips the letters which had been confided to official care. Later, in 1692, another attempt was made, and six public boxes were distributed through the town. These were emptied regularly, indeed, but at long intervals, and soon fell into disuse. So matters stood until about a century ago. In 1758, under Louis XV., private enterprise began to awake to the need of some postal arrangement, and supplied the deficiency of the public administration. One M. de Chamonsset, a wealthy and public-spirited Parisian, asked and obtained the royal permission to establish, at his own cost, a modest post for the metropolis. This was accorded to him, and a concession, for thirty years, of the revenues he might receive was added. This was, however, not a monopoly; for the king made a decision that private persons might still have their letters and packages carried about the city and in the faubourgs by whomsoever they might choose. The charge per letter, in M. de Chamousset's system, was two sols for a single letter under an ounce, three sols per ounce for packages; the postage must be paid in advance, and to the letters a stamp was affixed. There were nine bureaux for receiving and expediting these letters distributed through Paris. In the first year M. de Chamousset received as his profits no less than fifty thousand francs net; and next, the Government, perceiving the gains thus derived from the enterprise took it from him, compensating him by an annual pension of twenty thousand francs for the rest of his life.

The French post office is under the general control of the minister of finance. I propose to give a brief account of the system as it at present exists, that the French may be compared with the English and the American systems. The French system, as exemplified in Paris, is established on a method of centralization. The mail-matter, which is collected at the railway stations, bureaux and boxes, is brought to the General Post Office in the Rue Jean Jacques Rousseau, is there sorted, and is from there distributed to the various quarters. For the receiving of the mail-matter, there are, scattered through Paris, thirty-nine lodger, or district, post offices, where stamps may be bought, money-orders procured or cashed, and letters weighed and posted. These are open from 8 in the morning till 8 at night, and on Sundays and fête days till 5 P. M. Five hundred boxes are, in addition, distributed in the districts (arrondissements) of these smaller post offices, very many of these being placed at the tobacconists, who also sell postage-stamps. The postmen collect at these boxes seven times a day; some of them are emptied, too, at special extra hours, indicated by the printed tables to be found fixed under them. A new law, designed to give new facilities for sending letters at the latest moment, for an extra charge, has gone into operation. The latest regular hour for posting letters at Paris is 6 P. M.; but, by affixing an additional four-sous stamp, the letter posted between 6 and a quarter past will be collected and expedited; by adding an eight-sous stamp it will be in time up to half-past 6; and by adding a twelve-sous stamp, up to 7 P.M. There are, however, only certain specified bureaux or boxes where letters can be posted for these extra collections. There are in Paris four bureaux whose use is exclusively devoted to late letters extra-stamped—in the Place de la Bourse, Rue St. Honoré, Rue de Clery and one of the offices at the Hôtel des Postes. That this is a great benefit may be seen from the fact that more than two hundred thousand letters pass through the Paris post office in year with extra stamps. The letters and papers are all, in the first instance, collected at the smaller or district post offices, from the district of which they are the centres. They are placed on a large table and sorted. The sorting is into three classifications: mail-matter bearing the ten-centimes stamp (two cents), and which is sent from one part of Paris to another; that bearing the twenty-centimes stamp (four cents), and destined for the French provinces: and that which is for foreign countries. All letters which are not prepaid are marked with the amount due on them—plus fifteen centimes per fifteen grammes or less it for Paris, and plus thirty centimes per ten grammes or under if the letter is for the provinces, Corsica or Algeria.

The prepaid letters pass into the hands of the stamper, who obliterates the stamp with the seal. A second seal is put on, bearing the word "Paris," the name of the street where the district office is situated, the number of the collection and the date of the month and year. Thus there is a complete record or history of the letter, which has often been of great use to the police; for, by marking the number of the collection and the quarter where it was posted, the hour of its being posted and the place whence it came may be approximately decided. Thus stamped, the letters are distributed according to their destination, put into gray envelopes and sealed up, and locked in leathern bags. A post-wagon takes them to the General Post Office in the Rue Jean Jacques Rousseau. There are seven of these post-wagons which make seven journeys a day each, corresponding to the number of regular collections. They all arrive in the courtyard of the General Post Office at about the same time, when there is a busy and lively scene. A number of employees are in readiness, who take the bags from the wagons and carry them on their backs to the office of departure, section of letters, section of printed matter or section of distribution, as the case may be. The dispatches which thus reach the central office must be manipulated at once, very skilfully and very rapidly; for it is necessary to forward to the provinces or abroad the correspondence collected in all the boxes on the same day that they are collected. The latest post-express trains all leave Paris between a quarter before 8 and half-past 8 in the evening. During the day, the post-wagons carrying the mails for the trains make no less than sixty-three journeys to the stations—some with one horse, some with two. The frequency of these journeys is explained by the frequency of the departure of the trains, which have attached to them either a post-carriage or a compartment specially for the post-courier, who takes charge of the mails and delivers them as he progresses at the country stations, sorts letters which he receives en route and makes them up into special bags for delivery further on.

In the General Post Office there is a large, spacious hall, where the mails destined for Paris are collected, and where the postmen—so familiar to every one who has visited Paris—with their quick step and bustling hurry, gather to receive their quota for distribution. They assemble here seven times each day. Paris is divided into eleven districts of distribution; there are five hundred and ten postmen, of whom eighty-five are devoted especially to the distribution of printed mail-matter, which is delivered three times a day, and once on Sunday, If to these are added the collectors and various subordinate employees of the district post offices, the total of Paris post-office employees is about eight hundred and fifty men. The salaries of these vary from fifteen hundred to nine hundred francs; the head postmen receive three hundred francs more. All are allowed a yearly indemnity of forty francs for losses in changing money, and thirty-six francs for wear of shoe-leather. Their uniform is furnished by the Government, and comprises blue pantaloons, a green coat, and a black leathern bag for holding the mail-matter; the number of their district is signified on the collars of their coats. The selection of the postmen is in a great measure made from the discharged soldiers; for they have the habit of discipline, exactitude and promptness. They are forbidden by the post-office rules to stop until their supply of mail is exhausted. They arrive at the General Post Office at five in the morning; and at half-past 7 you may see them emerging, in alert and brisk groups, from the arch in the Rue Jean Jacques Rousseau, and then scattering in all directions.

Letters began to be distributed in Paris in 1837, the example having already been set by London. At first the distribution commenced at 9 A. M., and did not finish till 2 P. M. Both Lyons and Lille were in advance of the capital in this respect, for in those cities there were postal deliveries in the early years of the first empire. Those postmen who have to deliver letters in districts remote from the central office are provided with omnibusses, both from and to them, which are nine in number, and start at the same hour with the postmen on foot. The first delivery is, as everywhere, the heaviest; for then both the local mails, the provincial and the foreign mails, are distributed, which have arrived during the night or in the early morning. Afterward, the deliveries take place at intervals of two hours, so that the Paris postman has some fifteen or sixteen hours of work every day. It is estimated that about four hundred thousand mail parcels, of which over one hundred thousand are letters, are on the average distributed daily in Paris, each postman thus having to distribute some eight hundred daily. The postmen, when he receives his batch, is obliged to give a receipt for it, and must never demand any extra fee for his own service. It is usual in France, however, for those who receive mail-matter frequently to make the postman a Christmas present of money, from two to ten francs. At the end of their round, the postmen bring back such letters as, for any reason, they may not have been able to deliver.

The system under which distribution of mail matter are made in Paris seems to give complete satisfaction to the people. Letters posted early in the morning to a city address reach their destinations by the hours of business, and an answer may be received in the course of the afternoon. Nothing can be more regular, prompt and efficient, than the metropolitan service. Mistakes or delays are of extremely rare occurrence. During an extended residence in Paris, and having a large correspondence, I have never known a letter to fail or be delayed, although often the addresses were illegible enough. The regulations, to which the employees of the Post Office are rigidly subjected, are stringent and perfectly effectual. Every year sees large additions made to the force necessary to carry on the postal administration; and how rapidly the work of the Post Office administration increases may be seen from the fact that it increased fifty-four per cent. from 1860 to 1865; and the employees were increased, in the same interval, ten per cent. There is, at the central office, a special bureau for dead letters, as in our own department; and here those letters which the postmen have, for any reason, been unable to deliver, are methodically classified. Of the four hundred million letters passing yearly through the office, about two millions return to this bureau, of which one hundred thousand bear incomplete addresses, five hundred thousand are addressed to persons who cannot be found, one thousand bear no address at all, and more than one million are refused by those to whom they are addressed. The letters are not, however, consigned hastily and lightly to the dead-letter bureau. The first attempt to deliver failing, a second and often third attempt is made, by different postmen. After this, the directories having been examined in vain, the addresses of the undelivered letters are read aloud to the postmen when they are all together in the hall. If a postman recognizes the name as that of one to whom he has carried letters, he answers by calling out the number of his beat. These efforts all failing, the letters are returned by the bureau to the sender; if his address is found on the outside, the letter is not opened; otherwise, it is opened to ascertain it. Sometimes information contained in the letter itself indicates the true address of the person for whom it is intended, and it is then sent to him. If their is no clue either to the sender or the person addressed, the letters are classified alphabetically, and, later on, are destroyed. A letter thus classified may be claimed by the person addressed, either in writing to the directeur-général, or by going in person to the office, where he fills a printed form supplied for the purpose. Several days after, the letter is sent to the person's domicile by the postman. The Poste Restante, for the delivery of letters having no address of street and number, is situated several squares from the General Office, and is open from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M. A person asking for letters there must prove his identity, and to this end his passport, envelopes from the same person who wrote the letter asked for, or some other reasonable proof, is required. I am thus particular in describing the Paris office, to show how very careful and methodical is the whole system, the admirable results of which are patent to every one who has had need of its facilities.—Appleton's Journal.

CLAMBANK, N. J., March, 1870.

The name of the Peachblow Postmaster is Bonnerges Gushweak. To give proper effect to the official views he was about to promulgate for my delectation, he invited me to "come inside th' office;" and I was not at all surprised to find it in perfect consonance with the characteristics of this chief of slovens. The Muggywasco office, which I described to you some time ago, was a lady's boudoir in comparison to it. The floor was covered with a paste made of mud, wrapping-paper and pieces of twine, interspersed here and there with newspapers which had fallen from the pouches—the whole forming a concrete that might be valuable as paving material, but not by any means pleasing to the eye where it was.

He attempted to neutralize my disgust (but he failed) by apologetically remarking, "This ain't a very tidy shop; but ef it was kivered with cyarpet n foot thick it wouldn't make any defference. All the dog-gon'd fellers in town makes this ther headquarters, and we hev a kind o' class-meetin' every night; and ef the floor was scrubbed and swep twice a hour every day it would look jes like this every mornin'. Now, I 'spose you think it's wrong to hev folks come in yer and lay round? Well, I don't; altho' you may say the law's agin it. If a fellow's got to shet hisself up, and keep his friends out, he might as well he in the lockup. I don't see it, and won't do it. Ou'y a few people here, who want to he very pe'tickler, blow about it—but they hain't got any influence, so who keers for them? I tell you, squire, I hev hin in this line since I was thirteen year old, and I think I know my biz. My furst experence was in a office in the Western Reserve. The old fellow I worked for knew it was agin the law to have a clark under sixteen, and instructed me to tell every body I was rein' seventeen, and both of us together told mor'n four hundred lies about it while I was ther'. I was with him about two year when I had a muss with a stage driver, and come out loser. You see I allus used to make the stage driver bring the mail into the store, while his team stood at the door. One day he druv up with a full load of parsengers, brought in his bag, and while he was inside his hosses got skeered, kited off on a run, upset the stage, killed a woman and baby and hurt some others, and ther was a awful row raised about hie leavin' hie coat. Next day, up he comes agin, and hollored to me to come and git the mail. I wouldn't do it, so he throwd it on the side-walk, and I let it lay ther'. It was rainin' pooty hard, and the mail got soaked through and through, but I wouldn't touch it. So when old Batsfoot the postmaster cum in, I told him what the driver had done, and felt sure he would have him punished for it; but instead of that, the old cuss paid me a dollar and a quarter which was a comin' to me, and told me to git.

"I spose I was in the wrong; but I wouldn't let no stage-driver put on airs with me. From that place I went to St. Sanbar, below Wheelin', where I had a uncle livin', and he got me a posish in that post office, where I staid nigh onto four year, wen ther' was a change in Guvernent. This office was three times as big as Batsfoot's. Ther was another clark besides myself—and we had to do all the business, as the postmaster was a comaissioner of deeds, town clark, supervisor, school commissioner, deputy sheriff, poundmaster, express and freight agent, the father of a large family, the presideat of the St. Sandbar Quoit Club, and a lawyer by trade, and he said he couldn't afford to waste his time peddliu' out letters. Sometimes we didn't see him for a week, so we run the machine to suit ourselves, and what we didn't find out about St. Sandbar family matters wa'nt wath knowiu'. We used to write letters and siga other folks' names to 'em, and when the answers cum back of course they was ours, and we opened 'em; but ther' was a sneakin' fellow found out we had fooled him, and we and him had a fight, and one of us got licked like thunder. It is not necessary to say which one—but the other clerk in our office had to do the work hisself far about two weeks—as about this time I was laid up with rheumatiz or something——

"When I got round agin I took a dislike to letter writin', and we quit it and got out to plan something else, and we did. It was an advertizin' dodge. We took in with us a couple of outsiders, and one of 'em—Reynard was his name—a lazy cooper across the canawl, was to be the king pin. We got up a cynrd among us for him, and had it published in Harlie and Lesper's Pictorials, in the Wostou Baverly, and in other weekliodicals, which stated that for twenty-five cents he, Reynard, would send any man or woman the likeness of ther' futar' wife or husbing; and we gin him box 391, to which the letters inclosin' the stamps was to be sent. In three months we cleared, after payin' expenses, six dollars and twenty cents a piece—not countin' four had stamps, which we passed off by mistake on somebody—and then Reynard moved up the canawl to Mount Fulton, where he and the postmaster, on the sly, kerried on the biz, with on'y two to divide. I think that machine is runnin' yit. We tried to keep it up on a new deal, but one of them post-office detectives smelt it out and blocked the game for us. When this was played out we got up a kind of a poker club; and a lot of the boys used to meet in the office after it was shet up at night, and we enjoyed ourselves with cyards, cigyars and red-eye, many and many a night till a' most mornin'.

"When the new P. M. cum in he told me he wanted me to remain with him, and I meant to, but the very second night, about 11 o'clock, he cum prowlin' round. He knocked at the door, and never dreamin' it was him, I opened it, and when he walked in he saw the cards and the bottles and the boys, he warmed up consid'rable, and saye he: 'What's the meanin' of this, Mr. Gushweak?' 'Nothin' defferent' says I foldin' my hands, 'from what it's allus hin.' He looked at me with one eye shut, and said, 'You can all go, gentlemen, I'll lock up,' and we went, and next mornin' he told me 'he had no more need of my services.' So you see, squire, I was made the victim of a change of administration. Through the influence of my uncle I was appintad a mail agent on the Pumphandle and Codliveroil R. R., and after postin' myself with the help of my perdecessor about the distribution, I took hold myself. The route was a long one, and post offices were as thick as blackberries. For the furst week or so I stuck to it, and wouldn't speak to nay one; but soon the boys began to come in my cyar and ride with me (I always hid 'em behind the door when the conductor cum round) and made the time pass pleasanter. But this got me into trouble, for I missent so much stuff, and throw'd in to the offices at each end of the route such a quantity of mail matter that should have gone off at way-offices, that a petition was got up and another feller was appinted in my place: and as I didn't like the business very much anyhow, I resigned. I was about twenty year old now, and havin' some relatives in the hill country of Western Virginia, I went ther on a visit. A few days after my arrival I was asked to take charge of a country school, and as I was open for anything, I consented. I soon found out, however, that the scholars know'd more nor me, and could get along better without me than with me; so I spent most of my time in the Camomile Springs post office near by, and when the quarter expired, received the unanimous commendation of the directors and my salary for doin' nothin'—just as a good many postmasters do these days. When my school term expired, I was offered a position in the post office, and as it was the beginnin' of the visiting season, and as Camomile Springs was a fashionable wat'rin' place, I thought I might do wuse, and took it, and once more found myself among mail bags. Now, squire, you think that we folks are keerless in our ways of doin' things about here, but if you was round some of these wnt'rin' place offices you would soon think defferent. I b'lieve mor'n half the letters that are writ to these places are opened and read half a dozen times afore they reach the right hands, of they reach em at all; and altho' the postmasters is blowed, badgered and cussed right and left about it it don't mend matters. Every stranger, male and female is supposed to be fashionable, influential and full o' money, and old ridienters or afeared to call their souls ther' own durin' the season, and the postmaster is no exception. If Charlee Augustus Thing, Esq., calls for a letter, and ther's nothin' for that particular address, but ther's one for G. B. King, Esq., the P. M. timidly suggests that that might be the letter inquired for; and Thing, of course, opens, mutilates and reads it, and after getting the contents he pitches it contempt'sly back, sayin' 'the dem'd letter' aia't fur him; or, if Miss Cleopatra Heneswing calls, letters to ladies with names entirely dissimilar er handed to her by the nervous official, and she reads and returns, or carries away and destroys, correspondence that causes much mortification and disappintment to those for whom it was intended. I've seen letters layin' round Camomile that had the postmark of every summer resort on 'em, and the word 'forrard' had been writ on 'em so often that they looked just as if they was pages of po'try, and they had bin opened and shet up so often that the rips in 'em were as close together and as thick as comb-teeth. I wanted to send a lot of 'em to the Dead-Letter Office, but the hoss sed he never sent sich letters thar, offices like his had discreeshonary power, and he allus kep' 'em a month or two and then forrarded 'em to some other waterin' place, and so they were kep' goin'. He said he had 'em come back sometimes after a absence of a whole year. The tarvern-keepers, too, at these places, allus brought in a lot at the end of the season, some with envelopes, some without; and he was obleeged to git rid of these the best way he could, by sendin' 'em to other places, as he was ashamed to send 'em to Washington in that condition. He said he was often writ to by special agents about sich letters, but as he didn't want to be bothered, he allus writ back that he know'd nothin' about 'em."

Just here we were interrupted by the arrival of the New York mail, and Gushweak was obliged to help open and distribute it.

Our new P. M. is improving since he received the back numbers of the U. S. MAIL. He is more "subdued." I think he will do. Our minister lectures to-night on the "Use and Abuse of Dip Candles;" and as June Mary is urging me to get ready, and as this letter is quite long enough, I will close, and resume Gushweak's experiences in my next.

On the War Path.

VANDALIA, Cass Co., Mich., November 1st, 1869.

To the Postmaster at Elkhart:

Do you know anything about one William Rucker, supposed to be in your Village? He has Eloped with my wife Elizabeth Allen. You will please have this published in the paper of your town.

I will pay $50 Reward for their arrest.

WM. H. ALLEN.

MR. ALLEN—I am sorry to inform you that Rucker has not yet put in an appearance, but I have engaged a person to kick the lascivious cuss on his arrival, and arrest him immediately after. If there is a single characteristic peculiar to Elkhart, and on which it justly prides itself, it is the sublime parity and exalted virtue of its inhabitants. No man of Rucker's propensities could live here an hour. He has probably gone to Goshen or South Bend. But you may rest assured that if, by accident, he enters this town, he is a "goner." The $50 reward will be divided equally between myself and the editor.

Respectfully,

R. K. BRUSH, P. M.

Since its establishment in 1860, the UNITED STATES MAIL has received the official recommendation of Postmasters-General BLAIR, DENNISON and RANDALL, and we take pleasure in publishing also the following from Postmaster-General CRESWELL, who adds to those of his predecessors his recognition and endorsement of THE MAIL as a medium for the publication of official orders and instructions and of correct information on postal subjects:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

Notice to Postmasters.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 26, 1870.

The attention of Postmasters is called to the following requirements of the 17th and 23d sections of the Census Act of 1850, and the ruling of the Department in regard thereto, viz.:

In the 17th section of the Census Act of 1850, it is enacted, "That the marshals and their assistants shall transmit through the Post Office any papers or documents relating to the census, by writing thereon 'Official business, census,' and subscribing the same, with the addition to his name of marshal or assistant, as the case may be; but this privilege shall extend to nothing but documents and papers relating to the census, which shall pass free." * * * * *

And in the 23d section of the same Act, it is further enacted, "That if no other law be passed providing for the taking of the eighth, or any subsequent, census of the United States, on before the first day of January of any year, when by the Constitution of the United States any further enumeration of the inhabitants thereof is required to be taken, such census shall, in all things, be taken and completed according to the provisions of this Act."

The time having come for taking a new census, as required by the Constitution of the United States, and no other law upon the subject having been subsequently enacted, the provisions of the Act of 1850 are in full force by the terms of the 23d section thereof; consequently "papers and documents relating to the census," when endorsed in the manner prescribed by the said Act, should pass free through the mails.

The foregoing may be modified or changed entirely by the action of Congress in regard to the franking privilege.

By order of the Post Master General,

J. W. MARSHALL,
First Assist. Postmaster-General

The Franking Abuse.

The bill which passed the House of Representatives, abolishing the franking privilege, has not yet been acted on in the Senate, though petitions asking for its passage have continued to pour in from all sections of the country; but we do not think that action in the matter can be long delayed.

On the 28th February, the Postmaster General transmitted to the Senate a communication in reply to resolution of that body requesting information relative to the blank petitions, etc., recently sent from that Department asking the abolition of the franking privilege, and in regard to the transportation of free mail matter. He states that the number of blank petitions sent out was 75,000, and the number of accompanying circulars was 28,000. The total cost of both circulars and petitions was $499 66, which was defrayed by the office of the Congressional printer. No part of the expense was charged against any fund appropriated for the use of the Post-Office Department. The petitions and circulars were prepared under the direction of the Postmaster-General in accordance with the views expressed by the President in his late Message, and in response to what was believed to be a very general wish of the people that the franking privilege should be abolished. No attempt was made on the part of the Department to influence the views of postmasters respecting abolition of the privilege. They were simply requested to give citizens who were in favor of the measure an opportunity to so express themselves.

The Postmaster-General states that the returns of the transportation of free mail matter are yet too incomplete to furnish the data called for in the resolution. He submits, however, a statement, based upon such returns as have been received, embracing most of the principal cities. These returns are imperfect in many respects, but exhibit the following results reported from 454 post offices for the month of January: Number of free letters sent, 666,901; postage thereon at the regular rates, $117,399 73; weight of free printed matter sent, 346,194 pounds; postage thereon at regular rates, $42,334 96. Total cost of free matter sent from 454 post offices, $159,734 09. The Postmaster-General says that, considering this exhibit, it is safe to estimate that if full returns had been received from all the offices for the month of January, the aggregate amount would have exceeded $300,000 or at the rate of $3,400,000 per annum.

In response to the request to communicate to the Senate the facts on which the allegations of fraud and abuse in the exercise of the franking privilege were founded, in the petitions sent out by the Department the Postmaster-General says:

It is impossible to give precise information upon that point, owing to the fact that franked matter is always sealed, and the law does not authorize the breaking of a seal for the purpose of examination; but even the comparatively small amount of free matter now returned to the Dead Letter Office discloses many cases of abuse where books, papers and circulars, not printed by order of Congress, and even business and social circulars, have been transmitted under cover of a frank. If the facts of each particular case could be ascertained, remedies could be applied, and it would then only be necessary to reform the franking privilege. The system itself must be denounced because it invites to fraud, with a promise of impunity; and hence I repeat, what I have already said, in the language of another, there is no middle ground between no franking and boundless franking. Although unable to give facts in detail, it is yet notorious that the frands which have been perpetrated under cover of the franking privilege have been enormous. Besides the cases mentioned above, which are constantly occurring, I hope I may be permitted, without offence, to state that in times of excited political campaigns, the various parties do not hesitate to employ it to transmit whatever of printed matter they may have wished to disseminate. This practice has grown into a bad custom, which can only be abolished by repealing the privilege under which it finds shelter.

The recent agitation for the repeal of the privilege has resulted in a large increase in the sale of stamps and stamped envelopes for the month of January, 1870, over the same month in 1869. This gain amounts to $311,332 50. He then reiterated views in favor of the immediate and total repeal of the franking privilege. In his judgment no system can be devised consistent with the rights and interests of the people that can tolerate its longer continuance.

The Postmaster-General then contrasts the postal revenue of Great Britain at the two-cent rate, and without the franking privilege, with the three-cent rate of the United States with the franking privilege, showing a much larger relative revenue is derived by the former Government. He closes as follows:

I believe sincerely that the time has come to attempt such reforms as will make our postal service worthy of our country and people. I believe with equal sincerity that these reforms cannot be be made while the franking privilege is allowed to continue. Hence, I most earnestly renew my recommendations for its repeal. Doubtless, a measure of no much importance may be safely committed to an enlightened and patriotic Congress.

A New Invention in Letter Boxes.

A curious invention is described by a Berlin paper as follows: One of our citizens, the proprietor of a large bathing establishment, has invented a letter box, that not only receives all letters deposited in it by the carrier, but also pays the requisite postage on all unpaid letters, gives a receipt for all registered letters, as well as telegraphic dispatches, at the same time giving the owner of the box immediate notice whenever anything is deposited in it. This would seem hardly credible, yet it is, like most inventions, quite simple, as will be seen by the following description:

This automatic letter box consists of two parts, one in the other, the outside case containing the mechanism, and the inner one being a common receptacle for the letters, etc. The outer one, which is made of brass, is square, and measures about eight inches each way, having a horizontal lid at its lower edge (on which the owner's name is placed), working on hinges, which is, however, kept closed by springs. As soon as this is opened to put a letter in the box, a clockwork is set in motion, which can communicate with a bell, either on the door where the box is fastened, or in a distant room, placed in communication with it by either a pneumatic tube or electric wire. If the box is required to pay postage, the letter-carrier places his key (which fits all boxes on the route) into the lower right-hand keyhole, turns his key, when a sort of coin, of the value of about three cents, is thrown out into a projecting receiver, and the clock is caused to strike at the same time. As often as he turns the key, he receives such a coin, until he has the amount he requires. If a smaller amount is required, he goes through the same manipulations with the lower left-hand keyhole, by which a coin valued at one cent is thrown out. These coins are of common metal, of no intrinsic value, and have on their face the number of the letter-box in which they are to be used, and must be bought the same as our stamps in the post office. They are of value only to the Post-Office Department and the owner of the box and it would therefore be useless to steal them by means of false keys. If a receipt for a registered package is to be given, the carrier uses the upper left-hand keyhole, when a paper roller, visible from the outside through a small window, is caused to revolve, accompanied by the ringing of a bell, and a partly-separated gummed strip projects through a small crevice which the carrier tears off, and upon delivery to the post office it is pasted in a book designed for that purpose. On each corner of this receipt is the number of the box from which it is taken, and in the centre of it is the running number of the receipt. The owner of the box can always see from the outside if a receipt during his absence, for instance, has been taken away, provided he has taken notice of the last visible number. The same action is taken by the telegraph messenger, only he uses the upper right-hand keyhole instead of the left-hand one, and he also sets the hands on a dial on the top of the box to the hour and minute at which he delivers the message. The dial contains numbers from 1 to 24, thereby avoiding the use of the letters A. M. and P. M., and each point between the figures indicates five minutes. By means of this box the delivery of letters and dispatches at night is facilitated without disturbing the party for whom they were intended.

Sundry Post-Office Matters.

We commence with a letter from an Ohio Postmaster, who encloses to us a letter from a brother Ohio Postmaster to him, wherein the brother P. M. expresses his dissent from the opinion of the editor of the MAIL, that a two-cent stamp and half of another two-cent stamp is not equal to a three-cent stamp, and equally valuable to pay postage. He says he 'can't see it." Nevertheless the editor of the MAIL is correct, and the postmaster has no more right to cut a stamp to make up a required value of postage stamps, than he has to cut a bank bill or treasury note to make up a required sum. Under some circumstances a part of a fifty-dollar bill has its full value; but we should judge a man to be very ignorant who, wishing to pay a bill of ten dollars, should deliberately cut off one-fifth of a fifty-dollar bill, and tender it in payment of his debt of ten dollars. We here repeat that fractional parts of postage stamps have no value in payment of postage. The stamp must have its full face value or none at all; and we take this occasion to say that the law requiring a revenue stamp on quarterly returns has been repealed, and none is now required. To our correspondent we would say that postage is to be collected on forwarded newspapers.....

To our correspondent who makes inquiries respecting routes for foreign letters, we reply that our Foreign Postage Table has been arranged in a manner to meet the wants of the public. It would be impossible to introduce all the routes by which letters can be sent to foreign countries. Respecting the "open mail" to England, mail matter can be sent by that route to any country to which England sends without prepayment of postage. These countries can be learned by reference to the British Postal Guide.....To our correspondent who submits to us a question of morals rather than of law, we would say, that if the United States owns the building in which the post-office is situated, all rents, profits and emoluments accruing therefrom belong to the United States. But if a room is merely rented for post-office purposes, the Department is entitled only to what it pays for.....Several communications have been sent to us on the subject of the late Convention of Postmasters and Special Agents at Washington. They relate mostly, however, to prepayment of newspaper postage, and the registry fee. Our correspondents seem to think a reduction of the latter will considerably diminish their salaries. But in this we judge they are mistaken. It certainly will not have this effect in the larger offices; while in the smaller the increase of the registry business would more than compensate for the decreased fees. We have received several communications without signatures, some even without localities or dates. To these we cannot reply. Every letter to the Editor should have a bona-fide signature, and he properly dated within the delivery of some post office, and should be on a separate sheet from an order to the publisher covering a subscription for the MAIL.

☞ THE NEW POSTAGE STAMPS.—It is well known that a set of postage stamps, of entirely new designs, has been for some time in preparation. We learn the stamps will be issued about the middle of this month. We append a description of them:

2 cent, Vandyke brown..Jackson.
3 cent, green.....Washington.
6 cent, red.....Lincoln.
10 cent, light brown .....Jefferson.
12 cent, dark purple .....Clay.
15 cent, orange .....Webster.
24 cent, purple .....Scott.
30 cent, black .....Hamilton.
90 cent, carmine.....Perry.

The designs are from busts by celebrated sculptors.

Sec. 4, R'g'n Reg. 3. A postmaster cannot have boxes made and sell them to holders of a perpetual lease. Boxes must be rented, and the rent accounted for to the Department. Chap. 42, Reg. 1866.

Copy of General Account, etc.—J. F. M., A——, Va.—1. You should furnish the Auditor, quarterly, with a copy of your General Account, and if it is incorrect he will notify you. This is the proper way. 2. Children twenty or twenty-one years old are entitled to control their own correspondence without interference from parents.

Franking to the Commissioner of Patents, etc.—L. D. H., D——, Md.—1. Any one may send official letters, or legal papers, or packages, free to the Commissioner of Patents. 2. A chunk of iron is not mailable matter, and should not be mailed at all if it weighs over four pounds.

Refused Papers.—S. F. H., D——, Pa.—A postmaster is not responsible to publishers for the safe keeping of refused papers, all such on hand at the end of the quarter should be sold and the proceeds credited to the Department. Sec. 391, Reg. 1866.

Lending Money to Pay Postage.—E. K., R——, O.—There is no prohibition against a postmaster lending from his private funds to pay postage, but it is not advisable.

Mail Route.—A. C., T——, N. Y.—The Member of Congress for your District, or the Second Assistant Postmaster General, is the proper party to apply to for the establishing of a mail route.

Postmasters Destroying Letters, etc.—J. R. L., P——, N. Y.—1. It is questionable if a postmaster has a right to destroy letters, even at the request of the person to whom they are addressed; he had better refuse to comply with such request and conform to the law and regulations respecting undelivered letters. Sec. 360, Reg. 1866. 2. Request drop letters cannot be returned as mail letters. 3. Did you write to the Auditor concerning a desk. You probably wrote to some other officer.

Account of Mails Sent.—W. F. D., N—— M——, Ind.—Accounts of mails sent are no longer required to be kept. Of course, none such are to accompany the Quarterly Returns. See instructions of the Postmaster-General, Oct. 1, 1868.

Oath to Quarterly Account.—T. H., B—— R——, Pa.—An oath must accompany each quarterly account current. You will find a blank at the bottom of every sheet. See 300, Reg. 1866.

Forwarding Letters.—W. H. S., P——, Pa.—Letters that have not passed out of the custody of the post office may be forwarded free, at the request of the party addressed.

Office Furniture.—J. N. W., S——, Miss.—There is no fixed salary required for a postmaster to be allowed furniture; and no fixed amount for furniture. The Department allows a cheap, plain desk, for which application should be made to the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-office Department.

Weight of Packages.—H. J. Y., J——, N. Y.—The weight of packages of mailable matter is restricted to four pounds (sec. 230, laws 1866); but this restriction does not apply to packages of publishers or newsdealers, which may be sent at rates and terms fixed by the Postmaster-General. Sec. 254, laws 1866.

Mail Bags and Locks, etc.—B. F. T., W——, Kan.—1. Return all mail-bags, locks, etc., that you do not need, to the nearest depositary (sec. 436, Reg. 1866), and if you desire it, obtain a receipt therefor. 2. You can learn from chapter xxviii., regulations of 1866, what papers constitute the Quarterly Returns, but with these alterations: strike out number 9 in section 304, and in its place insert "The post bills that accompany unpaid letters."

County Papers.—W. C. G., F——, Wis.—Subscribers may receive their county papers—that is papers published in the same county in which they live—free of postage through a post office out of the county, provided it is the usual office through which they receive their mail matter. Sec. 238, Reg. 1866.

Mail Carrier.—W. W. M., P——, C——, Utah.—The mails should be taken on schedule time, and by sworn carriers. Study well chapters xii. and xxxvi. of Regulations of 1866, for information on the subject of carrying the mail.

Postbilling Letters to a Distributing Office.—Short-paid letters sent to a distributing office for distribution should not be post-billed. Sec. 92, Reg. 1866.

Unpaid Letters.—F. W., A——, Mo.—Unpaid domestic letters deposited in your office for mailing should be sent to the Dead-Letter Office (sec. 360, Reg. 1866), but if received there in course of transit from one office to another, they should be duly forwarded. If received for delivery, postage should be collected where they are delivered. Sec. 157, Reg. 1866.

Holidays.—T. C. McE., W——, N. Y.—A post office should be kept open at least a part of the day, on every day, whether a holiday or not, that a mail arrives or departs: how long, and what part of the day depends on the times of arrival or departure by the mails, and the convenience of the public. Sec. 27, Reg. 1866.

Samples.—J. B. L., T——, O.—The Department has decided that samples must be confined to samples of dry, flexible materials—such as cloth, drygoods, etc.—of no intrinsic value and not intended for use. Hardware, groceries, tobacco and wood mouldings do not properly come within the scope of samples. See U. S. MAIL for July and August, 1867.

Marking Stamps.—J. T. S., C—— G——, Ga., and A. A., S—— S——, Pa.—1. Application for marking stamps should be made to the Appointment Office, Washington, D. C. The rule that all offices should be supplied with them has been rescinded; but we believe it has never been published. 2. If a postmaster is necessarily absent, or is sick, the official papers should be signed: A—— B——, P. M., by C—— D——, Assistant P. M. Sec. 296, Reg. 1866.

Exchanges.—T. L. A., M——, Pa., and G. B. F., C——, Mich.—1. Papers cannot be sent free as exchanges to a person who has discontinued the publication, on which the right to exchange was based. 2. Exchanges are not limited or restricted by the value or frequency of publication. A penny monthly may exchange on equal terms with a ten-dollar daily.

Exchanges, etc.—B. F. O., G——, N. Y.—1. Exchanges should only be sent free to the publisher's place of business. 2. Manuscript music, not intended for publication in a book, is chargeable with letter postage. 3. A Postmaster who habitually neglects to send registered package receipts, or neglects any other official duty, should be reported to the Department. 4. For a subscriber to write on the wrapper of a paper that he returns to the publishers is a violation of law, and subjects him to a fine of five dollars, while the whole package becomes subject to letter postage. Sec. 316, Laws 1866.

The handbill or programme that you send is not a bona fide supplement. We are a believer in man's natural depravity and folly, but yet we cannot thoroughly understand the depravity and folly of so many publishers trying to evade the law and common sense, by folding in their papers, handbills and advertisements headed "Extra—Supplement," which probably were printed thousands of miles away, and are about as much supplements as a horn on the Rocky Mountains is a supplement to a farm house in Maine.

Office Hours.—S. P. J., O——, Mo.—We can only give the rule for office hours, which is the "usual business hours of the place." Section 27, Reg. 1866. As these hours vary very much in different places, the time an office is kept open must be left to the respective Postmasters' discretion, taking care that proper facilities are extended to the public.

Mail Carrier, etc.—J. B. McC., E——, N. M.—1. Mail bags should not be delivered to any but sworn carriers, and where it is done, a report should be made to the Department. 2. A person not employed by the Department has a right to carry a sealed letter, but not for pay. Section 45, Reg. 1866.

Special Agent for Missouri.—A. J. R., N. H., Mo.—F. W. Schaurte, Esq., is the Special Agent for Missouri, Arkansas and Indian Territory.

Internal Revenue Tax.—F. M. E., B——, Penn.—It is not within our province to decide on the right or the wrong of the collection of a revenue tax. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue is the proper party to whom to apply for information.

Notifying Publisher.—L. H., E—— D——, Mass., and C. E. G., D—— M——, Va.—Notifications to a publisher should be addressed to the postmaster at the publisher's place of business, for the publisher.

Registration.—C. E. M., H——, Iowa.—1. A second registry fee is not required for forwarding a registered letter. The original fee covers all cost of registration till the letter is delivered. 2. Write to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General for envelopes. 3. Offices are made money-order offices with reference to the wants of the public and not according to amount of salary.....G. H. K., L——, Ky.—A missent registered letter should be re-registered, either on a new number or with such memoranda as to preserve the trace of the letter. The same practice will apply to registered letters sent for distribution to an office not a distributing office.

Postage.—J. B. B., W——, Ill.—There is no provision for returning undelivered papers to the publishers, unless on the usual prepayment of postage. If no provision is made for such prepayment, the papers should be sold and the proceeds credited to the Department. Sec. 391, Reg. 1866.....C. H. B., S—— A——, Fla.—1. Papers may be sent to the home of a Member of Congress under the franking privilege, although he may be absent. 2. It depends upon the fact whether a newspaper is a bona fide wrapper or not, whether or not seeds, cuttings, etc., may be inclosed in it. In your office your own judgment must decide.....C. A., M——, Minn.—Book-manuscript passing between author and publisher may pass at the rate of printed matter, but this privilege does not extend to newspaper-manuscript. It was recommended by the Convention of postmasters and special agents, held in Washington last January, that all manuscript for publication be placed on the same footing as book manuscript.....B. F. M., W—— W——, Conn.—The postage referred to in Sec. 211 of Reg. of 1866, is the regular postage required by Secs. 201 and following. If you are in doubt how to rate the postage on the paper you refer to, make inquiry of the Department (First Assistant Postmaster-General) according to Sec. 207. The "answer" you send applies to questions concerning weekly papers. We endeavor to make our answers cover the whole ground, but as they are generally replies to specific questions we must sometimes fail.....C. B. C., C——, N. Y.—The quarterly rates of postage on periodicals issued less frequently than once a week, is at the rate of one cent a month for four ounces or fraction. Hence, a quarterly is chargeable with one cent, a bi-monthly with two cents, a monthly with three cents, etc., for each four ounces or fraction. Sec. 252, Laws 1866.....J. F. J., C—— F——, Pa.—Your office being a new one, if postage has been paid on papers at a neighboring office, you should not collect again on the addresses being changed to your office. .....O. R. G., M——, Mich.—The postage on Sunday-school papers will be found stated in Sec. 202, Reg. of 1866.....All newspapers, whether published in the county or not, except weekly papers, are chargeable with postage if delivered through a post office. Of course this does not apply to matter lawfully franked.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and anuoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland, or to or from the North German Union (including Austria and its States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England. In the case of such letters arving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. This is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery.

Bnt entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic valne; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosnres other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, bnt on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examinatioa. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

ALLIANCE, OHIO, March 15, 1870.

A. E. WADE, P. M.,
South Bend, Ind.:

DEAR SIR—IN NOVEMBER LAST I ORDERED one of your "DOUBLE INDEX POST-OFFICE BOOKS." I have thoroughly tested it, and cheerfully assert that it is equal to the emergency; is all you claim for it, and possesses rare merit. With its employment I can adjust an account, while by the other systems I would be searching for the name in the index and the number of the page. The accounts are kept in a simple and comprehensive form, thereby saving time and money, also relieving the newspaper acconnt of much perplexity. It is invaluable to any postmaster, who prefers "system to confusion." Success to the "Double Index." Wade in!
Fraternally, HENRY SHREVE, P. M.

Mr. Shreve has had a large experience in Post-Office business, is the inventor of the "Postal Indicator," and ought to know "whereof he speaks."

Wade's "Double Index Post Office Book," handsomely bound in cloth and leather, is mailed to any postmaster on receipt of $5 30.

UNITED STATES MAIL
AND
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. X., NO. 8. NEW YORK, MAY, 1870. WHOLE NO. 116.

CLAMDANK, April, 1870.

In dne season the Now York mail was distributed and delivered, and Gabriel being fully equal to the requirements of the establishment when the rush was over, I was again invited to the sanctam (having stepped out while official labor was being performed), and Gushweak resumed his narrative. I infored from the flavor of his breath that he had been patronizing what he jocularly called Godfrey's Cordial, but it might have been simply the old aroma. "Le' me see," said he, tilting back his chair, and placing both feet on a high desk, "Le' me see—whar did I leave off?" I gave him the cue and he proceeded: "Yes, ho (meaning the P. M. at Camomile) allus writ back that he know'd nothin' about old letters, and saved bisself a world of trouble. I was bound to git rid of ths dura'd things as fast as I could, and I pasted and patched up a lot of old sorebacks as well as I could and sent some one way and some another, and pooty soon the old ranche was clear of 'em. The postmaster's neme was Brice Drumby—and as soon as he found out that I could git along without him, he didn't trouble me much with his presence. There was a rare lot of visitors at Camomile that season, and as many of 'em were young folks, and had oothin' to do they made the post office a reg'lar stompin' ground. They'd come behind the counter when the mails was openin' and as many of 'em were nice gals and all of 'em rale bloods, I let 'em do pooty much as they wonted to, and they glued to me wonderful. They'd take and hide each other's letters, and play more tricks on each other than would take six weeks to tell about—and made things hum, you bet. But after a while, some of the old folks got cross about it, and a member of Coogress or some other Militia General writ to Washiogton, and Drumby got a sharp letter from the Departmeot which made him hot as wrath, and he pitched into me like a thousand of brick. To make things wuss, a letter addressed to a doctor's wife got mixed up with some of the ooes I had allowed to be taken by the girls, and it was opened and read, and when ho found it out he made for me, and of I hadn't got out of the way, I'm blessed ef he wouldn't ha' shot me like a dog. I kep' away four or five days, for I wes afeard the fellow wouldn't listen to reason, and as there was oo sight for a settlemeot of the trouble, I thought best to vamoos—peticklar as the season was most over. So I told some of the boys that got me into the scrape that I was a goin', and ooe of 'em gin me a letter to a chum of his at Dismalton, in North Kerliny. When I got ther' the individ was away, but I steered right to the post office, and, askin' for the P. M., showed him my letter of introductiou, and said I was in want of a berth; and, as good luck would have it, he was in want of a clark, and we hitched hosses in about four minutes. Dismalton was a one hosse kind of a place, and I got sick of it afore I was there two days. By this time, however, the man I fetched the letter to got back, and when he read it he became uncommon friendly. I told him I didn't like Dismalton, and ef I could get into a bigger office I would be better suited. He forthwith offered to iugineer for me, and wrote to the city of Whywy in my behalf. In about four days he got a answor, stating that ef I was competent to take the place of assistant postmaster, there was a openin'; and as I knew'd I was, I told him so, and he writ agin, sayin' I was O. K., and would cum on right away. You cao bet I sloped from Dismalton in short order; and after a stage-ride of two days and a night I reached Whywy. We 'rived ther' after dark, and as I was mighty tired I went to bed as soon as I got my supper. Next mornin' I was up bright and early, and waded ont to find the post office afore breakfast. Up one street and down aoother I traveled, but every place was shut up, and I cum back to the tavvern and sot 'round till breakfast time, which I thought would never cum—on'y it did; and, arter worrying down my rations, I lit a sigyar and went for the office agia. I found it this hoat, and a mighty big institutioo it was. It was the biggest offico I ever see; and when I got inside, and looked it over, and saw about a dozen clarks to work, my heart wout into my hoots, for I thought I had taken too big a contract; but when I met Mr. Woolwood, the postmaster, and talked with him a little, my spunk all cum back agin. He said some of the boys maybe wouldn't feel pooty well pleased at briogiug in a eotire stranger to hoss 'em, but it didn't make any difference to him, and if I suited it would suit him and do his best friend a favior—his best fr end I 'spoee was the geot that writ to him for me from Dismalton. We woot into the private office—and after a little talk he waoted me to walk up stairs, where I was swore in by a commisioner. This over, down we slid agin, and dove into the maiu office. I was then took round and iotroduced to the boys (they looked grouty as sick mules, but I didn't keer a continental)—and whoo this ceremony was finished I was showed a desk in one corner of the P. M.'s room, which was for my use—and being duly installed and requested by Mr. Woolwood to go slow at first—he scratched gravel, and left me to paddle my owu canoe. When I cum too a little, I draw'd a head on the clarks in the office one after aoother—and I seed them that they wer' all boys—nary one 'peared to be old enough to shave; and puttin' on sun style I gave a loud ahem! and waded out among 'em. I reckon they thought I was goin' to opeo on 'em, for they pitched into their work and drive nhead so fast, that the tables was cleaned off afore you'd think a'most. I walked round behind a distribution table, that was about as high as a church organ, and ther' on a shelf I saw a row of pipes laying, like a lot of babies in bed—spoon fashion—and underneath about a half bushel of smoking tobacey They colored up consid'able when they saw me lookin' at their 'rangements—but when I took out my old meerschaum, fill'd it with their tobacey, and set fire to it and begun to puff away it fetched 'em—and they gathered round me like little chickens round a old hen—and forthwith immjutly told me they was glad I cum, and all hands lit their pipes, and in about a minute and a half there was smoke enough in that shanty to fill thirty-two big balloons. I thought they was agoin' it pooty strong, and concluded woo that perticklar smoke was over that all hands should draw it mildei in futur'. I ain't goin into a long rigmarole. I oo'y 'll say that I eooo found out all I wanted to know about the hoys and the office, and the assistant, whose place I took—and afore oight I was as much to home in that office as I am in this here. Jist about as the office was closin' Mr. Woolwood cum back, and helped me to settle the cash acconot, and then asked me if I'd "take a wash?" I dido't see any place to wash, but told him I reckoned I would. On this he went to a corner cuhbert, and instead of takin' out a washbowl and towel, he hauled oot a demijohn and two tumblers, and haadin' me ono of 'em, he poured out a awful slug of applejack, and told me to "drink hearty." I didn't like to refuse, 'cause I was fond of a little nip now and then—but when I swallered that dose, and had no water to cool it off with, I tho't I would hurn down to a stump, shore as you live. Heavings! how it scorched. I tried mighty hard to look gay, but it wae un go—my mouth would pucker awful. "That's mighty nice medicin', Mr. Gushback." "Gushweak, if you please," said I, adding, "Yes, sir, it's beautiful, but a little too strong without water." "Water, sir," saye he, "with nectar like that! Gushhead! you talk silly." "Gushweak," I mildly suggested again, my head beginning to feel dizzy already. "Well, no matter whether it's Gushwig, or Dutchwig, or Cobweb, it's all the same to-night. Take another drop, and then go to your supper." "Not any more, thank you," says I. "Gushpod, if you daro to refuse, I'll ship you forthwith." "If you please, my name ie Gushweak." "There, there, that'll do—I know your name well enough. There, drink that," and he poored out another perscription, and striking my glass agiu his'o, he says: "Here's a humper, Gushtoad"—and afore I thought, down into my red hot in'ards, atop o' the other, went the dog gon'd stuff. Quicker'n a wink, a'most, the room began to swim round, the floor began to rise and fall, and I jumped for what I took for a chair, hat it was a stove, which I upset, and over we rolled together oo the matting. I heard Woolwood sayin' to hisself, "What kin be the matter with Gushblood?" and then I caved. When I woke up next mornin', I found myself in bed with a awful headache, and I felt ashamed all over. How I got ther', I couldu't tell; but afore I had much time to think about it, the door opened, and Woolwood hisself walked in. "Good mornio', Mr. Fishbag," says he, "how er you feelin' this mornin'?" "Ou'y middlin', thank you," says I. "Had you bin driokin' afore you cum to the office?" says he "Nary a drop," ses I. "Woll," ses he, "ef you get throw'd ae easy as that, you better keep close to shore arter this Why, a little boy could staud mer'n you driuk, and I was surprised to see you lind out so quick."

Snadry Post Office Matters.

Prepayment of newspaper postage ie the subject of several communicatiooe rooeived the past month, but noae present very new features, and all lack the one thing needful of provision for payment on the immense numbers of papers mailed on particular days of the week, at only three or four of the post-offices, out of the nearly thirty thousand in the United States. Let one look into the New York office on any Wednesday and Thursday, and see the hundreds of thousands of papers to be sent off, and he would realize at ooce that any plan which would accomplish the result at an office where a few thousand papers are mailed would be utterly inadequate for the office we have named. That prepayment on all mail matter would increase the revenue of the Department we cannot deny, but how to do it to satisfy all parties interested is a problem to be solved. In the meanwhile, postmasters can add not a little to the Department's revenue, by collecting postage which they know to be due, especially the quarterly postage on newspapers, etc. Do not allow subscribers to think: "I've no money with me, give me the paper, and I'll pay you when I come in again," is the magic sentence by which they can escape the payment of postage.....A communication on the subject of a reduction of money-order fees next claims our attention, as in justice it should have done last month. The writer objects to a reduction of the fees, on small amounts but advocates it on large amounts, and adduces as argument that much of the business now done by banks would be done by the money-order offices But, then, the banks would make complaint, and the object of the money-order business is to transmit securely small sums of money, rather than to make money by banking..... We learn that a certain postmaster, not very far from our city, addressed a registered package eovelope to "Crowuhod, Iroland." We make no comment, but simply ask are there "any more of the same sort" in the Departmeot? See sections 4 and 10 of Registration Regulations of 1868..... We priot entire our next letter, prefacing it with the suggestion that we will be happy to assist in the honest pleasure of all non-subscribers to the MAIL, by writing their names on our subscription-book, on the terms stated in the letter

Publisher U. S. Mail:

DEAR SIR—I wish you would just say to those postmasters and others that are in the habit of openiog and reading the U. S. MAIL, intended for others who pay for it, and by so doing soil and detain it, that it only costs $1 12 a year, and if they will pay that small sum they can peruse it at the r honest pleasure.

Editor U S. Mail:

Peot-nn steam remiods me of your suggestioo some time to uncurk; so here goes the stopper. I desire to say a word in relation to the intolerable nuisance of throwing into mail-bags a mass of papers and siogle letters, without wrappers, promiscuously, to the annoyance of mail agents, postmasters and parties to whom they are addressed, and propose to give a little of my experieace within the last few weeks. Oo one occasion a small letter slipped under the wrapper of a single paper, and unobserved, I iooocoetly delivered the paper to the party addressed, who removed the wrapper while in the office, in the presence of the party to whom the letter was addressed, the letter falling upon the floor. It was picked up by another party and passed to the party to whom it was addressed. Here was a nice nut to crack; the owner of the letter happening to be one of those who thiuk postmasters are extraofficious if they refuse to allow the public to cheat the Department, of course, gave the postmaster a sevore blowing up. He was, in his estimation, a hliud old fool (which might be half-and-half true); and, on the whole, thought seriously of having a new one.

Another case of the same kind was a letter slipped into a paper, which traveled through two offices thus unobserved to this, and was delivered to a party, four miles away, who returned it in due time, when it was sent oo the back-track to the party addressed, who probably received it in about four days, instead of two hours, after it was first mailed. What official got blowed up on this occasion depooeot saith not.

Now, is this practice allowable? If not, is there no way to abate the nuisance? I must confess, I have looked in vain for authority to practise it. On the contrary, I nuderstnod the regulations and instructions to be explicitly to the contrary. Am I right?

F——, O., April, 1870.

Editor U. S. Mail:

It is natural for people, geoorally, to put in their "say" whenever there is half a chance; therefore I may, perhaps, be excused for putting in mine, as this is the first time I have presumed to trouble you with any of my remarks, and I will not insist on you reading these, unless you have leisure time. I am a P. M.—was appointed last April—and one of the first things I did was to send for the U. S. MAIL, and as I was a "greener" in postal business, I found it to be my "right hand man" in keeping me "straight."

By its assistance and a careful study of Regulations, I was soon enabled to run my office in, perhaps, as good order as "older hands" do theirs with more experiooce and less U. S. MAIL. But one is never done learoing, if he will only try to improve, and there is no need of ooe coming to a dead halt when there is plenty of room to go ahead After having lived thirty years with moderate advantages, I have at last discovered that I don't know anything compared with what is to be known, and consequently I am not flattered that I have done any great thing when I have simply done as well as others, with a wide margin for improvement. Every one, perhaps, will admit that there is a wide margin for improvement in the postal service, and indeed in all branches of the civil service, and will claim that it is the duty of all postmasters and other public servants to labor to make themselves thoroughly competent to discharge the duties of their respective offices and also the duty of postmasters to make improvements in the offices for the convenience and accommodation of the public, as well as the safety and proper handling of the mail, while the Government insists on honesty and efficiency in all its officers. Well, that is right. But where, let me ask, is the inducement held out by the present system of appointments and removals to encourage honesty and efficiency in public officials? Is it in the fact that, in effect, these qualifications are at a discount, being no protection to "official heads," while political and personal trickery and favoritism is above par, and holds the balance of power?

May not any public officer by appointment, especially in "fat" offices, exclaim, "What advantageth it me," though I fight with the rogues and thieves of the Government, though I be honest and efficient when it is no protection to "official life" and when it "profiteth more" to be shrewd and dishonest?"

Drink swindle and make a "strike" for tomorrow I die without judge or jury. To elevate the standard of integrity and efficiency in our public servants, to renovate and improve our civil service generally, we must make these qualifications a shield to the competent, faithful and honest and a sword to the incompetent, unfaithful and dishonest. No one should be condemned unjustly, and all should have a chance to answer charges preferred against them. An officer in the military service is not discharged without a hearing. Why should civil officers be? In the "Civil Service Bill" and the proposition to abolish the franking privilege, I see the sky brightening for a new era, in which "troth crushed to earth shall rise again," and integrity and ability in official positions shall be recognized and rewarded. The integrity and ability of the present administration is looming up brightly and promises reformation, and every patriot says "Amen." Let the country offer a reward for integrity and ability combined, by making these honorable in fact and not as an empty bubble, bringing no real advantages to the possessor when confronted by the subtilty of political or personal favoritism, and there will be no impetus to excel in these virtues and a reformation will necessarily follow. Well, I do declare! I thought I was going to write something about post-office business and "I've done, gone and got" entirely off of the track, so I'll whistle "Down brakes" and stop

Editor U. S. Mail, New York:

DEAR SIR—After a careful perusal of your welcome little moothly for December, I filed it away with its fellows with a sigh of regret that I should not see another copy for one long month. Now, Mr. Editor, I don't see why the MAIL cannot become at least a semi-moothly, and even a weekly. I see, on reference to the able report of Mr. Creswell, that there are 27,378 postmasters in the United States. Now, I have no doubt, could every postmaster know the value of your estimable little journal to them as an "assistant" in the proper performance of their official duties, they would not fail to subscribe at once. Aside from the vast amount of information upon official matters, it contains often very interesting letters, such as that of "Nicotemus" in the December number, and the wonder to me is that any postmaster will be found without it.

Now, Mr. Editor, I, as one of the "27,378," am willing and anxious to do all I can for the prosperity of our enterprising little paper. I, for one, would like to hear from you through the columns of the MAIL as to the feasibility of issuing the MAIL more frequently. I believe this proposition of mine will meet with a hearty response from the "P. M.s" throughout the country. We want more letters from postmasters, giving incideots, etc., of their experiences and suggestions upon the many vexed questions that are continually arising in all offices. Of course, we have our regulations to refer to as a guide to the proper performance of our duties; but then it does us all good to talk with each other about it, and the MAIL, being "our" organ, is the proper channel for us to exchange our views.

Hoping you will give this a place in your paper, and that we shall hear from you and many of your subscribers through the columns of the MAIL in February number,

I remain, respectfully,

A ONE-ARMED P. M.

A CONDENSED LIBRARY.—We have received (and paid for) the first twenty-seven numbers of a work to which the above title will apply—though its other name is "ZELL'S POPULAR ENCYCLOPEDIA"—and which we consider so good a return on our investment that we do not hesitate to recommend a similar venture to each one of our readers. The servants of our revered Uncle Samuel's Post-Office Department, though all "men of letters," cannot usually afford the well-stocked library which is one of the proper belongings of that class of the community. Those of our official friends who nevertheless desire some attainable substitute for such a library, from which they can "post themselves," on occasion, in matters of History, Geography, Biography, Geology (and the other 'ologies), Art, Literature, Mechanics, and "things in general," cannot do better than follow our example and subscribe to the above-named work. T. Elwood Zell, 17 South Sixth street, Philadelphia, is the publisher, and W. R. Bond, 5 Beekman st., is the New York Agent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Billing Insufficiently Prepaid Letters.—When insufficiently prepaid letters are sent to an office for delivery, a post-bill should accompany them; but not if sent to a distributing office. (Sec. 92, Reg 1866.)

Mail Carrier Carrying Letters.—J. S., F——, Md., and W. W., O——, Fla—Mail carriers may carry letters out of the mail, provided they are inclosed in stamped envelopes, or relate to some article or thing conveyed at the same time with the letters, but not otherwise. (Secs. 45 and 46, Reg. 1866.) All infringements of this rule should be reported to the Department.

Credit for Forwarding Unpaid Letters.—S. P. S., A——, Minn, and H. P. J., E——, Wis.—The amount on unpaid letters forwarded from your office is an overcharge, and should be entered in the column of overcharges in the account.

Delivery of Letters to Fictitious Addresses.—M. J., G——, N. Y., and H. D. S., C——, O.—Letters or packages addreseed to fictitious persons or firms are not deliverable, and should be sent to the Dead Letter Office at the end of each month. (Sec. 60, Reg. 1866.)

Registration.—H. K. G., S—— B——, N. Y.—Section 7 and section 18 of Registration Regulations refer to two different officers. Section 7 to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, to whom a report of registered letters should be sent; section 18, to the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, to whom an account of registered letters need to be sent with the quarterly returns, but which is no longer required. Many postmasters confound these sections, evidently not bearing in mind the difference between the officer to whom the quarterly returns are sent and the Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

Postage.—A. C., M——, PA.—Postage is chargeable as well on papers sent from news agents as though sent from publishers. It is none but weekly papers published in the county where the subscriber resides that can be delivered free of postage.....P. L., M—— P——, Wis.—It is correct to charge the unpaid postage on mail matter from Great Britain that should have been paid at letter rates, although it reaches this country paid only at book-packet rates ....E. H., M——, Pa.—You are right in charging postage at transient rates on newspapers or periodicals irregularly and promiscuously sent; but postage on such matter should be paid at the mailing office.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GATLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

SIR—I inclose an important notice to postmasters and the public, respecting a reduction in the rate of international letter postage between the United States and Switzerla d, to take effect on the 1st May, 1870, and request that you will please cause the same to be published in the next issue of the U. An additional postal convention has been concluded between the United States and Switzerland, reducing the rate of international letter postage on letters exchanged in closed mails via England, from fifteen to ten cents per single rate of fifteen grammes (half ounce) or under, pr payment optional, to take effect May 1, 1870.

The rates of postage, conditions of payment, etc., on newspapers, book-packets and samples of merchandise, remain unchanged.

Postmasters will levy and collect postage accordingly, on and after May 1, 1870.

By order of the Postmaster-General,

Circular to Postmasters.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE ASS'T POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
April 9, 1870.

NEW SERIES OF POSTAGE STAMPS.

At an early day, in the regular course of business, the Department will issue to postmasters postage stamps of new designs.

You are required to exhaust all of the present style on hand before supplying the public with the new; and in no case will you be allowed to make exchanges for individuals, or to return stamps to the Department to be exchanged.

The stamps now in use are not to be disregarded, but must be recognized, in all cases, equally with the new ones. The stamps known as the series of 1861, of which a few are supposed to be yet outstanding, are also to be recognized. Those issued prior to the commencement of the War of the Rebellion were long since declared to be valueless.

Special attention is called to the fact that each sheet of all denominations of the new series contains but 100 stamps. This must be borne in mind, to prevent mistakes in counting, as to the present issue some of the denominations have 150 stamps to the sheet.

Special requests of the new style of stamps will be disregarded until the stock of the present issue in possession of the Department is exhausted.

NEW SERIES OF STAMPED ENVELOPES.

About the 1st of July next the Department will commence the issue of a new series of stamped envelopes, and a new newspaper wrapper. The stamps will be of the same designs and colors as the new postage stamps of corresponding denominations. The shape of the stamps embossed on the envelope and wrapper will be oval. The new postage stamps are oblong.

As the new envelopes and wrappers will be issued under a new contract, it is expected that they can be furnished to the public of a superior quality, and at rates considerably cheaper than those now in use. It is therefore enjoined that you limit your orders from the Department for the current quarter to barely sufficient to last until its close; in the meantime using every effort in your power to dispose of your present stock.

A full description of the new envelopes and wrappers, with a schedule of prices, will be sent you upon completion of the arrangements now in progress for their issue.

Postmasters are instructed to use all reasonable means to encourage the use of stamped envelopes with "return request" printed thereon. The utility of the "return request system" has been conclusively demonstrated, embodying, as it does, "celerity, certainty and security," and its general adoption will greatly relieve the public from annoying delays, and the Dead Letter Office of heavy labor and expense.

The new stamped envelopes will be furnished in different varieties and qualities, and at such reasonable prices as will induce their use generally in preference to the ordinary unstamped envelopes.

W. H. H. TERRELL,
Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

"Trying it On."

The recent vigorous action of the Post Office Department with a view to the suppression of swindling through the mails, has naturally given occasion to much gnashing of teeth on the part of the amiable and (gift)-enterprising followers of Jeremy Diddler, Esq., of happy memory. So long as the Department confined its operations to the non-delivery of letters addressed to "fictitious persons or firms," the smartest of the rogues could carry on their evil trade with impunity, by hiring the name of some seedy "scallawag" whom they could always produce as the principal of the "firm." while they modestly shrouded their own identity under the "Co."—(Satan being the "silent partner," who will not get his share till all accounts are settled.) But when the order of the Postmaster-General, communicated to the Postmaster at New York, through Gen. TERRELL, Third Assistant Postmaster General, appeared, showing the determination of the Department to no longer allow the Post Office to be made the instrument of systematic fraud by any person, under whatever name, great fear fell upon those children of Ishmael, "whose hands are against every man" (and itch to be in every man's pocket.) In vain they brought forward their brazen "dummies" to be identified, and protested against the invasion of their "rights." Postmaster Jones laughed at their richly dyed beards and remorselessly racked ed their letters by each mail to the Dead Letter Office.

Deep consternation ensued throughout all swindledom. The graceful Hubbard swelled with indignation till his highly respectable double eye glass would no longer remain astride his net se respectable nose, and fell weeping into his beloved Michelin's arms; Elias (not a prophet himself, but knowing the profits of knavery intimately) didn't say much, but what he did say was energetic, if not pious, in its character; Daily and Wogan sang together "The Irish Emigrant's Lament," with new words adapted to the melancholy occasion, and made a donation of their stock of "fac-similes of U. S. notes" to the "sick families" of the Funian Brotherhood; the Harp of Harper, Wilson & Co., was hung upon the Willows, but we regret to add that the members of the firm are not yet hung there (or elsewhere) also; and Cornish, belying the old ballad, which says that shut up shop without asking any questions at all.

* * "Cornish men
Will know the reason why,"

But after the first shock caused by this unexpected blow had somewhat subsided, we are informed that this band of brothers met together for counsel as to the proper course to be pursued by them under the circumstances. Where they met we don't know, except that it could not have been "on the square," and what they did we know not, for we enter not into the councils of the ungodly. We can only conjecture, in the light of subsequent events, what took place in this Rogues' Parliament, and we think it was there resolved to "try it on" in this wise:

An individual calling himself an "Attorney at Law," of No. 75 Nassau street, New York, named William M. Martine—one of those "black sheep" whose lives are a constant mortification to respectable families, and who had previously figured in certain transactions not altogether unconnected with forgery and bogus checks—suddenly issued a circular modelled after the "Wogan & Co.' pattern, offering, or seeming to offer, in his own name, counterfeit money for sale. The circular was soon brought to the notice of Postmaster Jones, who promptly "shut down the gates" and refused to deliver letters directed to Martine, who thereupon appeared in person to claim them. He was shown the circular, and denied having issued it or authorized its issue. He was told that if he would agree to return to the Post Office all answers to that circular which might reach him, he could have his letters; but to this he would not agree. He gave references, however, which turned out to be eminently unsatisfactory, and the delivery of the letters was refused. Now came the time for "trying it on." Martine made complaint before U. S. Commissioner Osborne, charging Gen. Jones with "unlawfully detaining" his letters, and retained (or had retained for him) a well-known criminal lawyer to prosecute the case, the U. S. District Attorney being instructed to defend the Postmaster. The evidence being all taken, Commissioner Osborne, on the 21st ult., delivered his decision in the case, as follows:

> The facts disclosed in this case and the questions of law have been hurriedly considered by reason of great pressure of official duties, and what views I here express are the impressions received from a hasty perusal of the opinions of the Attorney-General on similar questions. Two or three cases have been cited, one of which has a marked application to the question involved in this case. The Yazoo City Post-Office case (volume 8 Attorney General's opinions) related to printed matter the design and tendency of which are to promote insurrection in a State. The opinion of the Attorney General seems to be confined to acts of treason and domestic violence, and does not apply to lesser offences of fraud and misdemeanor. Able and argumentative as the opinion is, the subjects discussed, the views presented and the questions solved do not have pertinency to the case in question. The case of Emory & Co. (volume 9, Attorney-General's opinions) is more direct in point. There the Attorney-General declares that the right of the Post-Office Department to make regulations which will prevent the service from being prostituted to purposes of fraud has never been denied. The Postmaster-General has the right to order the non-delivery of letters to persons who are carrying on a system intended to cheat and defraud the public. At the same time great caution should be exercised, and clear and convincing proof of fraudulent intent should be made known before a postmaster should detain any letter or refuse to deliver the same to the person addressed. To invest a postmaster with power to inquire into the character of each man's correspondence before he delivers the letters, in order to protect the Department from being used as a channel for crime and immorality—such power, I apprehend, would never be submitted to by the people. But when outside information, reliable and trustworthy, reaches the postmaster that certain parties are carrying on a system of fraud and crime by the use of the mails; and when such a system has been brought to the knowledge of the Postmaster-General, and he issues instructions or regulations pertaining to the same, which are not inconsistent with the statutes, I hold that the postmaster is bound to obey such instructions, and if in good faith carries them out and refuses to deliver letters which he has reason to believe contain fraudulent and immoral matter, to be circulated among the people for purposes of illicit gain, and does not break the seal of or otherwise tamper with said letters, but merely detains them in his custody, calling upon the party demanding or sending the same to satisfy him that said mailable matter is in violation of no law of the United States or the State, and showing to said addresses the evidence he has of their fraudulent character, the postmaster should not, in my opinion, be held criminally responsible for such an exercise of discretion. He may make himself liable in damages to the party aggrieved, but the unlawful detention is to be understood as acting with criminal intent or reckless judgment in the discharge of his duty and exercising the functions of his office. In this case the postmaster had almost conclusive proof that the letters addressed to the complainant were answers to circulars issued and circulated by complainant, of unusually audacious in propositions, disgraceful to any being who pretends to call himself or to be called a man. The facts in this case, in my opinion, abundantly justified the Postmaster in detaining the letters addressed to complainant, and the good faith of the Postmaster was shown when complainant asked the reasons why his letters were stopped—that if the complainant thought he had any business letters among the great number addressed to him, he would allow him to look them over and select such and take them; and furthermore, the evidence shows that Mr. Gayler, the Special Agent, also informed him that he might have all the letters, if he would promise to return all that were in answer to the circular shown him. This the complainant refused to do. He denied having the circular at this interview, but afterward comes on the stand and on oath swears he did, and admitted also on the stand that he issued it and circulated it for the purpose of deceiving the public and for the purpose of gain. Under the circumstances of this case, with the instructions of the Postmaster General to the defendant to detain and send to the Dead-Letter Office all letters connected with swindling concerns, together with the knowledge before the Postmaster of their fraudulent character, at and before the time complainant demanded his letters, and what has developed on the examination before me, I cheerfully sustain the action of the Postmaster, and honorably acquit him of any criminal or improper conduct, and discharge him under these proceedings.

And so the result of "trying it on" was, that it didn't fit. We understand Mr. M. and his backers intend beginning a civil suit; but we affectionately advise them first to examine carefully their Brother Hubbard's balance-sheet, as it appeared after his two suits of the same nature against Postmaster Kelly were concluded.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Refusal of Mail Carrier to take a Mail.—A. E. M., B——, O.—It a mail carrier refuses to depart with the mails, the refusal should be reported to the Second Assistant Postmaster-General, Contract Office, Washington, D. C. (Sec. 119, Reg. 1866), and temporary arrangements made for the carriage of the mails.

Clubs of Papers.—H. K., N——, Pa.—The papers sent to a post office in a club, according to Sec. 211, Reg. of 1866, should be delivered at that office, and none of them can be forwarded to another office without being liable to additional postage.

Post-Office Scales.—G. W. J., O——, Pa.—Letter balances or post-office scales are furnished by the Appointment Office, Post Office Department, Washington, D. C.

Box Rents.—1. The whole subject of box rents is treated in Chapter XLII. of the Regulations. 2. If you desire a readjustment of salary before the time fixed by law, you must comply with the act and instructions of June 12, 1866. These were published in the MAIL for July of that year.

Envelopes Addressed Simply to an Office.—T. C. McD——, W—— P——, Pa.—An envelope or package addressed simply to an office, is evidently intended to be opened by the postmaster at that office. We have known cases where postmasters have used cheap envelopes in place of wrapping paper. If it prove, however, that an omission of an individual address has occurred, the postmaster on delivering the letter should explain the reason of its being opened.

Classes of Offices.—M. A. L, B——, Pa., and E. J. S, H——, Mich.—Section 28 of Code 1866, clearly defines the classes of offices. The section is long, and we have not space to publish it.

Refusal to Pay Postage.—G. K. D, M——, N. Y.—If a person refuses to pay postage on the delivery of mail matter chargeable with postage, the matter should be retained, and if letters, sent to the Dead Letter Office, marked "refused," (Sec. 360, Reg. 1866.) if papers, "it should be sold at the end of the quarter, and the proceeds credited to the Department" (Sec. 391, Reg. 1866.) But it, as we judge from your inquiry, you have delivered mail matter, and not collected postage at the time, the Department not only affords you no remedy, but requires you to charge yourself with the amount, and report it as paid in your quarterly account (Sec. 156, Reg. 1866.) The debt thus becomes personal. As a postmaster, however, has to swear that he has not knowingly delivered any mail matter on which postage had not been paid at the time of delivery (Sec. 360, Reg. 1866), it is better to collect such postage, than charge yourself with it.

Mailing Letters on the Cars.—J. P., P——, Pa.—Letters should not be mailed on the cars, except on railway postal cars, unless they are written after the usual hours of closing the mails at the post office. (Sec. 99, Reg. 1866.)

Marking Stamps.—J. F. B, V——, H——, W. Va.—A rule was made in 1863, that all post offices should be allowed circular post-marking stamps, but this rule has since been rescinded. This is probably the reason that you do not get one.

Forwarding Regular Papers.—W. A, M——, Mich.—A regular paper on which the postage has not been paid should not be forwarded, but the publishers should be notified that the paper is not taken from the office, and the reason given. (Sec. 392, Reg. 1866.) If after this the paper continues to arrive it should be sold, and the proceeds credited to the Department. (Sec. 391, Reg. 1866.)

Erasing a Post-Office Address.—M. B., P——, Cal.—A postmaster has no right to stop mail matter in transit and erase the post-office address, substituting another. Such delinquencies should be reported to the Department.

Application for Clerk Hire.—J. H. C., L——, N. Y.—Application for clerk hire should be made to the First Assistant Postmaster-General.

Money-Order Offices.—J. N. W., S——, Miss.—Application to have a post office made a money-order office, should be made to the Superintendent of the Money-Order Business, Washington, D. C., stating the reasons the request should be granted. We learn that some four hundred additional money-order offices will be put in operation in July.

Unpaid Letter Bills, etc.—J. W., S—— M——, Ala.—1. Unpaid letter bills must be included in the quarterly return, but not registered letter bills. 2. A letter addressed to a person known to be in the county should be retained the time requires by the regulations. 3. Drop letters not prepaid one rate should be sent to the Dead Letter Office.

Intentional Underpayment of Postage.—H. W. S——, N. Y.—The law does not contemplate the intentional underpayment of postage, and such letters should not be mailed, but returned to the writer. The language of the decision is, "in case of known intentional and wilful omission [to pay the full postage] the letters should be held for postage, and if not paid by the mailing party, returned to the Dead Letter Office." See MAIL for July, 1867.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious losa and anuoyauce to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to or from the North German Union (including Austria and its States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England, are also chargeable with a fine on delivery in addition to the postage. In the case of letters arriving in the United States the fine is five cents. In both cases the amount is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Rettimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, to Italy and the Roman or Papal States, and to Middle and Lower Egypt, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Branswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

Until January 1, 1870, letters equiil be registered, on payment of certain special postage rates, to France, Algeria, Corsica, Bourbon, Nice and Savoy; also to Alexandretta, Tangiers and Tunis. Tuis, however, cannot be done at present. The registration fee on letters, etc., to all foreign countries to which registration is practicable will be found noted in the Table of Postages to Foreign Countries. On such letters, etc., only the postage rates as given in the table need be prepaid, in addition to the registration fee.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE. — Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

RATES OF POSTAGE ON PRINTED MATTER FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

1. TO OR FROM GREAT BRITAIN.—Newspapers and circulars, 2 cents each. Book packets (including printed papers of all kinds, maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, etc.), and patterns or samples, 6 cents per four ounces or fraction of four ounces, if four ounces or over in weight. For rates on less than four ounces see Foreign Postage Table. The above charges must be fully prepaid at the office of mailing, by means of U. S. postage stamps affixed outside the packet or its cover and are in full to destination in the United Kingdom. If not so prepaid, the packet cannot be forwarded.

Newspapers, book packets, and patterns, or samples of merchandise, originating in the United Kingdom and addressed to the United States, will be received in the United States fully prepaid, and must be delivered free of charge to the party addressed at the office destination in the United States.

The above rates (paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5) are in full to destination; and no charge is to be made on the delivery of newspapers, book packets or samples arriving from Germany, Austria, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and Greece, by the above mails, except the deficient postage or fine on each matter when insufficiently prepaid. But the postage on all printed matter to or from FRANCE AND ALGERIA must, in all cases, be collected here.

REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

I. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must, in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

United States Exchange Offices for Foreign Mails.

Boston is an office of Exchange for British, French, North German Union, and Belgian Mails.

Philadelphia and Chicago are offices of Exchange for British, French and North German Union Mails.

Portland and Detroit are offices of Exchange for British and French Mails.

Baltimore and San Francisco offices of Exchange for British Mails only.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The rate of postage on mail letters to any part of the United States is three cents a half ounce or fraction thereof. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent. All drop as well as mail letters must be prepaid.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All communications on official business, of whatever origin, addressed to heads of the executive departments of government, or heads of bureaus therein, or to chief clerks of departments, shall be received and conveyed by mail free of postage without being franked or indorsed "Official Business."

By a joint Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Adjutants General of the several States and Territories, are authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, any medals, certificates of thanks or other testimonials, awarded, or which may be awarded by the Legislatures of said States and Territories, to the soldiers thereof, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may direct.

Section 123, Regulations 1866, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as a personal privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weight of four ounces. Mail matter to those possessing the privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertains to official business. Section 124 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides these, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenue officers, also, besides those mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may only frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No communication, official or otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can be sent free.

The Act of March 1, 1869, relating to franking, makes no change in the privilege, but merely enacts that the signature of the franking party must be written, and not printed.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

SMITH'S
Post-Office Account Book.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 28, 1870.

The undersigned have examined a method of keeping Post-Office accounts, issued in book form, by Cornelius Smith, Postmaster at Annville, Lebanon County, Pa., and are of the opinion that said method will recommend itself to Postmasters as a check against error as well as a valuable assistant in making out quarterly returns. Being without complication, the most buy ted understanding may at once comprehend the principle.

WADE'S
DOUBLE-INDEX POST-OFFICE BOOK.

The STANDARD work for Post-Office accounts.

Editorial from the Post-Office Gazette, Washington, D. C., for April, 1870.

WADE'S DOUBLE-INDEX POST-OFFICE BOOK.

From a careful examination of a copy of this book, now before us, we believe it to be all that is claimed for it, and we feel that we are but doing postmasters a benefit when we urge upon them the importance of procuring a copy at an early day of a book, whereby the keeping of Post Office accounts becomes a pastime.

Extract from an Editorial in the Chicago Postal Record of February, 1870.

"EUREKA.—WADE'S DOUBLE-INDEX POST-OFFICE BOOK—We take pleasure in recommending Wade's P. O. Book to Postmasters. It has long been a necessity that some simple and effectual system should be introduced for keeping Postage and Box accounts. Mr. Wade has discovered the way to do it and in our opinion he is a benefactor to the whole official community of Postmasters. It would do well if it were introduced into every Post Office in the land. We have examined this book carefully, and unhesitatingly say that it fills the bill completely. Its chief features are, etc., etc. Many other reasons might be given as to its usefulness and the economy of time in keeping P. O. accounts. The Post-Office Department should adopt it, and no Postmaster should be without it."

SARDIS, Miss., April 12, 1870.

A. B. WADE, South Bend Ind.:

Sir—I find your book one of the most useful books I have ever met with in keeping P. O. accounts. It is not one-fifth the trouble to keep a post office with one of your books as it is to have an ordinary one. I can cheerfully recommend it to all postmasters. If they would all get one they would not have to work so hard to make quarte ly returns. I would not be without it for four times its cost. I consider my five dollars well spent. JAMES N. WADDY, P. M.

MR. A. B. WADE:

Dear Sir—Your valuable work has reached me, and its merits have been put to a practical test, and to say that I am well pleased with it would convey but a faint idea of my high appreciation. For simplicity, utility and completeness, it is unequaled, and will unquestionably meet with that reward and wide success which its intrinsic merits eminently deserve. It has only to be seen to be appreciated, and I therefore most cordially recommend it to those who have not seen it.

Your "Double-Index P. O. Book" came to hand yesterday. I have examined it thoroughly, and pronounce it "one of the best things out." It supplies a want long felt by all Postmasters, and its astonishing low price places it within the reach of all. UNITED STATES MAIL
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. X., NO. 9. NEW YORK, JUNE, 1870. WHOLE NO. 117.

CLAMBANK, N. J., May, 1870.

Mr. Gushweah continued his narrative as follows:

"I thought it rather rough on Woolwood's part to pitch into me as he did, but as I felt very much mortified at the operation of the night afore, and at the condition in which he found me in the mornin', I tried to make believe I took all he said as a joke; and, to put things all right, I remarked that, as a general thing, I could keep my end up, but that the journey from Dismalton had tired me very much, and I was so near played out, that skim milk itself would 'a fetched me. This tickled old Stick-in-the-mud greatly, and he told me to git up and come to the office at once—and away he went. As soon as he'd gone I kicked the kiver off, riz up, drest myself, and when I was washed and combed and fixed up generally, I looked good as new, on'y I didn't feel so. Brekfast was ready when I went down stairs, and I was ready for breakfast; and accordin'ly I set down to the table and pitched into some biled eggs and pickles as if I meant business.

"I had just got fairly seated, when a waiter bent over and asked me in a whisper if my name was Mushleg; and afore I had time to knock him down or answer him in some other innocent way, he went on to say that a messengor from the post office was at the dining-room door waiting for me. I turned to look, and there, sure enough, stood one of the post-office boys a beckonin' to me with his right fore-finger, and a winkin' so hard with fust one eye and then t'other, that ef I hadn't a stopped him, he would have kep on till this here blessed minute. I riz at once and went for him—when he told me Mr. Woolwood had a "eye-opener" waitin' for me, and I must cum right away. What was meant by a "oye-opeuer" was mor'n I could make out; but before I could ask any questions young squibob was gone. "Eye-opener," thinks I, "that means my walkin' papers;" and without steppin' to finish a pint-tumbler of soft-biled eggs which I had buttered and peppered and salted, I hurried to headquarters.

"Hallo, Pugwash!" was the first salute from my new boss, followed by, "what in thunder kept you so long; this gravy's about spiled, I reckon; but, come, try it on," and he handed me a glass, about half-full, of some mixture or another. It made me sick at the stomach to look at it. "Excuse me," said I, "but I cannot drink anything this morning." "Washtub, you're luney," said Woolwood. "Indeed, ain't I," was my reply, adding, "and I would rather commence my first day's work with a clear head." "Well, I don't know but your right, Hose-feel," says he; "so go ahead, put things shipshape, and make yourself at home," and, swallowing his dose, he rose and left the establishment. I felt pooty much relieved when I was put in possession, and went to work in good spirits. The first thing I did was to travel over the premises, and sich another old museum as that was, history gives no account of. Down collar I found a lot of mail bags, covered with dust and cobwebs, and glued so fast together with slime that it was almost impossible to separate them, and in one corner I rooted out a half bushel mail locks that had lain there until they were all rusty and unfit to use. I called one of the boys down, and showed him the property, and asked him if the Department had never wrote to them about pouches and locks. He said circulars had come there one a top o' the other, but no one minded them, and if any one had ever knowed anything about these bags and locks, they had forgotten it, and of I hadn't dug 'em up they'd laid ther' till the cows cum home. I bet you, 'squire, ther's plenty offices to-day which considers theirselves as smart as you can make 'em that has locks and bags enough stuck away in holes and corners to supply two or three States. I had a awful time clearin' out that old magerzine, and it was all of four or five days afore I got things in workin' order. In some of the old bags I found old letters and papers that had never b'en shook out; and, talking 'bout yer frankin' prevlege, I found piles o' old Congress reports, the leds of which if tore off would hev shingled the biggest meetin' house in America, besides twine and wrappin' paper enough to start a first-class grocery, of they hedn't a bin all trompled up. But I finally got the place red up, and when old Woolwood see what I had done, he took me by the right hand, and laying his left on my shoulder, says he. "M'Squeak you're a bully boy with a glass eye, and I'm glad I hired you." "Mr. Woolwood," says I, "you don't seem to remember my name; it is Gushweak—G-u-s-h-w-e-a-k Gushweak!" "Oh! bless you, yes, I do. Your name is common as pie round here. Why, Pugwash, I would as soon forgit my own name as your'n." I found there was no use in talkin' across the board about my name and so I let him call me what he pleased. After this I had it all my own way, and I was more postmaster than Mr. Woolwood himself. In fact, he scarcely ever cum to the office afore night, and then he was generally as mellow as a old peach. I had a good deal of trouble at fust with newspaper publishers and box holders, for it 'peared they did jest as they pleased afore I cum ther'; but I soon bro't 'em to taw, tho' the new spaper cusses did try to blackgyard me inter doin' their part of the mailing business as well as our own; but they couldn't fetch me nary a time. I had authority to act, and I acted; and of I felt like hurryin' up their stuff, I'd hurry it up, and of I didn't, I didn't. The box-holders, too, they would make more fuss of they wa'n't waited on in a instant than a organ-grinder and a monkey; but I ordered the boys go slow, and these troublesome customers soon found that we took our own time to 'tend to 'em. I was awfully down on some of 'em, and I used to keep 'em rappin' at the window half an hour afore they were served. Sum of 'em complained to Mr. Woolwood about it; but he only told 'em to talk to me, and that's all the satisfaction they got for ther' trouble. Several letters were writ to him complainin' of me; but, as I always opened the office letters, I stuffed the impident things in the stove, so none of 'em aint answered yet. One chap writ to the Postmaster-Gineral, and a letter cum back from Washington asking about the trouble. I didn't show it to Woolwood nor did I answer it myself, so that finished that business. There was lots of stage drivers who used to call for the mails on their different routes, and they would lay round till their stuff was all chucked into their bags and their bags locked, and then they would pick 'em up and walk off with 'em, as of the whole Government belonged to 'em. I was bound to change this style of doin' things, so I issued a order that every driver should help make up his own mail. Of course, they kicked at this, and said it was agin the law; but I told 'em law or no law they would hev to do it, or be blessed if they'd git a mail at all. And so they went to work, and in a short time they helped so much every day that the regular boys didn't hev half work; and of corse it pleased 'em. In fact, I made so many new rules which worked to their advantage as well as my own—that without my knowin' it they got up a subscription, and made the stage-drivers cum down a quarter a piece, to buy me a horse-pistol, which was presented to me with a speech of thanks. The present was all very well, and of course it was a compliment, but the dog-gon'd thing was so heavy, and had a flint lock at that, so I never used it but once, and that was at a rat in the back-yard, and it nearly kicked me over the fence (I mean the pistol, not the rat); and it made such a thundern' noise that a crowd gathered round th' office wantin' to know who was blastin' rocks about ther'? I walked lame in my right shoulder about thirty days after that, and kep' the pistol layin' at a open window, in hopes sum one would steal it, but I reckon the sight of the abominable thing scared everybody away. One of the drivers, however, borrowed it one day, and I didn't see him agin for two months, and then he made his appearance with his arm in a sling and a green patch over his eye. I had forgot all about the pistol, when he says: "How much must I pay you for your weepon?" Says he to me, "It's busted. You mustn't be too hard on a fellow, for I lost an eye and broke au arm by it, and I have had to pay a pooty stiff doctor's bill." I cum nigh on to explodin' myself with laughter, but I held right steady, and told him that I was sorry that the pistol was ruined, but as long as he had suffered so much by it I would let up on him, and charge him nothin'," and the poor fellow almost cried his other eye out at my kindness. Two or three other presentation operations were talked of among the boys afterward, but I always shet down on 'em—they're demoralizin', and, if horse-pistols, dangerous—so not any more for me."

Just here Jane Mary and Mrs. Moddle drove up in our pastor's carriage, and I was invited to ride with them to Mrs. M's grocer, where she wanted to select some Limburger cheese for Mr. Moddle, which, she says, he is passionately fond of. For my part, I can't appreciate it unless I have a cold in the head However, I agreed to go, and, promising Gushweak to give him another interview, we parted, he, apparently, going in search of Godfrey's cordial, and the ladies and myself on a scent for Limburger. So, for the present, au revoir. MONS. TONSON.

The following goes to prove how awfully and wonderfully stupid some people are: At a meeting of the Marylebone (London) vestry recently, a letter was received from the authorities of the western division of the post-office, stating that an old disused pump in Newman street, Oxford street, had been misused by some persons for a pillar letter-box, and several letters had been "posted" through the slit left by the removal of the handle. A request was added that the pump might be removed. A short time ago a similar mistake, on a more extensive scale, was discovered with respect to an old pump in New street, Dorset square. Numerous complaints had been made from that district of the loss of letters, and the matter remained a mystery until the pump was examined for other purposes, when it was discovered that twenty-seven letters had been posted in it. The vestry ordered the removal of the deceptive pump-case.

A Pneumatic Tube Four Hundred Miles Long.

The following extract from a letter received by one of our friends, describes the operations of a pneumatic tube between Glasgow and London. Probably few of our readers are aware of the existence of the process by which messages and packages are almost instantaneously transmitted between these two cities:

"I had occasion to send a telegram to London the other day, and in a few minutes received a reply which led me to suppose that a serious error had been committed by my agents, involving many thousand pounds. I immediately went to the telegraph office and asked to see my message. The clerk said, 'We can't show it to you as we have sent it to London.' 'But,' I replied, 'you must have my original paper here; I wish to see that' He again said, 'No, we have not got it, it is in the post office at London.' 'What do you mean?' I asked. 'Pray, let me see the paper I left here half an hour ago.' 'Well,' said he, 'if you must see it, we will get it back in a few minutes, but it is now in London.' He rang a bell, and in five minutes or so produced my message, rolled up in pasteboard.

"It seems that for some months there has existed a pneumatic telegraph between Glasgow and London, and between London and the other principal cities of the kingdom, which consists of an iron tube, into which the messages are thrown and sent to their destination. I inquired if I might see a message sent. 'Oh yes, come round here.' He slipped a number of messages into the pasteboard scroll, popped it into the tube and made a signal. I put my ear to the tube, and heard a slight rumbling noise for seventeen seconds, when a bell rang beside me, indicating that the scroll had arrived at the General Post Office, four hundred miles off! It almost took my breath away to think of it. If I could only go to Boston with the same relative speed, you might count on my passing an evening every week at No. 124 Beacon street, and returning home to sleep. Who knows but we may be conveyed in this marvelous manner before many years?

"Perhaps you are aware that there has been a large tube between the General Post-office in London, and the station in Euston square, in operation for a number of years. The mail bags for the north are all sent by this conveyance, so that post office receives letters up to a few minutes before the train leaves, three miles off. The transit takes less than two seconds. Surely this is an age of wonders."—[Boston Transcript.]

Postage Statistics.

Postmaster General Creswell has addressed the following letter to Vice-President Colfax, in compliance with a resolution of the Senate of the 19th inst., in relation to postage statistics:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21, 1870.

SIR—I have the honor to reply to the several inquiries made in the resolution of the Senate of the 19th inst., relative to postage statistics, as follows:

1. In answer to the inquiry, "What were the expenses and receipts of the Post Office in the different States and Territories during the last year?" I beg to refer to the tabulated statement thereof reported by the Auditor for this Department for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1869, and published in the appendix of the last annual report of this Department, pages 112 and 113.

2. I regret that it is not possible to state the number of letters annually mailed for the last five years, as no account is taken by postmasters or reports made of the numbers of letters mailed. The number of letters can only be approximately estimated on the amount of letter postage collected in money, the amount of postage stamps sold and a reasonable estimate for free matter. In a communication which I addressed to the President of the Senate on the 26th of February last, the number of letters delivered in the United States during the fiscal year 1868 was estimated at 488,000,000. My predecessor, in his annual report of that year, estimated the whole number of letters at 720,000,000, which estimate I was unable to verify by reliable data, and considered excessive, as shown by the fact that the number of letters delivered in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland (where the single rate of postage is only one penny—two cents—and the postage receipts five millions of dollars per annum greater than in the United States) was officially reported for the calendar year 1-67 at only 774,851,000.

3. The annual increase in money orders was reported in tabular form in the last annual report of this Department (page 29), to which I beg leave respectfully to refer. A summary is there given of the operations and results of the money-order business from its establishment, embracing a period of five years, from 1865 to 1869 inclusive.

4. As no separate account is taken of registered letters, it is impossible to state what is the number or their annual increase. The fact is known, however, that the number of registered letters is constantly increasing. The recent legislation authorizing the payment of the registration fee by means of postage stamps increases the difficulty of keeping separate accounts of registered matter, and to keep such accounts for statistical purposes would require a large increase in the clerical force of the Post-Office establishment.

5. The increase of stamps and stamped envelopes is reported in each annual report of this Department. I respectfully refer to the statement thereof in the last report (page 8), exhibiting in tabular form the increase in issues in 1869 as compared with the issues in 1868. The number of stamps, stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers, and the value thereof, as stated in the last four annual reports of this Department, were as follows:

1867	434,686,256	13,481,963 00
1868	459,865,130	12,969,134 40
1869	502,723,360	15,078,961 80

6. Returns of the weight of mail matter were made by different railroads for the first time in 1867, the weight being taken only for thirty consecutive working days, commencing on the 1st of April, 1867. An analysis of these returns was published in the annual report of 1867, on pages seventy-two to eighty-nine, inclusive, and reference was made thereto in the text of that report (pages 10 to 13). The only returns since received capable of comparison with those of 1867 were from roads chiefly in the New England States and the State of New York, for thirty days from 1st March, 1869, an analysis of which appears in the report for 1869 (pages seventy-five to eighty-five), and a reference thereto in the text on pages 10 and 11.

7. The number and the annual increase of the letters exchanged with foreign countries (exclusive of the British North American provinces, of which no account is taken) are reported in tabular form, and published in the appendix of each annual report of this Department. During the last five years the number and the increase of foreign letters (single rates) have been as follows:

1865	7,401,705	377,175
1866	9,430,566	2,028,861
1867	10,298,234	867,668
1868	11,128,572	830,338
1869	12,596,854	1,468,132

8 and 9. In regard to the proportion of letters to population in the United States during the last year, and in Great Britain, according to the latest report, I have to observe that it is quite impossible to furnish that information with accuracy, as both the number of letters and the population of the United States can only be approximately estimated. In my letter of February 26, 1870, addressed to the President of the Senate (Ex. Doc. No. 53, Forty-first Congress, second session), in answer to a resolution of the Senate requesting information in relation to the proposed abolition of the franking privilege, I submitted the following statement, in tabular form, comparing the postal service of the United States and of the United Kingdom for the year 1867-68:

Population (estimated)	40,092,356	30,363,284
Number of letters delivered (estimated)	488,000,000	774,851,000
Number of letters to each person	12	26
Gross revenue	$16,232,149	$23,341,070
Amount of revenue to each person of aggregate population	40 cents	77 cents

I have the honor to transmit herewith, for further particulars in detail bearing upon the questions propounded in the resolution of the Senate, copies of the annual reports of this Department for the years 1865, 1866, 1867, 1868 and 1869.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JOHN A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

HON. SCHUYLER COLFAX,
President of the Senate.

Postmaster's Salaries.

Questions of salary, involving adjustment, readjustment, increase and payment of deficiencies, are often propounded to us, and as full replies would generally occupy too much space in our "Answers," we are compelled to refer inquirers to the laws and regulations. We therefore propose to devote some space in the present issue to this subject, as a reply to inquiries now before us, and to serve as reference for those of the future.

All offices are now salaried offices, nor even in the smallest is the postmaster allowed commissions.

ADJUSTMENT OF SALARIES.

For the purpose of fixing the amount of salaries, post offices are divided in five classes, as follows:

CLASSES OF OFFICES.

At offices of the first class the salary ranges from $3,000 to $4,000; of the second class, from $2,000 to "less than $3,000;" of the third class, from $1,000 to less than $2,000; of the fourth class, from $100 to less than $1,000; of the fifth class, less than $100. Of the first, second and third classes the salaries shall be in even hundreds, of the fourth class in even tens and in the fifth class in even dollars.

The salaries are adjusted by the Postmaster-General on the basis of the former method of compensation by commissions, so as to be as near as may be the amount allowed by that method. The adjustment is for two years. (Section 23, Laws of 1866.)

READJUSTMENT.

Every two years the Postmaster-General readjusts salaries. But in special cases, upon satisfactory representation, he is authorized to readjust as often as he may deem expedient, thus providing for an increase or decrease of salaries according to an increase or decrease in the business of offices. But any change in a salary shall not take effect until the first day of the quarter next following the order making the change. (Section 29, Laws of 1866.)

At offices of the first and second classes, as well as at many of the remaining classes, the mode of adjustment and readjustment must be by this time thoroughly understood; but as there has been a large increase of offices, particularly of the fourth and fifth classes, since the first adjustment, the postmasters at which are not familiar with the former provision of compensation by commissions, we give entire the section of the act of June 12, 1866, and the Instruction therein, to which we have often referred, and also some instruction on the principle on which compensation was formerly allowed:

SECTION 5.—And be it further enacted, That section two of the act entitled, "An act to establish salaries for postmasters, and for other purposes," approved July one, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be amended by adding the following: Provided, That when the quarterly returns of any postmaster of the third, fourth or fifth class show that the salary allowed is ten per centum less than it would be on the basis of commissions under the act of eight en hundred and fifty-four, fixing compensation, then the Postmaster-General shall review and readjust under the provisions of said section.

"INSTRUCTION.—Any postmaster claiming a readjustment under the 5th section [the preceding herewith] of the new law, must make to the First Assistant Postmaster-General, under oath, a special exhibit of the whole amount of stamps canceled—that is, the amount of postage, prepaid by stamps or letters, originally mailed at his office during a period of not less than two quarters; also, a statement of other items of postage on which commissions were estimated under the act of 1854."

By this section and Instruction it will be seen that any postmaster of an office of the third, fourth or fifth classes, at whose office there has been an evident increase of business, may, by submitting to the First Assistant Postmaster-General a certain sworn statement, have his salary readjusted.

To make up this statement, he must proceed as though he were calculating his compensation by commission, as follows:

He must keep an account for two quarters—1st, of the value of stamps canceled at his office, and of all moneys received for postage on unpaid letters; 2d, an account of postage collected on books, periodicals or newspapers; 3d, the amount of fees (not including the postage) received for registered letters; 4th, the number of monthly mail registers sent to the Department. On these various items, commissions are to be calculated as follows: 1st, on letter postage, sixty per cent. on the first one hundred dollars, unless mail arrives regularly between 9 o'clock P. M. and 5 o'clock A. M., when seventy per cent. is allowed, fifty per cent. on the next three hundred dollars, forty per cent. on the next two thousand dollars, and fifteen per cent. on all over two thousand four hundred dollars; 2d, fifty per cent. on postage collected on newspapers and other printed matter; 3d, eighty per cent. on fees received for registration; 4th, 10 cents on each monthly mail register returned. The sum of these several amounts will show the amount of compensation to which the postmaster would be entitled under the previous mode of calculating compensation. To this sum should be added the amount received for box rents, making the grand total compensation. These calculations should be embraced in a statement which should be verified by affidavit, and then be forwarded to the First-Assistant-Postmaster. The statement is examined by the Postmaster-General, who will make such order in the premises as he shall see fit.

We are occasionally asked why the Postmaster-General has rejected an application for increased compensation where the statement shows that it should be allowed. We have answered, and we state here, that it is impossible to reply to questions of that kind; for we must assume that the Department, with its long practice and systematic experience, is more apt to be correct than a postmaster who has been in office only a few months or even years.

It should be remembered that all box rents, whether the boxes are owned by the postmaster or by individuals, should be accounted for to the Department; and that rent must be paid on all boxes, no matter who owns them. The amount thus received, however, is allowed in the adjustment of the salary. Chap. XLII, Reg. 1866.

DEFICIENCY.

It occasionally happens that the receipts of an office are not sufficient to pay the salary. In such cases, the postmaster will be paid by special draft of the Postmaster-General, but he should forward a statement of the causes of the deficiency.

ALLOWANCES.

Allowances are made to offices of the first and second classes for expenditure for clerk-hire, rent, fuel and light, on the receipt of an estimate from the postmasters of such offices, such offices are also furnished with envelopes for official business.

No allowance is made to offices of the third, fourth, and fifth classes for any of the item above named.

Many postmasters at the smaller offices think it a hardship that postmasters receiving large salaries should also receive allowance for expenditures, and be furnished with official envelopes, while they have to bear the burden of these from their own pockets. As no one is compelled to become a postmaster, we cannot see that there is any injustice or hardship in the matter. A party who makes application for the position of postmaster, should expect to take the office with the emoluments and the labors attached to it, being at liberty to increase the business of the office, and thus obtain an increase of compensation.

We have thus embraced all the points of interest that occur to us relating to salaries. It may be a question whether the eighty per cent. on registered fees, will be allowed in the statement, and also whether a postmaster has not the right to claim one cent on every free letter delivered, and two mills on every newspaper not chargeable with postage. But the difference in either case would be so little that it is not worth any cavil. We have given the account as it was made just previous to the law establishing salaries (except that for one year the percentage on register fees was fifty per cent.), and such we believe to be the spirit and the meaning of that law.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, AUG. 19, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

Mails for New Zealand, New South Wales and Australia, via San Francisco.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27, 1870.

Correspondence for New Zealand, New South Wales or Australia, may be forwarded to destination, via San Francisco, by the direct line of Colonial mail packets appointed to sail from San Francisco on the 10th of each month, commencing on the 10th of June next.

The following rates of United States postage must be prepaid by stamps, at the mailing office, on letters, newspapers and printed matter intended for transmission by this route, viz.:

10 cents, per each single rate of half an ounce or under, on letters; 2 cents each on newspapers, and the regular rates of U. S. domestic postage on other articles of printed matter.

By order of the Postmaster-General.

JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Supt. Foreign Mails.

"What to Say to Them."

We have received more than one letter, since our official connection with this Department, from postmasters, reporting the alleged loss of letters containing inclosures of money, and, after detailing the circumstances of date, address, etc., concluding about as follows:

"Mr. McHustle (the complainant) is very much excited about it—says it is a cowdem ed shame that a man can't send a few dollars in a letter without having it stolen—that the Government ought to make the loss good like Express Companies do—that he will write to Washington, etc., etc. It is very unpleasant for me, and I should like you to advise me as to what I shall say to him."

We have not always been able to comply very fully with the last request. There is so much that can be said to Mr. McHustle on the subject, that to include it all in a single letter would have consumed more time than we could well spare. But as Mr. McHustle still lives, and is extremely likely to lose more letters, and (very naturally) become excited about it, and express opinions about it to the postmaster, we have concluded to embody in this article the advice we have to give as to "what to say to him"—for, of course, Mr. McH.'s P. M. is a subscribor to the MAIL.

In the first place, we should cordially agree with him in the opinion that "it is a shame" that anything should ever be lost through the dishonesty of a person employed in the postal service; and while on that branch of the subject, we would add, that it is also "a shame" that hook-keepers, bank cashiers and tellers, clerks and messengers, should ever prove faithless to the trust reposed in them by their employers; that merchants should make fraudulent failures, or leave lighted matches, kerosene and shavings mixed up among their heavily insured stocks of merchandise; that it should be necessary to bar and bolt our doors at night, or to keep a secure hold of our watches as we pass through a crowded street-car; in short, that it is "a shame" and a discredit to human nature that it should ever be necessary to take precautions against the possible dishonesty of any person whatever. Then we would add, that while deploring this necessity, it would be useless to deny its existence, and that a person who failed to recognize the painful fact and neglected to avail himself of such opportunities as were within his reach for his own protection would be himself largely to blame for any loss he might sustain in consequence.

Mr. McH., being a reasonable gentleman, would doubtless admit that these were words of truth; and then we would explain to him that the Post Office Department, in common with all other merely human departments, governments and institutions of whatever nature, having found it impossible to entirely prevent the occurrence of occasional dishonest practices on the part of those in its employ, had provided means for rendering such occurrences as rare as possible, and for facilitating the detection of the guilty; that the system of registration of valuable letters was specially devised to meet both these ends, and should be made use of by every person who desired to make remittances by mail and could not procure a money order, check or draft; that the primary object and main business of the post office is the safe and speedy transmission and delivery of the correspondence of the people, and not of their money; that while it is true that all letters, whether containing money or not, ought to pass safely through the mails, yet the neglect to register those which do contain money is both unwise and unjust—unwise as regards the interests of the sender, and unjust in needlessly offering temptation to some who may not be able to withstand it.

As to the "responsibility" of express companies, we would then "put it to" Mr. McH. to say whether he thought that if he addressed a package of money to a person in a distant city, took it to an express office, threw it in, and came away without taking the trouble to obtain a receipt for it, he would expect, in law or equity, to hold the company responsible if the package were lost; and we would ask him what, in his opinion, is the difference between such an act and that of depositing a money letter in a post office without registering it?

Finally, we would suggest to him that it was possible his letter was not lost at all, but only missent or misdirected (which latter supposition he would not, of course, entertain for a moment; he never does, until his letter returns from the Dead Letter Office, addressed in his own hand to wrong name, city, street or number); again, that it was possibly lost through the dishonesty of some one authorized by the person addressed, to take it from the post office; that we would (if we had not already done so), report the case at once to the proper authorities for investigation; assure him that, if his loss involved guilt on the part of any one in the postal service, justice would sooner or later overtake the offender, and close the conversation by expressing the hope that the next remittance he made by mail would be by money order or registered letter.

Sundry Post-Office Matters.

We open with two letters which are rather complimentary and personal than on "post-office matters," but we trust our readers will excuse us when they recall how much we say to them each month that is really interesting to them in the management of their official affairs. One of the letters contains expression of a desire that the MAIL should be issued in quarto form, the other that it should be issued semi-monthly. We are much obliged to our correspondents for their suggestions and the good wishes expressed in their letters, but the time is hardly propitious for either change. . . . . Our next letter calls our attention to the omission from our last list of "established offices" of that of Palo Alto, Pa. Our lists are carefully prepared for us and we print them as they are furnished; they are usually accurate but occasionally an omission or duplication occurs which shows that all men are liable to mistakes, as well as subject to mortality. . . . . Our next is on the question of compensation and allowances, and contains partial statements of the business of the office for two quarters as a basis for our reply. Even with this basis, our reply can hardly be satisfactory, for there is another side to the story—the Auditor's. We have repeatedly stated that: in questions involving the accounts of any particular office, we have no means of deciding. We can tell a postmaster that his salary will be adjusted on a certain basis, but when he claims more than the Postmaster-General has allowed, a question at once arises respecting his accounts which we should not attempt to decide. So, too, we can say that all post offices that collect in postages seventy-five dollars a year, are furnished with letter balances. But when a postmaster's application for a letter balance has been rejected, we cannot undertake to say why. Questions, too, of increase of salary are as difficult to answer. Elsewhere will be found an interesting article on the subject. . . . . Our next letter contains an inquiry concerning the class of offices that are entitled to the envelopes for registry business. As we understand the Registration Regulations, all offices are entitled to envelopes for registry business; if there has been any change in this rule, we are not aware of it. The same letter contains an inquiry respecting billing unpaid letters beyond a distributing office. The word beyond conveys an incorrect idea. Letters are originally mailed either direct or to a distributing office. If a letter on which there are charges is mailed direct, it should be accompanied by a post bill, but if sent to a distributing office, it should not be so accompanied; but the post billing will be done by that distributing office. Nor should such letters, if foreign, be rated.

Our next contains an inquiry whether the issuing postmaster is obliged to make inquiry for a money order, the receipt of which has not been acknowledged by the payee. Not in a case of mere negligence or carelessness of the payee; but, if there is any allegation, or a well-founded suspicion of loss or depredation, it would be his duty to make such inquiry.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Stamps Cut from a Stamped Envelope.—W. N. R., Ill——, Miss.—Stamps cut from stamped envelopes lose their legal value, whether they have been used or not to prepay postage. Sec. 174, Reg. 1866. All letters bearing such should be "held for postage" and sent to the Dead-Letter Office. Sec. 360, Reg. 1866.

Sundries.—J. O. D., R——, Mich.—1. All persons employed in the care, custody or conveyance of the mail should be sworn; but if not sworn, they are as liable to all penalties and forfeitures, as though they were. Sec. 52, Laws, 1866. 2. Official envelopes for general business are not furnished to offices of the fifth class; but the Third Assistant Postmaster furnishes envelopes for registry business. 3. All box-rents must be accounted for to the Department, whether the postmaster owns the boxes or not. Chap. xlii., Reg., 1866. 4. No fixed amount of business is necessary to entitle a post office to be constituted a money-order office. 5. A Postmaster who is a Justice of the Peace may administer the oath to his assistants.

Quarterly Transcript, Etc.—G. A. P., C——, Mass.—1. A quarterly transcript of newspapers delivered to regular subscribers is required. Sec. 304, Reg., 1866. 2. An account of registered matter received and sent must be kept. As no money entries are made in this account it would more properly be called a record. 3. No allowance is made to offices for the fifth class for office rent or repairs.

Wrapping, etc.—G. W. T., T——, W.—1. Unless your office is supplied wholly or in part by a railway post office, you should wrap letters. Sec. 88, reg. 1866. 2. News dealers have the same privileges as publishers, in sending through the mails. Sec. 225, reg. 1866.

Card Letters.—J. A. S., C——, O.—1. The law makes no distinction between letters bearing the cards of hotel and of business firms. As the use of card or of request letters becomes more general, and its usefulness recognized, letter-writers will be more careful in the kind of envelopes they use. The evil you speak of will thus work out its own remedy, sooner than by the interference of postmasters. 2. It would not be better for a postmaster to open undelivered drop letters than to send them to the Dead-Letter Office. One of the wisest provisions of the regulations is that "in no case may a postmaster open a letter arriving at his office not addressed to himself." Sec. 71, reg. 1866.

Agricultural, Temperance, etc., Newspapers.—M. J. G., F——, Va.—1. We cannot undertake to say why the postage on agricultural papers is less proportionally by the package than by the single copy, nor why the quarterly rate of postage on a weekly is less than that on a semi-monthly. Undoubtedly the diffusion of intelligence at a cheap rate is the basis of the arrangement, but to endeavor to find a reason for the details, would be about as profitless as to endeavor to discover why newspapers are of certain sizes. We advise postmasters to accept the facts and regulate their offices by them, letting theories take care of themselves. 2. These remarks apply in the main to the question, What is a paper of small size? though, as the law has not provided for a specific size the regulations come to the aid of postmasters, and they are directed in cases of doubt to apply to the Department for instructions. Sec. 207, reg. 1866.

Extra Copies of a Newspaper, etc.—M. L. B., G——, S——, O.—1. Publishers have not the right to forward unpaid to regular subscribers extra copies of their papers for distribution as samples. 2. Letters of inquiry to the Editor of the U. S. MAIL are subject to letter postage. 3. To have an office constituted a money order office, application should be made to the Superintendent of the Money Order System, Washington, D. C. Whether or not the request will be granted, depends on matters not within our province.

Balance of Account.—J. E. H., T——, Va.—Where on the adjustment of a quarterly account, the Department is found indebted to the Postmaster, the amount should be entered on the credited side of the General Account, and if not paid by special draft before the end of the next quarter, would then become an offset for an equal amount found due the Department, and would diminish by just so much the amount to be paid. But credit cannot be taken in the Quarterly Account Current.

Mail Carriers Carrying Newspapers.—J. D., B——, Pa.—Mail carriers, whether by land or water, may carry packages of newspapers out of the mails. Sec. 50, Reg. 1866.

Billing Letters, etc.—E. E., L——, Mo.—1. The amount on a letter billed to an office, should, when the letter is forwarded, be entered in the column of overcharges, in the account of Mails Received. 2. Letters sent for delivery should be billed, but not if sent to a Distributing Office. Sec. 92, Reg. 1866. 3. The charges on unpaid dead letters should be entered on the Dead Letter Bill, the sum of such unpaid charges for the quarter should be entered in Article 11 of the Account Current. You had better study carefully chapter xxxv. of Regulations of 1866. 4. If a post office is within one-fourth of a mile of the railway station, the railway company must deliver the mails into the post office. Sec. 471, Reg. 1866.

Delivering Mails.—B. F. B., D—— W—— G——, Pa.—See preceding answer.

Report of Stamps.—J. A. W., C——, Tenn.—Offices of the second and third classes are required to make monthly stamp reports. Blanks for this purpose will be furnished by the First Assistant Postmaster-General. Ask for form 6. Sec. 167, Reg. 1866.

Franking.—G. L. W., S——, Pa.—We can give no fuller instructions respecting franking than may be found in chapter xv. of the Regulations, in the "Miscellaneous Information" on the third page of the MAIL, and in a "Notice to Postmasters," by the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, published in the MAIL for April last. This notice refers to papers relating to the census. It is provided that such papers shall pass free. As this matter is exceptional and infrequent, and will occupy but a few months at furthest, there will not be time to discuss nice distinctions of law concerning this privilege of franking. We would, therefore, suggest that while postmasters should be particular that only papers relating to the census should pass free under this notice, they should at the same time rather err on the side that will give promptness and efficiency to the labors of the various parties engaged in taking the census, than on the side of so strict a conformity to law as will prove a hindrance.

Registration.—M. E. G., S——, Nev.—Registered letters require only the postage required on ordinary letters to the same place or county; in other words, the registration of a letter does not subject it to an increase of postage. Of course the proper registry fee has to be added. Do not confound postage with registry fee. The full charges on a registered letter consist of the postage and the registry fee. . . . . E. W. O., F—— H——, Kan.—1. A letter should be delivered according to the address, but there are cases where a postmaster must use judgment, and if he has proof that there is an informality in the address, he should deliver the letter to the person for whom he knows it is intended. 2. A book sealed against inspection should be charged as letter rates. . . . . T. W. McC., C——, Ky.—The duty of route agents is to take receipts from the persons to whom they deliver registered packages, whether postmasters, mail messengers or other route agents. Sec. 3 R'gn Seg. . . . . T. E. A. R., B——, W. Va.—The fact that you have received from the Department yellow envelopes for registry business, is, in itself, proof that such envelopes are used. . . . . G. W. N.—A postmaster may register free to another postmaster, if on official business.

Postage.—C. H. L., V——, N. J.—1. Postage on cut flowers is at letter rates, unless they are cuttings for propagation. 2. One month is the limit of time allowed postmasters for making the Quarterly Return. Sec. 223, Reg. 1866. . . . . R. W. B., M——, Iowa.—1. Postage on drop papers, except weekly papers to be delivered to subscribers living in the county of publication, is the same as for those going by mail. 2. Plants intended for propagation should be charged at two cents for four ounces. 3. The Department does not furnish ink pads to postmasters. A good one can be made by stretching buckskin, or other soft leather over a block of wood, stuffing with a little wool. . . . . S. P. C., M——, Ind.—Newsdealers should be charged regular quarterly rates on regular papers; but they may pay their postage on their papers as they are received. Sec. 202, Reg. 1866. . . . . J. S., C——, N. H.—A package containing muslin banners should be charged at letter rates. . . . . E. W. J., C——, Penn.—The postage collected on back numbers of a regular periodical may be entered in the account of postage on transient matter.

Wanted Letters.

Charles Courtois, who is the proprietor of a well-known restaurant in Market street, Newark, N. J., called the "Maison Grise," complained at the post office a few days ago that he hired a box there with the understanding that there were to be letters placed therein, and the contract had not been fulfilled. He wished an explanation, or else he wished for some letters. It was small satisfaction for him to make daily journeys to the post office and look into his box, and, instead of seeing letters, to see the clerks and all internal arrangements of the city postal department. The following day witnessed the consummation of his wish. His eyes saw a box stuffed to overflowing with letters, properly addressed and stamped. Here he found letters for "Col. Charles Courtois, Maison Grise, Newark;" "Mr. Courtois," "Charles," "Old Courtois," "Champagne Charlie," and to various other cognomens by which the gentleman is distinguished, in all about fifty letters. Since then he has been as quiet as a little lamb, and will probably have no more complaints to make during the term of the present officials.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to or from the North German Union (including Austria and its States), the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, when sent or arriving either by North German Union mail direct, or in closed mail via England, are also chargeable with a fine on delivery in addition to the postage. In the case of letters arriving in the United States the fine is five cents. In both cases the amount is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, to Italy and the Roman or Papal States, and to Middle and Lower Egypt, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

Until January 1, 1870, letters could be registered, on payment of certain special postage rates, to France, Algeria, Corsica, Bourbon, Nice and Savoy; also to Alexandretta, Tangiers and Tunis. This, however, cannot be done at present. The registration fee on letters, etc., to all foreign countries to which registration is practicable will be found noted in the Table of Postages to Foreign Countries. On such letters, etc., only the postage rates as given in the table need be prepaid, in addition to the registration fee.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

But the postage on all printed matter to or from FRANCE AND ALGERIA must, in all cases, be collected here.

REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

United States Exchange Offices for Foreign Mails.

Boston is an office of Exchange for British, French, North German Union, and Belgian Mails.

Philadelphia and Chicago are offices of Exchange for British, French and North German Union Mails.

Portland and Detroit are offices of Exchange for British and French Mails.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The rate of postage on mail letters to any part of the United States is three cents a half ounce or fraction thereof. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent. All drop as well as mail letters must be prepaid.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All communications on official business, of whatever origin, addressed to heads of the executive departments of government, or heads of bureaus therein, or to chief clerks of departments, shall be received and conveyed by mail free of postage without being franked or indorsed "Official Business."

By a joint Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Adjutants General of the several States and Territories, are authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, any medals, certificates of thanks or other testimonials, awarded, or which may be awarded by the Legislatures of said States and Territories, to the soldiers thereof, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may direct.

Section 123, Regulations 1869, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as a personal privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weight of four ounces. Mail matter to those possessing the privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertains to official business. Section 134 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides these, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenue officers, also, besides those mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may only frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No communications, official or otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can be sent free.

The Act of March 1, 1869, relating to franking, makes no change in the privilege, but merely enacts that the signature of the franking party must be written, and not printed.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Post Office Blanks.

The agency for supplying postmasters with blanks is located at Washington, D. C.

Applications for blank registers of arrival and departure of the mails must be made direct to the "Contract Office, Inspection Division, P. O. Dept." For special instructions, to the First Assistant Postmaster General.

Rates of Postage to West Indies.

To the following islands, in British mail via St. Thomas or Havana (or by American packet, leaving New York 23d each month), the postage on letters is 10 cents per half ounce; newspapers, 2 cents each; books, 4 cents per four ounces. Prepayment compulsory.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 22, 1870.

The undersigned have examined a method of keeping Post-Office accounts issued in book form, by Cornelius Smith, Postmaster at Annville, Lebanon County, Pa., and are of the opinion that said method will recommend itself to Postmasters as a check against error as well as a valuable assistant in making out quarterly returns. Being without complication, the most limited understanding may at once comprehend the principle.

UNITED STATES MAIL
AND
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. X., NO. 10. NEW YORK, JULY, 1870. WHOLE NO. 118.

CLAMBANK, N. J., June, 1870.

Mrs. Modole having negotiated for the Limburger desired me to place it under the back seat of the haroache, which, of course, I did; but it must have come in contact with my clothing somehow or other, for I was asked a dozeo times during the afternoon if I "didn't smell something burning:" and even Gushweak, when I returned to his office, stopped several times in the course of his story-telling to inquire "What in thunder smells so?" I kept perfectly quiet, but I meatally resolved that when my pastor's lady again purchased cheese, she would have to do it without my assistance. (I will remark here, incidentally, that when I returned home, I found Jane Mary just a little out of temper; and, upon asking the cause, the answer I received was "Nothing;" but I underetood the matter very soon afterward when she asked me in an indifferent kind of way, "What is that Limburger cheese made of?")

Gushweak had evidently indulged freely in Godfrey'e cordial during my absence, if the color in his cheeks and the flavor of his breath were a reliable indication; but his "talking tackle" was not at all injured—in fact, I think it was in better condition, and without much prefacing he resumed his story: "I told you that I shet down on the presentation business; come to think, I 'lowed one. Afore I cnm ther', the clark thot acted assistant add-on-to-him. [Ad interim, I suggested.] Yes, that's it; the clark that acted that, had done a good many favors for the boys, and they wanted to show ther 'preciation of him by givin' him a watch—unbeknown to him afore it happened. But I reckon he knowed all about it; for when it was reported round th' office that I was down on the gift business, he cum to me on the sly, with tears in his eyes, and says he to me, "Please let this one go through for the last," and, to satisfy him, I was agreeable. There was a general hooray through th' office when the news was announced, and when we closed up in th' evening the affair come off. There were a dozen outsiders on hand, and I giv' the parties the use of the private office to spread theirselves in. When everything was ready, one of the boys brought in a package about the size and shape of a soup-tureen, which he untied, and after taking off a dozen or more wrappers, pulled out and held up a bull's-eye silver watch, nearly as big round as a four-pound weight and twice't as thick, and went on to speak a piece; and the clark that received it—his name was—but you don't keer about that—anyhow his name was Flybiler—talked back consid'able, and I would 'a said more, but just then in comes old Woolwood as tight as a musket, and the crowd scattered quicker'n you'd say scat. "Hallo, Bung-starter, what's this town meetin' called fur?" says the old gent, as he flopped down onto a sofy. "On'y a little gift matter atween the boys; that's all," says I. "That's a-it!" says he. "I think that's plenty, Mr. Bullrush. On'y of I was you when I wanted to git up a general drink, I'd choose men, not boys, to spree with." I tried to explain, but th' old cuss wouldn't listen, but went on eayin', "Shame, ehame, Weakmueb'" until he fell asleep. When we met next morning he 'peared not to recollect the proceedin's of the night previous, and was as emilin' as a basket of chips. But that cussed watch almost got Flybiler crazy. From mornin' till night and from night till mornin' he didn't do a dog-goned thing but set and wind and riglate his kerometer, ee he called it; an' it kep' me busy seudin' round the huildin' arter him, until I had to tell him that ef he did'nt tend to biz he'd hev to quit; so he perfetred to work, and let the watch run tn suit itself. Arter that he kerried it about three months notil it busted out all his pockets and made him stoop-shouldered, and ho then left it home. A little brother of his, however, got hold of it, and put the guard chain round his neck and commenced playing hoat with the watch in a small stream which run in the rear of the house; hnt the little chap fell in the water, and the "kerometor" was so heavy that it pulled him under, and held him there ontil he was drowoded dead. After the funeral Flyhiler took a axe and mashed the old turnip into a thonsand pieces, and the little boy'e teacher, and the clarks in our office wore crape on thoir left arm for thirty daye. That was the last presentation in the office while I stayed ther'. I've seen and read of 'em at other places, hat I'll nover change my mind aboot it, that in eleven ont of fifteon times damage of some kind follers, as it did in the horse-pietol and hull's eyo casee. What good grows ont of eich things anybow? The fellow that gets the present has done sometbin' or is expected to do something for the fellus that make up the puss, and the carculation of hotb sides is to give a handful and get back a armful; and as Amlick, the Prince of Dunkik says, "On a average they generally do." And Amlick is right.

But to go on with my yarn. After I had got the office in good running condition, and the stage drivers had got so as they could openand distribute the mails without somebody having to he round to tell them what to do every minite, we all had pooty easy times, and about all I did was to occupy the postmaster's cheer, cock my legs up on his desk, smoke my meerschaum and aoswer questioos. It wasn't very long afore I was considered law and gospel by all the postmasters for twenty mile around; and I held a reg'lar levee about twice't a week to receive calls from these mourners. I made out the Quarterly Returns for a good many of 'em, and whether they was right or whether they was wrong, I never stopped to inquire; but I allus made 'em come down with the soap—some of 'em paid me mor'n they received for a quarter's salary, but that was their husinese, not mine.

They asked all eorts and kinds o' questions, and altho' most of 'em know'd as much as I did I never told 'em eo, and would give 'em the fuet answers that would come in my head. Ooe fellow, I remember, wanted to know if he conld send a keg of maple molasees by mail. I told him, "Certainly," and he sent it; but it never reached anywhere's as he could learn, and he had to pay for it. Some one else told him he had no right to send it, and then he fell back on me, and wautod me to divide the lose with him. I told him ef he ever opened his mouth agin, I would write to the Postmaster-General that he was trying to git money from the Departmeot under falee pretences; and he hegged me for mussey's sake not to do it, and I held up. He couldn't put on no airs with me.

One fellow wanted to know if he was obleeged to keep his office open Sondays; another 'un if he couldn't open and shet his office week days to suit hisself; aaother ua ef he didn't hev the privilege to take and use stamps off letters arrivin' at his office which had not beeo canceled—and lots o' other such simpial questions; and I told 'em all that they were the bosses of their own shops, and could do just about as they had a mind to. Snpposio' this meant for them to go ahead, they went in, and about every one on 'em was removed; and theo the ongrateful fellows tried to make believe it was my fault. They made it pretty hot fur me fur a while, but Mr. Woolwood stuck to me like a hurr to a hosses tail. A many letters come to him which he never eeed, bless you, asking 'bout hie 'sistant, but as I opened all letters addressed to the P. M., I oa'y ehowed him sich as I thougbt proper. What was the use o' heing assistant, it I didn't hev the first shy ot everything relative to the postmaster's public and private husiness? and what was the use o' hotherin' the old mao with business matters that he know'd uothin' about, aad probably keered less? If I did anythiog that was spoken well of, I allers told Mr. Woolwood; hut if I upsot something, mum was the word: so he had the almightiest foith in me, and I think I was deservin' of it. But every one has his troubles, and I was to have mine. One day the old gentleman seat word to the office that he was sick, and wished me to cum up to his house. I'd never hin ther', hut I had heard he had a pooty daughter, and I wondered why she never cum to the office. Well, up I goes to the house, and, ketching hold of the knocker—and a awful thiog it was, and about as big as the walking-beam of a steam-engine—ketching hold of the knocker, I gave a hang that ebook the whole huildio', and so astonished me that I onm near tumblin' hackward down the steps. I jest had time to straighten myself, when the door opened and the sweetest lookin' gal I ever laid my eyes on preeonted herself.

"Good-day, marm," says I, muchly confused, I tell you; "my name is Gushweak, and I called to eee Mr. Woolwood." "Oh yes, sir, thank you, walk in if you please; I'm very much pleased to see you, Mr. Gushwoak. Pa is not at all well, and he appears to be quite anxious to eee you; hut, my dear Mr. Gushweak, if there is any trouble in hie husiuese please be cautious in talkia' to him, as he is very nervone." And as she said this she laid her sott little hand on my shonlder. Callin' me dear Mr. Gushweak and laying her hand on mo was meet too much for my equomity (equanimity I suppose he meant), and I pooty nearly collapsed; but just then a voice, that I knew as well as my own, sung out, "Up here, Muetang;" and in three jumps I was at the head of the stairs. Through an open door I saw Mr. Woolwood lying on a hed, and I went for him. "Ah! Gushee, my good fellow, I'm glod you cum. You work oa time—you're my style. You don't let grass grow u nder your feet when you've anything to do, do you? Of course you don't—who said you did? Take a seat and make yourself at home. By the hy, just go to the head of the staire, and call my daughter." I riz up for the purpose, when he told me to sit down sgin, and he roared out "Maud-ee!" lond enongh to he heard all over town, I thought, and in a second in cum the little angel. "Maud, darling, this is Mr. Washtah my assistant ("Gushweak, pa!" she said, blushing up to the eyebrows); Washuine, my danghter." She put out her little flipper, and wo took a ra'al good handshake, which was interrupted hy the old gentleman saying: "Maud, dear, take my keys and get a small oemijohn ont of the right hand corner of the sideboard, make a pitcher of ice-water, and send Bridget op with them and a couple of tumblers—and lose no time, dear. I have some important business to transact, and talkio' is dry work, even to a well man." As she turned to leave the room, she gave me a queer look and shook her head—which I thought meant, "Don't drink a drop," and I determined not to. When she had gone out, the old man desired me to draw my cheer up cloee to the hed, and said in a tone a little above a whisper, "I sent for you because I am in trouble. I want a confidential adviser; and, Gushmore, I know I can truet you. You are as true as steel, or I'm a Hottentot; and I am sore yoo are as brave as you're honest. Before I tell you what's the matter, you must solemnly promise not to reveal anything you may hear, whether yon agree to a propositiou I have to make or not." I tell yoo, squire, my flesh began to creep, and I think I would have asked for an explanatioa afore I made a promise, but just then in come Bridget with the finds and tumblers, and afors I thought I whispered in his ear, "Upon my oath, I'll never squeak." Bridget lingered a little, as if waiting for further orders; hnt Mr. Woolwood told hor she could go, and directed me to pour oot for two. I didn't want to drink, hnt I was eo near upeot hy his mysterious worde, that I thonght hest to take something to steady my nerves. After we had imbibed, the old man propped hisself up with the pillars and eot up to talk with me; and, orderin' me to close and holt the door, he pointed to the cheer again, and when I had sot down, he said: "McGush! I'm in great trouble; hnt there's glory in store for you. Listen——"

Sundry Post Office Matters.

A few letters lie before ns as we take up our pen for our asual article, hut our correspondence the last moath has not been as large it was the preceding month. Probably many of our patrone are interested in agriculture, and though June is not considered any husier a month than April or May, it is hotter than either, and heat bas a great teadency to make mon lazy. We speak, of course observingly and not experimentally. Along with a decline in correspondence is also a decline in attention to remittances for renewal, whereupon we would gently remind delinqnente subscribers that summer's heat, nor wioter's cold, nor seed time, nor harvest, should stop the steady flow forward of the "dollar" which is the motive power that keeps the Mail in motion. Philosophers tell us that the torces of nature are resolvable into two, action and re-action; this philosophy is as applicable to our paper as to the movement of the world.

If we consider the remittance as the actioa, the re-action will be the receipt of the useful, indispensable MAIL for one year, and the result of the two will be an increase in the efficiency of the poetal eervice, and in the popularity of postmasters with the Department and with the public. Can we iaduce all postmasters, and especially delinquent subscribers to action;—hut what bae this to do with post-office matters?

Well then our first letter is from two route agents in the West (hnt are Michigao, Indiana and Illinois any longer the West?) who make inquiry: "Whose business is it to atteod to exchanging the mails betweeu the care ou main and branch rontes, the service often involving the traosportation of eevsral bags, some rods distance?" This is one of those questions we cannot satisfactorily answer, because it is local. Provision is made in many places for this service by the appointment of local agents; where this has not been done, and where, as is the case of our correspondents, the service compels agonte to leave their cars, without adequate protection to the mails, a report of the case should be made to the Contract office.... Our next letter is an inquiry concerning the rate of postage on clothing. "a ready made, full grown sh——", undergarment, as our correspondent does not put it. We agree with the writer that postmasters who rate snch things at the miscellaneous rate of two certs, are laboring under a mistake. Invariably all clothing should be charged at letter rates, except that sent to non-commissioned officers and privates in the armies of the United States. (Sec. 223, Laws, 1866.) If clothing not prepaid at letter rates is received at an office, the unpoid postage at such rates should be charged, and collected on delivery. (Sec. 151, Reg. 1866).. Our next is a request for an extra copy of our last issue, but we priot an extract from the letter, hoping the scamp may read it in a paper honestly obtained. If we knew his name we would send him a copy, with an invitation to become a subscriber.

Publisher U. S. Mail:

SIR—I received the June number of the U. S. MAIL yesterday, and laid it on the counter, and while attending to a customer in the store, some scamp hooked it, please forward me another as I had not perused it. * *

T. R. L, P. M.

What shall we say of or to the man who would steal the MAIL from a postmaster. We will leave him to the uomerciful sting of his own conscience.... We comply with our lady postmaster's, not postmistress'—the Department does not recognize such an officer—wish to give her kind regards to Mons. Tonson and his Jane Mary (the at-last happy couple being no more welcome visitors to her than they are to ourselves), and inform him that the office under her charge is now a third class office.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Advertising Sheets.—R. W. H., C——, Ill.—Advertising sheets for gratuitous distribution are not entitled to be mailed unprepaid. (Sec. 206, Reg. 1866.)

Postmasters Working on Roads.—A. S. W., S——, O.—Militia and jury duties are the only duties from which a postmaster is exempted. (Sec. 39, Laws of 1866.)

Request Letters.—B. A. F., C——, Pa.—A returned request letter, if not delivered to the person named in the request, should be treated as any other undelivered letter.

Letter-boxes.—H. A. B., T——, Col.—We have repeatedly stated that rent must be collected for letter-boxes, no matter at whose expense they are constructed. (Chap. XLII., Reg. 1866.)

Newsdealers' Packages.—J. W. C., K——, C. H. W——, Va.—Newsdealers are entitled to pay the postage at regular quarterly rates on their packages as received. (Sec. 202, Reg. 1866.)

Clerks' Salary.—J. G. L., C——, Mass.—Clerks' salaries are fixed by the Postmaster-General, on estimates furnished by the postmasters of the offices entitled to the allowance. (Sec. 17, Reg. 1866.)

Charge for Postage Stamps.—E. W. J., S—— G——, Del.—It is illegal to charge more than the face value for postage stamps, or envelopes; except in the latter case where fractions of a cent cannot be made. A penalty of from ten to five hundred dollars attaches. (Sec. 171 and 172, Reg. 1866.)

Forwarding Mail Matter.—E. E. T., M——, Mass.—1. A prepaid letter may be forwarded any number of times without additional payment of postage; provided it has not in the meanwhile been ont of the custody of the post office. 2 Transient or regular newspapers and periodicals, when forwarded, are subject to additional postage, to be paid at the forwarding office.

Insufficiently Prepaid Letter, etc.—M. St. J., M—— V——, Pa.—1. An insufficiently prepaid letter coming at the office of delivery should be charged with the unpaid postage. (Sec. 155, Reg. 1866.) 2. The right of free passage to the mails for county papers is not confined to any number of different papers One copy of each of all the different papers published in a county, as well as only one, may be sent free to any one bona-fide subscriber. (Sec. 228, Reg. 1866.)

Unsealed Letters.—G. L. O., M——, N. Y.—1. Unsealed letters should be treated the same as sealed letters; that is, if not paid one full rate of three cents, they should be "held for postage," and sent to the Dead-Letter Office. (Sec. 360, Reg. 1866.) 2. But if such letters arrive at the office of delivery, the unpoid postage should be collected. (Sec. 151, Reg. 1866.) Postmasters handling such letters in transit have no duty in the matter, except the usual one of forwarding them.

Carrying Newspapers, etc.—H. C. W., F—— B——, Dak.—1. Express companies have a right to carry packages of newspapers. 2. Any one has a right to send letters free to a member of Congress. There is no discrepancy between Sections 123 and 124 Regulations of 1866, and the recent act respecting the franking privilege. That act (of March 1, 1869) makes no change in the law respecting the privilege of franking, but merely abolishes the use of stamped or fac-simile franks.

Sunday-school Papers.—G. B. B., S——, Pa.—1. The postage on packages of Sunday-school papers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, and sent to one address, is 1 cent for each four ounces on each package. This is the legal rate; if a publisher states any other rate he is wrong. (Sec. 202, Reg. 1866.) 2. We refer you to "Rates of Postage for Foreign Countries," on our third page. 3. It is proper for any one who has a letter too late for the mail to hand it to the agent on the cars. (Sec. 99, Reg. 1866.)

Ordering a Publisher to Discontinue a Paper.—J. W. W., S——, Miss.—A postmaster has no authority to order a publisher to discontinue sending a newspaper. He is required to notify the publisher when his paper has been refused or unclaimed for one month, and request him to discontinue sending it. This notice is to be a statement of the facts sent to the postmaster where such paper or publication is mailed, to be by him communicated to the publisher. If, after receiving such notice, the publisher continues to send the paper, it must be sold, and the proceeds credited to the Department. (Sec. 286, Laws, and 391,392, Reg. 1866.) But the postmaster cannot compel the publisher to discontinue sending it. There may be cases of needlessly overloading the mails, where a report should be made to the Department. The First Assistant Postmaster-General supplies a form or blank for notifying publishers. (Form No. 29.)

Credit for forwarding Unpaid Letters.—B. F. W——, Kan.—In article 2 of the Account Current, you are charged with the amount of postage on all unpaid letters sent to your office during the quarter. If you forward as unpaid letter, without collecting the postage, you would, of course, lose the amount due on that letter. To avoid this, you enter the amount in the column of overcharges, and at the end of the quarter take credit for this and other overcharges in Article 11. The account is thus balanced. We agree with you that "the Quarterly return is a big mystery," until you understand it, and then how simple.

Registration.—P. J K., V——, Pa.—1. Registered package envelopes received, containing letters, are required to be placed on file for a period of six months, at the expiration of which time they are to be returned to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General. 2. Unclaimed packages of plants, if worthless, may be thrown away; but if of value, they, and unclaimed papers, engravings, etc., should be sold and the proceeds credited to the Department. (Sec. 391, Reg. 1866).....J. M., A——, N. M.—All registered letters for the same office should be enclosed in one registered package envelope, if it will contain them. (Sec. 10, R g's Reg.)

Postage.—A. A. C., F—— C——, O.—Section 89 of Regulations of 1866, to which you refer, seems clearly to allow communications to be sent with packages of seeds, upon the separate payment of postage, at the established rates; hnt such is not the spirit of the law, nor the general understanding. The (Acting) First Assistant Postmaster-General, under date of November 6, 1869, in a letter on the subject of postage, makes use of the following language: "* * You are informed that the theory of the postal law forbids the sending of different classes of mailable matter in the same package, except at letter rates of postage. * * There is no positive prohibition against mailing the other articles [that is, other than newspapers, pamphlets, magazines, books and circulars] mentioned as third class matter in section 222, in the same package, at two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof, but the spirit of the law is against such practice."..... W. M. W., P——, Mass.—Transient newspapers should be fully prepaid, and postmasters have no right to forward them unless the postage is in full. (Sec. 250, Laws, and 224, Reg. 1866.) But sometimes it is done inadvertently. In all cases where any matter, on which by law the postage is required to be prepaid, shall reach its destination without such prepayment, the prepaid rates shall be charged and collected on delivery; and if the postage is partly prepaid, the unpaid postage must be charged at the prepaid rates. (Secs. 150 and 151, Reg. 1866.).....C. C. H., N—— B——, N. C.—Beans, peas and potatoes, if for seed, may be sent at two cents for four ounces, hot rosin, even as sample, is chargeable with letter postage. Flowers, whether natural or artificial, except cuttings for propagation, which the latter cannot be, are chargeable at letter rates..... J. A. M., C—— Ill.—The postage on daguerreotypes must be charged at letter rates. Also on medicines and powders; but these last two should be excluded, if liable in any way to damage the safety of the mails. (Sec 38, Reg. 1866.) .....L. M. S., J—— , Mich.—Little sabbath-school papers, published less frequently than once a week, and sent in packages to one address, should be charged at the rate of 1 cent for four ounces. (Sec. 202, Reg. 1866.)

As every individual, of all classes and nationalities—the poor and the rich—is interested in the operations of the postal service, we take pleasure, from time to time, in publishing information concerning the rapid advance of the system in general, or referring to matters of special interest in particular sections of our country.

We remind our readers, therefore, that the advent of this morning—the first of the fiscal year—witnessed many changes of interest worthy of a passing notice.

The service of carrying the mails on three thousand five hundred rontes—over the Pacific country—the North-western and South-western States, and miscellaneous service in New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland and other States, commenced with this "early dawn," bringing into first recognition and acquaintance seven thousand mail drivers on coaches, wagons, hoggies and horseback, with as many postmasters and post-office clerks (on whom the drivers call for the mails), all of whom, for the first time in their lives, come together as sworn officials in the service of the Post-Office Department.

Then there are new coaches and other vehicles, newly equipped and drawn by new horses, who seem to share in the general excitement. Who can imagine the number of villagers, on the rural rootes, who to-day have watched with eager eyes intrepid postboys as they sped their way at "two-forty," and the enthusiasm and flowing 'kerchiefs which cheered them as they flew along.

Jomice to the Contract Office, always important, requires that we should here state that the labor in all the details of this great spring letting of mail contracts has been nobly achieved without an hour's delay to the current business, in an unprecedented short space of three and half months.

The letting entire was again wisely placed in charge of that veteran in postal affairs—E. L. Childs, Esq., Chief Clerk of the Department. Mr. C. is the experienced officer who aided Postmaster-General Kendall in his first important reforms and rearrangements of mail lettings, and who has since simplified them in every section—from the advertisements to the beginning of the service, securing thereby honesty, efficiency, punctuality and a saving in Government salaries of many thousands of dollars. The chief clerk has been aided by a class of officers whose fidelity, industry and accuracy commend them to the confidence of the Department.

The Appointment Office—another work of immense magnitude—has been completed; so that the account of every postmaster in the United States—about thirty thousand in number—will be this day opened with a readjusted salary for the year 1870–71. This has, for some months, involved the receipt, examination and critical judgment of the Appointment Office; so that every postmaster shall receive a fair compensation under the laws We may add here that the returns here furnished demonstrate the growth of our great land in every State, city, town and village, since the readjustment of 1868. The closing labor of this reconsideration of salaries is of itself "Herculean," when it is considered that every letter informing the postmasters of the awards decided by the Postmaster-General was signed by the First Assistant Postmaster-General, the Hon. James W. Marshall, in his own hand-writing. Mr. Marshall has been ably assisted by his principal clerk, James H. Marr.

General Giles A. Smith, Second Assistant Postmaster-General, has returned from his trip of two months, and is considerably improved. He was heartily welcomed to his office, not only by the clerks, but by numerous gentlemen who know well his ability and prompt mode of doing business. During his absence the principal clerk of the Contract Division, Mr. French, won for himself hosts of friends.

To the Hon. J. A. J. Creswell, Postmaster-General, we tender our congratulations for the great success which has crowned his administrative efforts in this vast and important Department.

Revision of the Postal Laws.

At the last session of Congress, a Committee was appointed to revise, simplify, arrange and consolidate the statutes of the United States relating to the postal service. The result of the labors of the Committee appeared in a pamphlet of 76 pages, in which the various acts and resolutions now in force are given in a condensed and convenient form for reference.

By an order of Postmaster-General Creswell, dated October 29, 1869, the following gentlemen were appointed a Committee to carefully examine the code as prepared by the Congressional Commission, and to make report relative to its accuracy, with such suggestions for amendments as they might find necessary to perfect the revision of the postal laws: Joseph H Blackfan, Superintendent of Foreign Mails; C. F. Macdonald, Superintendent of the Money Order System; and Joseph A. Ware, late Solicitor of the Treasury for the Post Office Department.

This Committee have made an able report to the Postmaster General, which contains many valuable suggestions, some of the more important of which we publish below:

DISCONTINUANCE OF POST OFFICES.

In section six of the code the duties of the Postmaster-General are enumerated. In this enumeration should he included the power to establish and discontinue post offices. The power to establish post offices is given in the law of 1825, and is stated in section 62 of the code. The power to discontinue naturally results from the power to establish, and both are necessary incidents to the office. The power to discontinue was judicially asserted by the Supreme Court in the case of Samuel Ware vs. the United States (4 Wallace R., 617) Ware was postmaster at Kensington, and the Postmaster-General discontinued that office as unnecessary, he having decided to do all the business through the main office at Philadelphia, by branch offices and carriers. Ware contested the authority of the Postmaster-General to discontinue the office, as such action was tantamount to a removal, and since he had been appointed by the President, he could only be removed by the President. He, therefore, claimed to be allowed his salary as an offset in the suit brought against him for the balance found due on the statement of his account. The Court held that the authority to discontinue resulted from the authority to establish, and gave judgment in favor of the United States. It was necessary that the Postmaster-General should have this power in order to "conduct and superintend the business of the Post Office Department" We recommend, therefore, that the words "establish and discontinue post offices" be inserted after the word "shall" in the first line of section 6."

The statute of 29th February, 1861 (12 Statutes at Large, 177) expressly authorized the Postmaster-General to discontinue post offices "where the safety and security of the postal service and revenues are endangered from any cause whatever or where he affirmatively of the service shall require such discontinuance, and we shall promptly report such discontinuance to the Auditor for the Post Office Department.

APPOINTMENT AND REAPPOINTMENT OF POSTMASTERS—THEIR BONDS AND THE LIABILITY OF THEIR SURETIES

Our suggestions in relation to section 29 of the code require a preliminary explanation. It frequently happens, and especially since the passage of the Tenure-of-Office Act, that a postmaster whose commission has expired, or a person who has been rejected by the Senate, remains in charge of a post office long after his right to do so has ceased under the law. We will cite two instances: One is when a postmaster is appointed to a presidential office during the recess. His commission runs until the end of the next session of the Senate and no longer. His sureties are not bound after the expiration of his commission. But if he is not confirmed, or if a successor is not nominated and confirmed, he is obliged by the regulations of the department to hold over, notwithstanding his sureties are not held under the bond. The interval between the expiration of the commission and the appointment of a successor in the following recess has often been weeks or months, and during the whole of this time the Government has no security. It is true that there is a regulation of the department to the effect that a postmaster is bound to take charge of the post-office until his successor takes possession, but, in the class of cases above mentioned, this regulation is not in accordance with law, for the courts have decided in such cases that the liability of the sureties ends with the expiration of the commission—that is, at the end of the next session of the Senate. And when an appointment is made for four years the liability of the surety also ends with the expiration of the commission. This was expressly held by the Supreme Court in United States vs. Exford's Executors, 1 Howard, 250, and in United States vs. Kirkpatrick, 9 Wheaton, 720. It will therefore be seen that great care is required in order to avoid the occurrence of a period of time between two appointments during which there will be no valid bond in existence.

The second class of cases has arisen since the passage of the Tenure-of-office Act, where postmasters who have been actually rejected by the Senate have continued in charge of post offices for weeks or months. Their sureties are, of course, released. Cases also occur where a postmaster, regularly bonded and commissioned, neglects to take charge of the office. His predecessor continues the work, sends on his orders for stamps and his receipts and vouchers, and, for aught the Auditor can know, may be the bona-fide postmaster. His sureties are of course released. For these reasons your Committee think there should be an entire change to the section referred to.

Your Committee suggest that the department be placed by law upon the same footing as a private individual; that its rights and duties, as well as the duties and privileges of postmasters and sureties, be particularly defined by law. To this end we have prepared the following section, as a substitute for section 29:

Whenever the office of postmaster shall become vacant by reason of death or resignation, or by the expiration of the commission of a postmaster or his rejection by the Senate, or by the neglect or refusal of any person to take charge of the post office to which he is appointed, it shall be the duty of the Postmaster-General or the President (as the case may be) to supply such vacancy without delay, and it shall be the duty of the Postmaster-General promptly to notify the Auditor of the change; and every postmaster and his sureties shall be responsible under their bond for the safekeeping of the public property of the post-office and the due performance of the duties thereof, until the expiration of the commission or until a successor shall have been duly appointed and qualified and shall have taken possession of the office: Provided, nevertheless, in cases where there shall be unnecessary delay in supplying such vacancy, the sure ies may terminate their responsibility by giving notice in writing to the Postmaster General, such termination to take effect ten days after sufficient time shall have elapsed to receive a reply from the Postmaster-General: And provided also, that the Postmaster-General may, when the exigencies of the service require, place such office in charge of a special agent until the vacancy can be regularly filled; and when such special agent shall have taken charge of such post office, the liability of the sureties of the postmaster shall cease."

A provision of this character will consolidate into a legal enactment, what is partly, and should be wholly, the practice of the department. It defines reciprocal rights and declares in words a settlement of matters which are often vaguely understood and needlessly disputed.

ALLOWANCES TO POSTMASTERS.

In the practice of the department the salary of postmasters at post offices of the third, fourth and fifth classes has been the limit which the expenses of these offices are not allowed to exceed; and in fixing salaries at such offices, the word "salary" has comprised all the expenses of the office including clerk hire, fuel and lights, etc. This allowance has been found to be ample and liberal, and is never exceeded in practice.

Secondly. In designating the fund out of which allowances to offices of the first and second classes shall be made, it should be more distinctly stated how that fund is composed. As the law has been interpreted in practice, these allowances have been made out of "surplus box rents and commissions;" that is, the excess of box rents and commissions over the amount of salary assigned to the post office. This change will legalize the practice of the department, and enact as law what has been found to be a forced, though indispensable, construction of the language of the statute.

Thirdly. While it is quite plain, as a matter of law, that the decision of the Postmaster-General on the numerous applications for allowances of rent, clerk hire, light, etc., must be final, there are some postmasters who consider that they have a right to insist, before a jury, on claims of this nature, which have been rejected at the department This has been done, and the Government has been forced to the expense of a new trial, where, if the United States attorney had been able to point to a positive enactment that the Postmaster-General is the only authority in such cases, the jury would have disregarded the argument of the defendant, that it was within their province to regulate the expenses of his post office.

In accordance with the above suggestions we propose the following alteration of section 88, the additions being printed in italics:

SEC. 88. The Postmaster-General may allow to the Postmaster at New York City, and to the postmasters at offices of the first, and second classes, out of the surplus revenues of their respective offices, that is to say, the excess of box rents and commissions over and above the salary assigned to the office, a sum not to exceed for the necessary cost of rent, fuel, lights, furniture, station ry, printing, clerks, and necessary incidentals, to be adjusted on a quarterly exhibit of the facts, and no such allowance shall be made except upon the order of the Postmaster-General.

Section 91 of the code should be extended in its operation:

SEC. 91 Whenever, by reason of the presence of an enemy or naval forces near any post office, or from any other cause, mail mail bus inesses cannot be performed by the Postmaster-General shall make a special order allowing reasonable compensation for clerical service, and a proportionate increase of salary to the postmaster during the time of such extraordinary business.

GIFT ENTERPRISES AND LOTTERIES.

In section 152 the amendments we propose are obviously such as are necessary to the efficiency of the law. It contains no penalty. It is a naked declaration. We are of opinion that Congress ought to go to the extreme limit of its power to prevent the frauds which are perpetrated by lottery swindlers through the mails, and which they could not successfully carry on except by using mail facilities. An effort was made some time since to secure the passage of an act "to prevent the perversion of the mails to improper purposes" It was but partially successful. The act proposed was so drawn as to affix moderate penalties to the commission of the offences therein described, for without such penalties the law would be a dead letter. The penalties were stricken out, leaving the act practically inoperative. The report and draught of an act on this subject were forwarded to Congress by one of your predecessors. We strongly recommend the passage of an act similar to the one proposed, but if that is deemed inexpedient, we then suggest that some discretionary power be given to the officers of the department to prevent the nefarious operations of lottery gamblers through the postal service. For want of a more satisfactory statute we suggest that section 152 be amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 153. It shall not be lawful to convey by mail nor to deposit in a post office, to be sent by mail, any letters or circulars concerning lotteries, so-called gift concerts, or other similar enterprises, or concerning schemes devised and intended to deceive and defraud the public for the purpose of obtaining money under false pretences; and any such letters or circulars shall be detained by the postmaster at the office of mailing or delivery and disposed of under the instructions of the Postmaster General.

CRIMES AND OFFENCES—REDUCTION OF CERTAIN PENALTIES.

In the chapter on "mail depredations and offences" your Committee suggest the following changes:

In section 277 the penalty for embezzling valuable letters, which is now "not less than than ten nor more than twenty-one years," should be reduced to not less than one, nor more than five years.

The penalty in section 279, which comprises nearly the same offences, should be reduced to not less than one, nor more than five years.

The provisions of section 280, for the punishment of accessories, should be extended, and, after the word "therein," in the third line, should be placed the words, "or to any other offence against the postal laws."

Your Committee further suggest the addition of the following section, the offence therein mentioned not being provided against by statute:

Any person who shall forcibly break into or attempt to break into any post office or any building used in whole or in part as a post office, with intent to commit therein larceny, or other depredation, shall, on conviction thereof, be fined not more than one thousand dollars, and imprisoned at hard labor not more than five years, according to the circumstances and aggravation of the case.

There are many other suggestions embodied in the report, which we would be glad to find room for at present, and which we may publish at a future time. In the meantime, we quite agree with the Committee in their conclusion that—

If the changes suggested are adopted, the statutes relating to the postal service, as revised by the commission a pointed for that purpose, will be harmonious, simple and practical, furnishing a convenient and compact arrangement of all laws now in force touching the service of the Post Office Department.

Changes in our Postage Table.

Several very important changes have been made in our Foreign Postage Table to adapt it to the rates of postage which went into effect the 1st inst. The most important of them are the rates via the North German Union, either direct or via England. The postage by the former has been reduced three cents, by the latter five cents; in both cases with this modification, that where before unpaid or insufficiently prepaid letters were subject to a fine on delivery, they are now subject to postage at double the prepaid rates. And, also, papers, book packets and samples are no longer to be forwarded unless the postage thereon be fully prepaid.

The rate on letters to British Columbia and Vancouver's Island, the former now for the first time inserted in the table, has also been changed to six cents if prepaid; but if unpaid the rate is still ten cents. Papers and book packets the ordinary domestic rates.

The rate to the Sandwich Islands has also been reduced to six cents, prepayment compulsory. If not prepaid, letters cannot be forwarded. The domestic rate is to be charged on papers and book packets.

The charges herein noted have made necessary some changes in our Foreign Miscellany on the third page. We would recommend to postmasters a careful reading of so much of that miscellany as relates to foreign postage, and a consultation of it, for a while at least, whenever the Foreign Postage Table is consulted.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to or from the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, when sent direct in closed mail via England, are also chargeable with a fine on delivery in addition to the postage. In the case of letters arriving in the United States the fine is five cents. In both cases the amount is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery U paid and insufficiently paid letters to and from the North German Union (including Austria and Luxemburg) are chargeable with double the rate stated in the table, credit being allowed for any part prepayment.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malte, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, to Italy and the Roman or Papal States, and to Middle and Lower Egypt, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on lettere to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

Until January 1, 1870, letters could be registered, on payment of certain special postage rates, to France, Algeria, Corsica, Bourbon, Nice and Savoy; also to Alexandretta, Tangiers and Tunis. This, however, cannot be done at present. The registration fee on letters, etc., to all foreign countries to which registration is practicable will be found noted in the Table of Postages to Foreign Countries. On such letters, etc., only the postage rates as given in the table need be prepaid, in addition to the registration fee.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayment must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

RATES OF POSTAGE ON PRINTED MATTER FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

1. TO OR FROM GREAT BRITAIN.—Newspapers and circulars, 2 cents each. Book packets (including printed papers of all kinds, maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, etc.), and patterns or samples, 6 cents per four ounces or fraction of four ounces, if four ounces or over in weight. For rates on less than four ounces see Foreign Postage Table. The above charges must be fully prepaid at the office of mailing, by means of U. S. postage stamps affixed outside the packet or its cover, and are in full to destination in the United Kingdom. If not so prepaid, the packet cannot be forwarded.

Newspapers, book packets, and patterns, or samples of merchandise, originating in the United Kingdom and addressed to the United States, will be received in the United States fully prepaid, and must be delivered free of charge to the party addressed at the office of destination in the United States.

2. Book packets, patterns and samples not over 1 oz., 4 cents; over 1 oz. and not over 2 oz., 8 cents; over 2 and not over 4 oz., 14 cents, and 14 cents for each additional 4 oz. or fraction thereof.

Book packets, prints of all kinds, and patterns or samples, 8 cents per four ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required.

4. TO OR FROM ITALY AND SWITZERLAND, BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS, BY CLOSED MAIL, VIA ENGLAND.—The rates and conditions on newspapers, book-packets, prints of all kinds, and patterns or samples, are the same as the above (paragraph 3), except that if the postage on any article shall be insufficiently prepaid, it will be, nevertheless, forwarded to its destination, charged with the deficient postage, and also subject to a fine on delivery.

5. TO OR FROM THE NORTH GERMAN UNION (INCLUDING ALL THE GERMAN STATES AND AUSTRIA), BY DIRECT MAIL VIA BREMEN OR HAMBURG.—Newspapers, if not over 4 ounces of weight, 2 cents each, and if over 4 ounces an additional 3 cents for each additional weight of 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. Book packets, prints, patterns and samples, 6 cents per 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. The registration fees on registered letters or other postal packets is 8 cents to all the above mentioned countries; prepayment of postage and fee compulsory.

The above rates (paragraphs 1, 2, 3 and 5) are in full to destination; and no charge is to be made on the delivery of newspapers, book packets or samples arriving from Germany, Austria, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and Greece, by the North German Union. The rates of paragraph 4 are also in full to destination except for the deficient postage and fine, in cases of insufficient prepayment. But the postage on all printed matter to or from FRANCE AND ALGERIA must, in all cases, be collected here.

REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

BOUND BOOKS CANNOT BE SENT TO SPAIN.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

RANDALL, Asst. P. M. La Porte, Ind.

Believing that Postmasters who once examine this book will not do without it, I make the unusual offer to send it for examination to any Postmaster who will pay the postage. See Agreement in the last number of this paper. Is it not worth a trial? Examine it for one week. If you like it, keep it. If you don't like it, or if you think it is not worth the price, or if, for any reason, you are dissatisfied, return it and there is no harm done. I can afford to make this offer for many books have been sent out under it and not a single one returned. I warrant them as accurate that they are not injured in the mail. And as I am determined to give perfect satisfaction in each case I am willing that Postmasters should examine my work before purchasing. Bound in cloth, postpaid, for $5 30.

VOL. X., NO. 11. NEW YORK, AUGUST, 1870. WHOLE NO. 119.

CLAMBANK, N. J., July, 1870.

I had no desire to keep any of the readers of the U. S. MAIL in suspense by breaking off my last letter at the word "listen", but, as Gushweak took advantage of that koot in his yarn to excuse himself for a few minutes to "go out and see a feller and come right back," I thought it well enough to close that already long enough epistle. He returned soon according to promise, and resumed.

"Listen," that's what Woolwood said, and I kept listenin', and he went on. "Sumter's bin fired on!" "You don't say so", says I, never dreamin' what he meant by Sumter—"Yes, sir-ree, she's bin fired on as sure as you're born, and ther's a big fight ahead, certain." "The whole South's bin called to arms (it never began to crawl through my wool, what he meant) and more'n a dozen officers arrived here last night to gether up so'gers. Eny body that's not too old, has got to go—they kiod o'ruled me ont on that ex-cuse, and sooner'n hev any difficulty about it, I have determined to send a substitoot, and as I know of no one that I can place all confidence in except yourself—I have determined to send you, Goosewax. That's the secret, and it's mode me sick as death to keep it till now." I was so took down when the old fellow told me this, that I was going to rush from the room, but he roared out, "eet down Muchfat, there's plenty o'time; yon ain't going to war without guns and pistols and all that kind o'things." Set down, I hoin't told you half yit—I've made 'rangements fur you to jine Col. Roud E. Dows' regiment; you'll be orderly sargent in company Z, and your pay'll be thirteen dollars a month—besides that I intend to 'low your salury to run same as if you were here—so that when you cum back crippled you kin drow it all, or if you are killed, I will pay it to your heirs and 'signees, deductin' funeral expenses." "Not any for me, Mr. Woolwood," says I; "I can't go." I'd no sooner said this, than the old rooster leaped out of bed and grabbed me by the collar, and he shook me until I thought I'd fall to pieces—he was awful strong ol I cuss, you bet. "You can't go, can't you—say that again and I'll cut your tongue off." I tell you, Squire, I felt skeert; and raly, believin the old fellow would murder, I said I'd go. "O, I knew you would, my brave boy," says he; "and now let us 'range the programme—hut, first, mum's the word to my daughter; after you march, I'll tell her all about it, she's sich a innocent thing that efshe thought I was a sendin you, where you are like to git shot, she wouldn't give me a bit of peace till I changed my mind and kep you here." (Didn't I wish she might find it all out afore we started!) In due time the programme was 'ranged by the old fellow dressin' hisself, marching me down to the Whipporwhill Hotel, and interdoosin' me to the enrollin' officer as his substitoot; and pretty soon after that the name of Boanerges Gushweak, was placed in the regimental records of the "Saseyfrase Fourmots" of Whywy, and B. G. was a soger, and a orderly sargent at that. The men were to be sent to Richmond in squads as fast as they were enrolled, where they were to be mustered in; and it was decided that I was to start in charge of a small company next mornin'. I had made up my mind of there was any chance of gettin' away on the route from the crowd, I'd git, fur I couldn't bear to think of fightin' my own folks, or agin our side—in fact agin any side or onenny side—and was determined to slope the first opportunity. I told Mr. Woolwood I would like to say a few words to the boys afore I departed, and when the office closed for the day, I called them into the postmaster's room, and standing in the store, I looked down on e'm, and said:

"Boys, stage-drivers and Mr. Woolwood, I am about to leave you for a while (thinks I to myself, it's forever), but 'afore I go I want to drap sum partin' advice. You all know how I've labored to bring this here offus to prefection, and how I hev tamed onmanerly people, who have expected to be waited on as me as ef we kep a tavern or a sodn-water fountain. You know, too, that I hev done a big thing in gittin' these drivers to learn the work. Keep 'em at it if they don't hev to list, and of they do, break in the ones that come in their places. And now boys, (Woolwood had gone ont), recollect to remember that perliteness don't pay in a post office: the more you do it the more you'll hev to. Sum post-masters discharge clarks for being too peart and easy, but they're the petticklar kind. You're safe here. Ef your smokin' your pipe, and you are called to the "Delivery" smoke away (plenty do); and ef folks don't like the smell of smoke, tell 'em to learn. Ef business serk'lers cum here by the bushel, don't bother about hoxin' or deliverin' 'em, scatter 'em. In some big offices you'll see 'em round the floors thick as hops. If they casted letter postage, there wouldn't be so many of 'em sent, and clarks wouldn't tire themselves to death a mailin', and a fingerin' 'em over. Some postmasters think that everything that goes into the mails with a postage stamp on it should be took care of, and mailed, and delivered promptly, no matter whether it has paid one penny or a hundred, for that purpose; that's all nonsense. Of course the reg'lations are a little strict about sich things; but whet'e that, as long as you ain't found out? and e you er, blame it on some other offices; that's the general plan of all good-sized establishments. Big offusses mustn't acknowlege mistakes; when they do make 'em, they blame 'em on little one's that can't, or don't know how to fight back. Another thing you oughter to be thankful for is, that none of you er over fourteen years old. Ef I had faltered the law and 'lowed none under sixteen to be clarks—every dog-goned one would av had to go for sogers—but you are safe; and if you need more help while I'm gone fetch your little brothers and put 'em to work. Don't put the postmaster to enny more expense than you kin help. You needn't work hard, but work cheap. Don't fool money away in buying brooms and dustin' brushes. Some people sweep the'r offices every day, and won't 'low a mouse, or a spider or a fly a minute's peace; they try to make the'r places look like ladies boo-doars. What's the use? I hain't bought but one broom since I cum here, and that's a'most as good as new. The office ain't been swep or cleaned up but once; is Mr. Woolwood enny the wuss off? Nary. Ther's a advantage too in hevin' the glass in front of the boxis dirty; folks can't be a spyin' at you all the time to see what you are about. It aint any affair of theirs, anyhow; but you know they will talk when they think they see anything onreg'lar, and manny a postmaster, and manny a clark has been b'listed on complaints of people who have seen 'em through clean glass, enjoyin' their selves in some way or other, which was consider'd improper, and agin the laws and rules of the Department. Be very keerful, therefore. Don't use your parler skeets, hoxin' gloves, or marbles on'y nights and Sundays, and don't play checkers or dominoes, or cyards, so as to be seen from the d'livery windy by any one that has to wait there half 'our or so. Cum when you please and go when you please, but don't all go way to once; ther' ought always to be one to keep shop enyhow. Don't play ball any more with bundles of letters. You know Mrs. Milder almost cried out her eyes out, because that photograph of her dead daughter was mashed all to pieces, and she couldn't get another; and you know you used the poker for a bat, Flyhiler, which done the business. We must all keep dark about it; but don't play with letters any more, use newspapers, and if you hnet the wrappers, sud don't know which is which when you get through put 'em in sny body's box, and if some complain that they didn't git ther's, tell 'em they didn't come, on'y look out no one ketches you in a lie, if they do, you're goners. Stop swearin', or, of you must swear draw it mild. You don't b'lieve how plain you can be heard outside, and you know how oncommonly it shocks some people to hear men a swearin', let alone boys. Hev no prestations while I'm gone. Flybiler! remember the' 'Bull's Eye,' and take warnin'. You know, 'jist as the tree is bent the twig is inclined.' Purplepup (that was one of the boys), git rid of that dog-goned banjo of yourn—you'll never learn to play it—and of you only know'd what a hijjus, onearthly noise you make with your tryin' to sing and play at the same time, you'd sell yourself for waggin grease. I never spoke ot it afore cuze I intended to make firewood of the Dull see-more, as yer call it, as soon as the cold weather set in; but as I'm goin' away, I won't hev a chance. So I surgist to you to dry up on it—it's played out, and no post offus could stand such pressure long." I told them a good deal more in a similar strain, and then bid 'em a affectionate good by. When I returned to the hotel, I found Mr. Woolwood and two or three officers, juicy as lemons, and they wanted me to indulge, but I begged their pardings and declined. The old gentleman was sober enough to say, as he handed me a small package: "Glasswaro! ther's something my daughter Maude told me to present to you, with her best wishes," and he turned away. Mercy, how my heart bent! Thinks I, she's found it out, and here's something to save me. I went into the private parlor, got away off in one corner, and opened the mysterious packet, when, instead of finding what I hoped, there was inside of it thread, needles, buttons, lint, some religious tracts, twelve little bottles of homepath pills, twenty sheets of paper, envelopes, a dozen pens, twenty three-cent postage-stamps, two cakes of perfumed soap and a toothbrush—and a note, which I opened and read as follows:

MR. GUSHWEAK—

Accept these little articles—they may be useful hereafter. Pa has just told me you are off for the war; he says you are almost crazy to meet the enemy, and he is sure you will come back a general of a corpenar a corpse without a general, either of which will be glory enough. Brave man! you know "it is sweet to die for one's country." Oh! may I live to strew flowers on your hier.

Truly yours,
MAUDE WOOLWOOD.

I read this note over and over and over again, and the oftener I read it the madder I got. "Strew flowers on my bier!" Yes, I thought I saw her a doin' of it. I made up my mind that it was a put-up job atween old Woolwood and her to git rid of me. But what fur? I couldn't cipher that out. But I thought there was a tuck in it and determined to buck down right there and claim that I was not a citizen, and started for the bar-room for the purpose of declarin' myself, and was just about to address Woolwood, when two or three fellows rushed in behind me, shoutin' out: "Peddler! peddler! somebody's stealin' all your goods in the side-parlor." I had no idee they were speaking to me, till one of 'em catched me by the arm and informed me that my property was bein' stole. I told him he was a fool, and I had no property to steal (I had forgot about Maud's package), when he cum back at me with, "Ho! ho! it ain't your property? Then you must have stole it, for we all saw you open the goods and examine 'em, and then read an invoice or bill which was with them. How about that, Innocence?" "That's a fact, sir," says I; "they are mine, and I forgot all about it," and thanked him for advisin' me. But when I got back to where I had left 'em, I found everything gone but the note, two buttons and the pills. I gathered up these and pocketed 'em, and once more steered for the bar-room, but Woolwood was gone. As I entered, two great lantern-jawed, long-haired, Injin-lookin' fellows, with guns in ther hands, stepped up to me and said: "Are you Sargin Gushweak?" "I 'spose I am, 'cee I, rather surprised and a little pleased at their civility. "Then please march with us down to head ment at present," says I, "but I'll be there in course of an hour or two." "You must cum now," says one of the fellers. "Must!" sez I; "must aio't my master jiet yet." "Well, we are," ees they, and, layin' hold of me on each side, they hurried me down street on a full trot. Ther' was no use pullin' back. I stood no more chance than a sheep atween two elephants, but thinks I to myself, may be I can reach these osses by complainin' ov 'em to the 'thorities. There was not long to think tho', for afore I hardly knew it I was standin' before Col. Rond E. Dowe, and the big villains drew back as quick as they saw he recognized me. "Kurnel," says I, about to make my complaint. "Silence!" says he. "Sargent, you march to-night at twelve. You will take twenty-five men in charge. Ther's a map of your route, and ther's your instructions. I will hold you strictly accountable for the delivery of every man you take with you. If one escapes before you reach your destination, I'll have you court-marshaled and shot!" "Are these two fellows goin' with me?" asked I in a tremble, as I pointed to the two Belginns giante. "Of course they are," says the Colonel; "and as I believe they are reckless devils, I want you to keen close watch of 'em." O Lord! O Lord! thinks I, keep watch o' them. The leg's on the other hoot, and they're one too many for me. I forgot all about declarin' myself a non-resident in this presence, and we were forthwith set to work to pack our traps and mount our weepins; and, just as the clamorous old bell of the town clock of Whywy commenced to count ant slowly twelve strokes to the vacant air, we moved away in the darkness toward the north.

Newspaper Postage Again.

AWAY OUT WEST, June 20, 1870.

EDITOR OF U. S. MAIL: I suppose the subject of "prepayment of oswepaper postage by stamps" is about exhausted, as so many have been writing and thinking upon the subject for a couple of years past; but in all those letters on the subject I believe I have not seen one who has tried to vindicate the present system. It is not my object to attempt to do so at this time, but I wish to merely make a few suggestions as to how our "Uncle Samuel" may receive more for carrying newspapers and periodicals than he now does. Those postmasters who are so fiercely denouncing the present system claim that prepayment of all postage would greatly lighten their labors; and so it would. Therefore, their pay must also be considerably decreased, and that of the postmasters at large offices would necessarily have to be increased, because all the work would be done there. We should remember that we are paid for our labor, and if our labor is decreased our payment must necessarily will be decreased.

I think that if postmasters would get some systematic book in which to keep their postage accounts, and be sure to collect postage on all regular papers that come to their offices, the Government would receive full as much under the present system as it would under the one proposed. Every postmaster at offices where there is a paper published should by all means require the publisher thereof to subscribe to the prescribed affidavit (see Sec 210, Reg. 1865), and should see that the penalty is enforced for every violation thereof. Respectfully,

AN ASSISTANT P. M.

Money in the Mails.

JANUARY 8, 1870.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL: In your January number of the MAIL you give sundry reasons "why money should not be inclosed in ordinary letters," and I would be pleased to see more said upon a subject which concerns so vitally the efficiency and character of our postal service.

There are other very grave reasons why this practice should be discontinued by the public, and one of the chiefest is that the very fact that thousnods of letters are passing daily through the mails containing money weakens the safety of those mails, as it is well known to every postal official in the land, and of course is, to a greater or less extent, a constant source of temptation to those officials. The person who yields, in order to secure what he desires, destroys, perhaps, hundreds of equally valuable letters that have no money in them, causing, often, greater distress than the mere loss of money would entail.

The sending of money in ordinary letters perils the safety of thousands of important communications of perhaps far greater value to their writers, and its practice is a great injury to those who commit their sacred interests to the care of the postal service. Two persons mail in a certain office a letter each to a distant city. A has written accepting of a proposition being held open for him until a certain day, the closing of which will be worth thousands of dollars to him. B writes desiring a subscription renewed, inclosing five dollars, and, in order to save ten cents, he risks his money in an ordinary letter. The letters arrive in due time at the office of destination, perhaps, and some official copying the letter to the publishing house, appropriates the package of letters from the office where A and B mailed their letters. He searches every letter in that package for money, and, in order to destroy evidence of his guilt, burns every one. B loses his five dollars. A loses his contract, and with it a certainty of gaining ten thousand dollars. The parties to whom he wrote, after waiting in vain a reasonable time for his acceptance, close a bargain with other parties, as of course they have a right to do. Now, And is not B to a certain extent guilty of imperiling A's interests?

Is it not in one sense a crime to practice that which endangers the sacred interests of the great mass who patronize the postal service? And ought not the Government to take prompt measures to prevent this abuse? Perhaps it is not practicable to make the inclosing of money in ordinary letters a penal offence, but some measures should be taken to prevent it. I contend that the public are the most culpable.

First, I would advocate greatly extending the facilities of the money-order system, establishing at least one money-order office in each county in the country, excepting, perhaps, the more sparsely settled ones; and the reduction of costs, so that sums for less than ten dollars could be sent for five cents, etc., and the reduction of rates on registered letters to five cents each. Make the rates reasonable, and people will more generally avail themselves of these modes of transmitting money. It is well known that the great bulk of money sent in ordinary letters is in sums of less than five dollars, and many will risk a small sum rather than pay 15c. for registering, especially when the Department guarantees nothing. Here again is a fault. I would insure the safe delivery of all registered letters, making the safety absolute to the sender. Throw these safeguards around the service, encourage the public to accept of them, and a great deal will be accomplished.

I would like to see some way devised which would effectually prohibit the sending of money in ordinary letters, consigning all such to the tender mercy of the Dead-Letter Office, and their ultimate return to the writer, then when the people had learned that no letter containing valuables could reach its destination unless registered, the pernicious practice would be speedily abandoned.

It would be useless to search mail bags for treasure. Honest officials would be released from this ever present, never ending temptation, and from the often unjust aspersions of a suspicious public. Letters would pass securely, and the sacredness of the postal service would be still more precious in the eyes of the public.

Should not those connected with this service make known their views on these important subjects in such a manner as to engage the attention of the "powers that be," in order that some much needed reforms may be accomplished, and that speedily?

Yours truly,
"MICHIGAN."

[We cannot endorse our correspondent's suggestion as to the insurance of registered letters. With all the precautions that could be taken, some losses would occur, and the expense of maintaining such extra precautions would be so great as to render a reduction of the present registration fee impracticable, if it did not necessitate its increase. Such a system would also open a wide door for fraud. We believe that money should never be sent at all in the mails, which are primarily intended to convey correspondence, and not money, unless its transmission in that way is unavoidable; in that case it should be sent registered on payment of a fee of not more than six cents.—ED. U. S. MAIL.]

ELIZABETH, ILL., June 25, 1870.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL: I send another instance (having sent you one before) of the trouble and inconvenience caused by the neglect of postmasters in not entering the name of the State in their blanks, especially in return registered letter receipts. I received the other day a return registered letter receipt which had visited nine Elizabeths and Elizabeth Towns before it came here, and then was not at the right one. It had been to Elizabeth Town, Ind.; Elizabeth Town, Ky.; Elizabeth Town, Tenn.; Elizabeth, Pa; Elizabeth Town, Pa.; Elizabeth Town, N. Y.; Elizabeth Town, Kansas; Elizabeth, N. Y.; Elizabeth Town, Ill.; and Elizabeth, Ill.

Questions from a Route Agent.

——— & ——— R. R.

ED. U. S MAIL:—The postmaster at one of the largest offices on this route is constantly in the habit of sending people who come to his office just after the pouch has been closed and gone to the depot, with letters which must go by the train, directly to the route-agent's car, which is very proper, so far. But very kindly wishing to save the agent extra labor thereby, he just takes all such letters into his office and stamps them, handing them back to the writers, who bring them to the agent's car, sometimes one, two, three, or more, by as many different persons, all canceled and postmarked.

Now the question is, when such letters are postmarked do they not become a portion of his mail; and, if so, is it lawful to send them outside the pouch by any one who may be willing to carry them. If a postmaster can so send a portion of his mail, why not all, and thus save the expense of a pouch altogether.

Another postmaster on my route has recently received, per mail from Canada, an unsealed paper box containing one dozen linen handkerchiefs; they appeared to have come fresh from a merchant's shelves, as the cost and selling marks were all on the package. There was eighteenpence Canada postage paid thereon.

This postmaster desires to be informed, through your paper, if there was sufficient postage paid; also, if the package is not subject to duty as imported merchandize.

ROUTE AGENT.

ANSWERS TO THE ABOVE.—The first-named may send the letters and when returning them to the writers; and the second postmaster should have charged letter postage on the package at ten cents per half ounce on the unpaid portion. The package is subject to duty.

Letter Address.

To J. W. Cliff his mate ive is bound;
As nice a youth as can be found.
In rhyme his letters all are written;
Blonde and brunette with them are smitten.
Now, P. M. Weir, when the agent you see,
Hand him this letter, he'll know it's from me.

Letters addressed to street and number will be delivered accordingly, free of charge.

Collections from street letter-boxes are also free.

Some of our people, and we regret to say among them many editors, labor under the delusion that the Post-Office Department has postmistresses in the service. We hope every postmaster, especially if he be a lady, who reads this will endeavor to dispel this delusion, and make known that every one, no matter of what gender, who is regularly appointed to the charge of a post office is a postmaster.

Official Endorsement.

Since its establishment in 1860. the UNITED STATES MAIL has received the official recommendatinn of Postmasters-General BLAIR, DENNISON and RANDALL and we take pleasure in publishing also the following from Postmaster-General CRESWELL, who adds to those of his predecessors his recognition and endorsement of THE MAIL as a medium for the publication of official orders and instructions and of correct information on postal subjects:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, AUG. 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

[OFFICIAL.]

Mails for Germany—Important Notice to Postmasters and the Public.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, July 23, 1870.

The direct lines of German steamers heretofore plying between New York and Bremen and Hamburg, respectively, having suspended their trip to those ports, in consequence of the Franco-Prussian war, the reduced rates of postage chargeable under the existing Postal Convention with North Germany on letters and other correspondence for the North German Union and countries beyond, forwarded by the direct route, are, for the present, inoperative.

All correspondence for North Germany will, consequently, until direct steamship service is resumed, be forwarded by closed mail via England, subject to the rates of international postage established for that route of transmission, viz:

For letters, ten cents per each half ounce or under, pre-payment optional.

On newspapers, four cents per each four ounces or fraction thereof, prepayment compulsory.

On book-packets and patterns or samples of merchandise, eleven cents per each four ounces or fraction of four ounces, prepayment compulsory.

Letters insufficiently paid at the above rate will be charged on delivery with the postage for unpaid letters, after deduction of amount prepaid.

By order of the Postmaster General.

JOSEPH H BLACKFAN,
Supt. Foreign Mails.

Postal Communication with Germany.

It will be seen by the official notice in another column that direct postal communication between this country and the North German Union has been suspended on account of the war now existing between France (or rather Louis Napoleon) and Prussia, and that all correspondence for the North German Union, and through it to countries beyond, must be sent via England. It is probable that this suspension will last as long as the war, as the naval superiority of France will enable her easily to maintain an effective blockade of the German ports, and to virtually drive the German commercial marine from the seas.

As to the probable duration of the war, we do not feel sufficiently possessed with the spirit of prophecy to venture an opinion; we can only say that as it is a war commenced without provocation and for an evil purpose, our hope is that it will not cease except with the complete overthrow of the unscrupulous ruler of the French and of all his hopes of perpetuating the tainted "dynasty" of the Bonapartes; that Europe will now at last grow weary of the presence of this ruffian, who won a throne by murder and seeks to maintain it by land-piracy, and unite to enforce the penalty which his former crimes and blunders long since merited, and which his commission of this crowning iniquity, we trust, will insure.

Notwithstanding that the MAIL is devoted to a specialty, we fear we would be considered devoid of all feeling if we did not say something of the excessively hot weather which has sweltered the citizens of New York, and other cities, the past month. But our only mention will be to tell our official friends that the weather was and is hot, and to ask them what they expect in the way of our usual article with the thermometer "96 in the shade," and a mephitic stagnation of the air we are breathing. We will experiment first with a letter from Texas, wherein our correspondent informs us that many of the Texas newspaper publishers are giving their postmasters much trouble by bringing suits against them for money due by delinquent subscribers, on the ground that the postmaster is liable for not giving the publishers notice that subscribers refuse to take from the office the papers sent to them. We are aware that some publishers have an idea that postmasters are thus liable, and it may be that in some States they are, but it must be under State law, for we are positive there is nothing in the postal laws so abominably unjust and so open to fraud and oppression. Were such the postal law, considering the thirty thousand post offices in the country, a first-class scamp would want no better investment for a thousand or two dollars than to print fifty or a hundred thousand copies of a paper, send them to as many people, and then turn round and sue the postmasters for the subscription price. We do not say that a law might not be made to prevent such a fraud, but we do say there is none now. It is not our province to discuss other than postal laws, but we cannot refrain from expressing our opinion, that a publisher furnishes his paper to his subscribers by virtue of a contract, and as a rule, with that contract the postmaster has no concern. The postmaster's duty of notifying publishers is for the purpose of relieving the mails of useless matter, and not to collect for publishers or to keep their books.....We take up another letter of complaint against publishers, or rather one firm, the proprietors of a weekly of large circulation, who sent without prepayment ten copies of their paper to as many different persons, none of whom had subscribed. The worthy postmaster at the office of delivery saw in this a fraud upon the Department. In this [illegible] of the notification (they did not follow the Texan plan above named), and requested a return of the papers, but our postmaster refused to return them until they had provided for the postage for such return—and he was right.....Our next letter is on the subject of a loss of a registered letter. Our opinion is asked on the responsibility of the Department for such losses, the writer of the letter having received notice that circumstances showed very conclusively that a certain assistant postmaster was the thief, yet there being no positive proof, and the assistant postmaster giving no bonds, it would be impossible to recover the money. We must concur in the opinion expressed, that in such cases it is impossible to recover, unless the thief chooses to make restitution, and even where there is no proof not even punishment can follow the theft. Many persons who lose money in the mails entertain the belief that a "moral certainty" of guilt is sufficient to insure punishment, and the responsibility of the Department. We can assure such that for the first, a legal certainty is always required, and the second there is nothing will insure.....Our next letter contains the pertinent inquiry, "Why not dispense with the record of registered letters sent?" We agree with our correspondent, that the book of marginal receipts as fully answers the purpose, or could readily be made to do so, and therefore we say "Why not?".....We are told there is an impression that the green color of the new stamp contains a poisonous ingredient, that renders it dangerous to lick it. While we will not pass an opinion on the coloring, we would say that stamps even if "licked" should not be smoked, and that no ordinary "licking" would enable the tongue to reach any poisonous material that may be on the face of the stamp. But stamps should not be even "licked"—for licking in this case "spoils the child;" the gum on them should be merely sufficiently dampened to make them adhere. Follow this advise, and no one need fear being poisoned.

☞ We take great pleasure in announcing the re-appointment as special agent of the Department, of BENJAMIN K. SHARRETTS, Esq., and we feel sure that the pleasure is shared by many of our readers, who know him both officially and personally. Mr. S. always proved himself an efficient and zealous officer, and we cordially welcome him back to his old post, trusting that the service may long have the benefit of his ability and experience.

Some 400 new money order offices went into operation the 1st inst, but as no separate list of them has been furnished (the new list, comprising the names of all the offices now in operation), we are unable to give their names this month.

Franking Papers or Documents Relating to the Census.

We call the attention of postmasters to the fact, that for a few months quite a large quantity of matter relating to the census will be posted at many post offices. By law this matter is entitled to pass free through the mails if endorsed "Official Business, Census," and the name of the marshal or assistant who sends the matter subscribed thereto. This is the letter of the law, to which postmasters should secure adherence if possible; but we repeat the suggestion given last month, that postmasters should also afford all facilities for the transmission of census matter, rather than at securing so rigidly strict adherence to the law, that the labors of those engaged in taking the census will be increased or rendered useless, by delay.

The Colonel's Letters.

A correspondent sends us the following: "A good many years since, when the regulations required all letters to be inclosed in wrappers and directed simply to the office of their destination, there was a change of postmasters at the then small borough of Colchester, Conn.

Now it happened that for a few of the first days of the new postmaster's administration the people of the village were very much perplexed at the non-receipt of their regular correspondence. Finally, one gentleman sought permission to step inside and look for himself, when he was greatly astonished at finding a candle-box well filled with unopened letter packages, and at once called the new official's attention to them. 'Them!' said the new postmaster, 'Them's all for Col. Chester! and I wish, if you know any such man, you would ask him to come and take them away, for everything that has come in so fur is risen 'ceptie' a few posky newspapers.'"

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Spoiled Envelopes.—J. M. H., L—— L., Utah.—The section (189) refers to "envelopes spoiled in directing;" therefore, in the case of large quantities, which are really not spoiled in directing, but for which the owner has no use, it would be better to obtain permission from the Third Assistant Postmaster-General to refund in stamps the postage value of them.

Samples.—A. L. H., V—— C——, Mont.—Cigars do not come within the privilege accorded to samples.

Newsdealers, etc.—O. O. W., C—— B——, Iowa.—I. Sections 217-220, inclusive, bear upon the subject of Route Agents taking charge of newsdealers' packages. Sec. 219 makes it the duty of Route Agents to receive and deliver such packages with care and promptitude, whenever notified that arrangements have been made by the postmaster. You probably have an indirect notice, if no other, sufficient to require you to perform the [illegible] packages to other newsdealers without prepayment 3. Retail newsdealers have the same privilege as publishers of sending regular matter not prepaid (Sec. 225 Reg. 1866.)

Letters Attached to Jugs, etc., by Express.—L. E., W—— W——, Mass.—Letters which refer to articles contained, at the time, in jugs, baskets, etc., may be attached to such jugs, etc., and the latter sent by express or as freight, without the letters being subject to postage. (Sec. 45, Reg. 1866.)

Boxes.—R. E. W., S——, Miss.—We have repeatedly stated that boxes are the private property of the postmaster. If a retiring postmaster refuses to make over, on any terms, his boxes to his successor, the successor must either construct other boxes at his own expense, or lose the emolument that accrues from box rents. But if such boxes are constructed, the rent thereof must be accounted for to the Department. (Chap. xlii., Reg. 1866.)

Postmasters Taking Mail Out of Regular Time.—L. R. J., C—— C——, Ind.—The regulations are silent on the privilege of postmasters taking the mail for their offices from a separating office, instead of leaving it for the contractor on the contract day. While there are objectionable features to allowing it, we cannot say that they overweigh the benefit that may accrue in a delivery of mail matter a day or more in advance.

Mutilated Currency.—J. W. E., R——, N. Y.—Some time since we fell into the common practice of speaking of all frayed and torn currency as mutilated currency, and used then to say that postmasters were required to accept mutilated currency in payment of postage stamps. But with the issue of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General's circular on the subject, in the MAIL for September, 1867, we concluded to be more accurate and to make our use of the word "mutilated" accord with that of the Department. So when now we speak of mutilated notes, we mean "notes not worth their full face-values," which in fractional currency, are notes of which more than one-tenth is missing. Postmasters are not required to take such notes, nor are they required to take notes so much soiled or defaced that their genuineness cannot be clearly and satisfactorily ascertained. You must judge for yourself what to accept and what to refuse when notes are presented to you.

Insufficient Prepayment.—S. H. R., W——, R. I.—1 A letter intentionally and knowingly insufficiently prepaid should not be mailed, but be sent to the Dead Letter Office. 2 A postmaster may open an official letter addressed to him for another person; but we do not think it necessary, for such letters are almost invariably bona fide official letters, and that mode of address is adopted to avoid violation of the law relating to franking, and also to save the postmaster the trouble of opening the letter and communicating the information it contains. 3. A paper not a subscription paper cannot, of course be charged postage at "subscription" rates; the postage must be at transient rates.

Responsibility for Loss of Money.—M. L. B., G—— S——, O.—Money sent by mail is at the risk of the owner; but, in cases of loss, the Department will endeavor to discover the cause. (Sec 456, Reg 1865.) Such cases should be reported to the Second Assistant Postmaster General.

Time for Separating or Changing Mails.—1. Seven minutes is the time allowed for changing mails. (Sec. 78, Reg. 1866.) If this time is not enough, apply to the Department for an increased allowance. 2. We have no means of judging whether you should have an additional clerk. You should reasonably supply the demands of the public, but you are not required to keep such a force of clerks that everybody's postal impatience can be gratified.

Credit in Quarterly Account Current.—H. C. M., G——, N. Y.—Credit cannot be taken in a quarterly account current for any matters of a previous quarter. (Sec. 913, Reg. 1866.) Such credit should be in the general account.

Notifying Publisher.—A. R., J——, Pa.—Postmasters are required to notify publishers when papers are not taken from the office and request a discontinuance of the same. Send the notice to the postmaster at the publisher's place of business. (Sec. 392, Reg. 1866.)

Postage.—D. D. C., O——, N. J.—The postage on unpaid transient newspapers is at the same rates as though prepaid, Sec. 150, Reg. 1866.....P. P. A., S——, Y——, Mass.—To enclose a letter or other thing in a newspaper, pamphlet or magazine for the purpose of having the same conveyed free of letter postage, subjects the person doing it to a penalty of five dollars, and the whole package to letter postage to be collected on delivery (Sec. 316, laws 1866); "and if the person addressed refuses to pay such letter postage, the package should be returned to the postmaster from whose office it came, to prosecute the offender for the penalty." (Sec. 41, Reg 1866.).....J. B., W—— D——, Iowa.—The rates to Sweden and elsewhere are as stated in our Foreign Postage Table. We advise you and all postmasters not to bother yourselves as to the cause of difference in these rates, as that is a matter only between the Post Departments of the various countries.....W. H. B., A——, N. J. 1. Postage on circulars is two cents for three or less; on canvas, two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof. 2 An open written letter is chargeable with the same postage as if sealed. 3. The postage on notices partly printed and partly written, is the same as though wholly written; of course this does not apply to notice lawfully franked. 4. Postmasters notify publishers by inclosing the notice to the postmaster at the publisher's place of business. (Sec 392, Reg 1866.) 5. The latest edition of postal laws and regulations was printed in 1866.

Registration.—G. R. D., N. Y.—Postmasters are not required to prepay postage on the various bills and receipts required by registration. They may be forwarded free by being inclosed in envelopes indorsed "official business," and the signature of the postmaster written thereon.....J. W. W., S——, Mich.—Registered packages should be forwarded according to the address, so as to preserve the chains of receipts.....Y. M. C., H——, O.—A registry fee is chargeable on packages of currency sent to the Treasury Department, by postmasters....C. H., I——, O.—Five cents is the registry fee to Canada. It should be understood that the fee stated in the column of Registry fees in our Postage Table, is the fee required in addition to the ordinary rate of postage. Both should be prepaid.....C. W. J. B——M——, N. Y.—A postmaster is not responsible for letters stolen by [illegible] whose office registered letters are to lie over night should take especial precaution to have them put away as safely as they be.

Official Letters, etc.—W. H. S., P——, Pa.—1 The privilege accorded to official letters may be found stated in section 139 and 140 of Regulations of 1866, and also on the third page of the MAIL for June. The fact that postage is prepaid on some of the official letters sent by the postmasters of some of the largest offices is not to be taken as evidence of the obligation to pay postage on such letters. It is done because the law requires franks to be written, and the postmasters at those offices have not the time to write all the franks required, and hence the use of stamps. 2. The religious newspaper of which you speak, being a semi-monthly, is not entitled to pass free through the mails; but if it were a weekly, it could be sent free to bona fide subscribers in the county of publication (Sec 228, Reg 1830), or be delivered free from the office nearest the place of publication. (Sec. 3 of Act of July 27, 1868.)

Complaints against the Post Office Department, etc.—E. L., H——, T——.—We are not sure that we understand your question about "complaints against one or the other branch of the Department." Under the head of "Organization of the Department," in the first part of the Post Office Directory you will find stated the branches of the business of the Department, assigned to the several Officers of the Department, and from this you can learn whom to address in any complaint which can ordinarily arise. 2. A postmaster who takes one post-office paper is not obliged to subscribe for any other. 3. See preceding answer.

Insufficiently Prepaid Matter, etc.—S. C. F., T—— C——, Mich.—Letters knowingly and willfully insufficiently prepaid should not be mailed. Land and county officers have no right to send packages of law papers, knowingly requiring several rates, on the prepayment of one rate, expecting the balance to be collected on delivery; and all parties having business with such officers should, by investing a few cents, provide for the postage on such documents as they desire to have sent to them. 2. There is nothing in the Regulations prohibiting postmasters directing packages in lead pencil, though it is a careless and objectionable act.

Forwarding.—W. M. W., P——, Mass., and others.—The decisions as to forwarding mail matter have been rather diverse. At present the practice stands thus: Mail letters, whether foreign or domestic, if they have not been out of the custody of the post office, may be forwarded free at the request of the party addressed. Drop letters may be forwarded charged with the regular rate for mail letters. "Newspapers and other printed matter remaining in a post office can only be forwarded upon payment of a new postage at transient rates, which should be prepaid by postage stamps." In answer to any previous decisions or replies given in the MAIL

Locks on Boxes, etc.—D. D. O., F——, Pa.—1 If the locks on boxes are furnished by the holders, they are the private property of such box-holders, and any one on giving up a box may remove his lock. 2. Whether a postmaster is obliged to deliver, to a person who has lost his key, mail matter from a lock box or not, depends on terms agreed upon between himself and the box-holder and on his own accommodating spirit. 3 A married woman has the right to control her own correspondence. 4. The registry fee to England is eight cents only and not eight cents in addition to the domestic fee of fifteen cents. 5. "Opening and closing the mails" (sec. 67, Reg. 1866), refers to the mails in transit for other places, and not to the mail matter for delivery. 6. Money orders should not be paid on the day of issue, although the postmaster has funds to do it.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

The route to the North German Union direct being closed, so much of the following miscellany as relates thereto is inoperative.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to or from the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, when sent direct in closed mail via England, are also chargeable with a fine on delivery in addition to the postage. In the case of letters arriving in the United States the fine is five cents. In both cases the amount is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to and from the North German Union (including Austria and Luxemburg) are chargeable with double the rate set out in the table, credit being allowed for any part prepayment.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Rethimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, to Italy and the Roman or Papal States, and to Middle and Lower Egypt, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Rome or the Papal States. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohoma, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

Until January 1, 1870, letters could be registered, on payment of certain special postage rates, to France, Algeria, Corsica, Bourbon, Nice and Savoy; also to Alexandretta, Tangiers and Tunis. This, however, cannot be done at present. The registration fee on letters, etc., to all foreign countries to which registration is practicable will be found noted in the Table of Postages to Foreign Countries.

On such letters, etc., only the postage rates as given in the table noted be prepaid, in addition to the registration fee.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

RATES OF POSTAGE ON PRINTED MATTER FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

For rates on less than four ounces see Foreign Postage Table. *The above charges must be fully prepaid at the office of mailing, by means of U. 5. TO OR FROM THE NORTH GERMAN UNION (INCLUDING ALL THE GERMAN STATES AND AUSTRIA), BY DIRECT MAIL VIA BREMEN OR HAMBURG.—Newspapers, if not over 4 ounces in weight, 3 cents each, and if over 4 ounces an additional 3 cents for each additional weight of 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. The registration fees on registered letters or other postal packets is 8 cents to all the above mentioned countries; prepayment of postage and fee compulsory.

The above rates (paragraphs 1, 2, 3 and 5) are in full to destination; and no charge is to be made on the delivery of newspapers, book packets or samples arriving from Germany, Austria, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and Greece, by the North German Union. The rates of paragraph 4 are also in full to destination except for the deficient postage and fine, in cases of insufficient prepayment. But the postage on all printed matter to or from FRANCE AND ALGERIA must, in all cases, be collected here.

REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, etc.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. Such entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

BOUND BOOKS CANNOT BE SENT TO SPAIN.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

UNITED STATES MAIL
AND
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. X., NO. 12. NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER, 1870. WHOLE NO. 120.

A Postal C ortship.

"She is really the prettiest little creatures I ever saw," said Mr Willoughby Vane, as he turned from the window for the fiftieth time that morning. "Jane," he added, addressing the housemaid, who was clearing away the breakfast things, "have you any idea who the people are who have taken old Mr. Adderley's house opposite?"

"Well, yes, sir, if you please," returned the handmaiden. "I met their cook at the grocer's the other day, and she said that her master's name was Black—Darling Choker Black—and that he was staying here on leave of absence with his wife and daughter, sir."

"Oh, indeed! Did she happen to mention the young lady's name?"

"Yes, sir. She called her Miss Eva."

"Eva! What a charming name!" murmured Willoughby to himself; and then he added aloud:

"That will do, Jane, thank you."

Mr. Willoughby Vane was a bachelor, twenty-eight years old, rich, indolent and tolerably good looking. He lived with a widowed mother in a pleasant house in the Clapham Road, and, having nothing else to do, had fallen desperately in love with his pretty vis-a-vis, and anxiously sought an opportunity for an introduction. However, having discovered the name of his enchantress, he determined to address her anonymously by letter.

Having decided upon taking this step, the next thing was to put it into execution; and, having shut himself in his little study, after many futile attempts, he succeeded in framing an epistle to the lady to his satisfaction, begging her, if she valued his peace of mind to return an answer to "W. V., the Post Office, Clapham Common." That done, he went out for a walk, and dropped the letter in the nearest box.

Regularly three times a day, for a week afterward, he called at the post office to see whether an answer had arrived for him. As the week advanced, Willoughby began to lose his appetite, and grew so restless and irritable that Mrs. Vane, like a good mother, fancied her dear boy unwell, and begged him to consult their medical attendant. But her son laughed at the idea, knowing well that his complaint was beyond the doctor's skill to cure.

He was beginning to despair of ever receiving a reply, when, to his great delight, on the seventh morning, a letter was handed to him by the postmistress, written in a dainty female hand, and addressed to "W. V." Almost unable to conceal his emotion, he quitted the shop, broke open the seal, and drank in its contents.

They were evidently of a pleasing nature, for he read the letter over again and again, kissed the envelope, and put it into his breast coat pocket, and hurried home, to see his inamorata looking out of the window of the opposite house, as usual.

For a moment, his first impulse was to salute her respectfully; but immediately afterward he bethought himself that, as he was still incognito, the young lady would, perhaps, feel insulted by the action. Besides, how could she have any idea that he was "W. V.?" So he went indoors, and amused himself for three hours in inditing a reply to her letter, which he posted the same afternoon; and, in due course, a second answer arrived.

And so matters went on, a constant interchange of letters being kept up for a fortnight, during which time Mr. Willoughby Vane spent his days in running to and from the post office, writing letters, and watching his fair neighbor from the window of the dining room.

"Confound it!" he would sometimes say to himself. "How very provoking the dear girl is! She will never look this way. I do wish I could catch her eye, if only for a moment. What a horribly sour-looking old crab the mother is! Depend upon it, Willoughby, the poor child is anything but happy at home with those two old fogies. Indeed, her letters hint as much. And having given vent to his feelings, he would put on his hat and walk to the post office, or shut himself in his room and compose another note to his "Dearest Eva."

TO W. V.

SIR: As it is useless to continue a correspondence in this manner, I think it is now time for you to throw off your incognito, and reveal your true name and position to one to whom you are not totally indifferent. Believe me that nothing inspires love like mutual confidence. Prove to me that I have not been imprudent in answering your letters, by at once informing me who you are. It is with no feeling of idle curiosity I ask this, but simply for our mutual satisfaction.—Yours, etc.,
EVA.

To which Willoughby replied by return of post:

DEAREST EVA: If you will permit me to call you so! Have you not for weeks past observed a young man with his hair brushed back, anxiously watching you from the window of the opposite house? And although you have apparently never taken the slightest notice of him, I trust that his features are not altogether repulsive to you. I am that individual.

"Charmed by the graceful magic of thine eye,
Day after day I watch, and dream, and sigh;
Watch thee, dream of thee, sigh for thee alone,
Fair star of Clapham—may I add, mine own?"

To quote, with some alteration, the noble stanza of the poet Brown! And now I have a favor to ask you. Whenever you see me at the window, take no notice of me at present, lest my mother should observe it. In a few days she will be going out of town and then we can throw off all restraint. Till then, adieu! Adieu my adorable one, adieu! My eyes are ever on you.—Your own, WILLOUGHBY VANE.

To which epistle came the following answer:

DEAR SIR: Your explanation is perfectly satisfactory. I may also add that your features are not at all repulsive to EVA.

"Bless her! What a delightful little soul she is!" ejaculated Willoughby.

And he went out, ordered a new suit of clothes, and had his hair cut.

"Willy," said Mrs. Vane to her son the next morning, "I wish you would do something to improve your mind, and not waste your time by looking out of the window all day as you have lately done. Come and read the Parliamentary debates to me, if you have nothing else to do."

The worthy lady was a red-hot politician, and for three mortal hours she kept him at this delightful task; at the expiration of which time he succeeded in escaping to his own room, where he wrote the following note to Eva:

DEAREST EVA: I am overjoyed at the contents of your brief communication. If, as you say, my features are not altogether repulsive to you, may I hope that you will consent to be mine—mine only!
WILLOUGHBY.

Back came the reply next morning.

DEAR WILLOUGHBY: Your reply has made me feel very happy. It is very dull here—no society except my father and mother. I long for more congenial companionship.—Thine, EVA.

In this delightful manner the days flew on—halcyon days, too, they were for Willoughby, and sweetened by the interchange of this and similar lover-like correspondence. On the following Monday morning, Mrs. Vane left town on a visit to some friends in Devonshire, leaving her son to keep house at home. The same afternoon, one of Captain Black's servants brought the following note for Willoughby:

WILLIS: Have you any objections to my telling my dear papa all? Matters have now gone so far that it will be impossible for either of us to retract what we have written. Let us take papa into our confidence. I know his kind heart and generous nature well, and I have no fear that he will oppose our union. Pray send me a line by bearer. EVA.

The answer was as follows:

MY OWN EVA: Do whatever you consider best. My fate is in your hands. If your papa should refuse his consent, I— . But I will not think of anything so dreadful! Fear not that I shall ever retract. Life without you would be a desert, with no oasis to brighten it.—Yours until death, WILLOUGHBY.

That evening, just as Willoughby had finished his dinner, he heard a loud double-knock at the street door; and on its being opened a strange voice inquired, in a loud tone:

"Is Mr. Willoughby Vane at home?"

My heart beat violently, as Jane entering the room, said:

"A gentleman wishes to speak to you in the library, sir."

And she handed me a card inscribed "Captain Choker Black, C. B., H M.'s 1,794 b Foot."

"I will be with him in a moment," said Willoughby; and he swallowed a couple of glasses of sherry to nerve him for the interview.

"Captain Choker Black, I believe?" he said as he entered the library.

"Your servant, sir," said the gallant Captain—who, glass in eye, was busily engaged in scrutinizing an engraving of the battle of Navarino. "Your servant, sir. Have I the pleasure of addressing Mr Willoughby Vane?"

Willoughby bowed.

"Then, sir, of course you know the business that has brought me here?"

Terribly nervous, and scarcely knowing what answer to make, our hero bowed again.

"Come, come, sir, don't be afraid to speak out! My daughter has made me her confidant, and so let there be no reserve between us. Eva has told me all."

Here poor Willoughby blushed up to the roots of his hair.

"You see I know all about it. You have fallen desperately in love with the poor girl; and, although you have never exchanged three words together, you are already engaged to be married. Mighty expeditious, upon my word! Ha! ha! ha! Pray excuse me for laughing, but the idea is somewhat comical Ha! ha! ha!"

As the Captain appeared to be in very good humor, Willoughby's courage began to rise.

"Don't mention it, sir. You are her father, and have a right to do what you please. But I sincerely trust that you have no objections to offer."

"I? None! Believe me, I shall be delighted to see my Eva comfortably settled. But, hark ye, sir; business is business. I am a plain, blunt man, and fifteen years' sojourn with one's regiment in India doesn't help to polish one. First of all, what are your prospects?"

And the captain drew a note-book from his pocket, and proceeded to examine our hero, as if he were in a court of justice.

"You are an only son, I believe?"

"I am."

"Good." And down went the note in the pocket-book.

"Your age?"

"Twenty-eight."

"Good. Is your constitution healthy?"

"I believe so. I have had the measles, whooping cough and mumps."

"Disorders peculiar to infancy. Good." And the captain scribbled away again.

"Are you engaged in any business or profession?"

"None."

"Then how on earth do you live?"

"On my private income, captain."

"Then all I can say is, you're an uncommonly lucky fellow to be able to subsist on that. I only wish I could. What is your income?"

"About seven hundred a year."

"Is it in house property, shares in limited companies, or the funds? If in public companies, I should be sorry to give two years' purchase for the lot."

"In the New Three-per-Cents."

"Good. I think I may say, very good! What sort of temper are you?"

"Well, that's rather a difficult question to answer," said Willoughby, smiling for the first time.

"Hang it, sir, not at all!" returned the captain. "If any one asked my temper, I should say 'Hasty, sir—confoundedly hasty.!' And Choker Black's proud of it, sir—proud of it!"

"Say about the average," answered Willoughby, timidly.

"Temper average," said the captain, jotting it down. "I think those are about all the questions I have to ask you. You know my daughter by sight?"

"I have had the pleasure of seeing her frequently—from the window, sir."

"And you think you could be happy with her?"

"Think, Captain! I am certain of it."

"Very good. Now, hark ye, Mr. Willoughby Vane. Marry her, treat her well, and be happy. Neglect her, blight her young affections by harshness or cruelty, and, hang me, sir, if I don't riddle you with bullets! Gad, sir, I'm a man of my word, and I'll do what I say, as sure as my name's Choker Black."

"I have no fear on that score, Captain. Unite her to me, and it's a life of devotion—"

"I know all about that," said the captain, "Keep your fine phrases for the girl's ears. Give me your hand, sir. I have taken a fancy to you."

"You flatter me, captain."

"Hang it, sir, no! Choker Black never indulges in flattery. Don't be afraid to grasp my hand, sir; it's yours so long as I find you plain-sailing and straightforward But if I ever suspect you of an artifice or deception, I'll knock you down with it. So now I hope we perfectly understand each other."

"One word more," said Willoughby. "Am I to understand that you consent to our union?"

"Certainly. You can be married to-morrow, if you please. Sir, the happiness of my dear child is my first consideration. Gad, sir, I am not a brute—not one of those unnatural parents people read of in novels. Choker Black may be a fire-eater in the field; but, at any rate, he knows how to treat his own flesh and blood."

"Captain, you overwhelm me with gratitude."

"Say no more about it. Clap on your hat and come across the road with me, and I'll introduce you to my daughter at once."

Scarcely knowing what he was about, Willoughby did as he was told. They crossed the road together, and the captain opened his door with a latch-key.

"One moment, if you please," said Willoughby, who was titivating his hair and arranging his cravat."

"Are you ready now?" asked the captain.

"Quite."

"Mr Willoughby Vane," cried the captain, ushering our hero into the drawing room. Then, waving his hand, he added, "Allow me to introduce you to my wife and daughter."

Willoughby looked exceedingly foolish as he bowed to the two ladies. On a couch by the fire sat his enchantress, looking more bewitchingly radiant than ever; her vis-a-vis being the tall, thin, angular woman in black that he had frequently noticed from over the way.

"What a contrast," thought Willoughby, "between mother and daughter."

"Annie, my dear, Mr. Willoughby Vane is no stranger, no doubt. You know the adage, Let us leave the young people together, and he'll soon find his tongue then, I'll wager," said the captain, addressing the younger of the two ladies, who immediately arose from her seat.

"Stay, sir—there is some mistake here!" said Willoughby. "This lady is—" and he pointed to the gaunt female.

"My daughter, sir!" said the captain "My daughter, by my first wife."

"And this—" ejaculated our hero, turning to the young lady.

"Is my second wife, sir!"

Mr. Willoughby Vane fled from his home that night. About a month later his almost broken-hearted mother received a letter from him explaining the whole affair; and the post mark bore the words "Montreal, Canada."—Once-a-Week.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

CLAMBANE, N. J., July, 1870.

"I'll never forgit that fnet night's march, Squire," continued Gnshweak. "'Twas in the dark o' the moon, and when we got outside th' corp'ration limits and beyond the glimmers of light, shining from the windows of a few straggling houses in the srubushes, we 'peared to run chuck inter a chunck of blackness big as all-over. I know'd 'nof o' the road to make me feel safe from huttin' out my brains agin stone walls or worm fences, or tumblin' down pursy-presses, but beyond that it was a undiskivered island to me, and o' course I knowed no more 'bout it than the man in the moon. Massy sakes! how dark it was! I couldn't see a inch afore my nose!

"We moved mighty slow—kind o' feelin' our way along—and so quiet was everybody, that I'm blessed ef I could tell whether I had all my commend with me or not; and jist then happenin' to reck'lect what the kernel told me he'd do ef I fell short a man, I straightway concluded to build a fire, and see ef all hands were on deck, and git our bearin's—and in this way kill two stones with one bird. 'Men,' says I, in a officer kind o' way, 'plow round on your gropers for some dry wood to strike a light—nothin' but blazes 'll show is where we er and what's ahead;' and d'reckly it was as light round there as the inside of a the-ay-ter. The fust thing I did, was to count noses, and the tally was right; and then I draw'd a bead on the situation. Where we stopped the road entered a thick wood—the ground about us was swampy as swampy. Pieces of round timber, about three or four foot long—some thick and some thin—had been cut and laid down crosswise close together to make solider footin' than the mire for teams and people to travel on—and it did make a passable road-bed; but it was terrenjue rough travelin', as we found out afore we had gone very fur after our second start. Our bone-fire made the way plain enough until we turned a sharp corner in the forest when the light was shot out and in a little while it was a cussed sight wuss nur ever. The dog-goned sticks seemed unevener and farder apart, and every minute some fellow would stumble or tumble, or would step a'tween the timbers, and sink to his middle in the slush, and then there would be a job to hist him out. I pitched in twice't—once feet foremost, and once't visey-versey. Swearin' was trumps about these, and I held a average fair hand.

"There wasn't a breath of air, and the men were all so scared or somethin', that they were afeerd to speak above their breaths; and every whisper sounded jest like a hiss. Suddenly a flash o' lightin lit up the pitch darkness for a second, followed by a clap o' thunder which a'most deefen'd me, and we know'd a big storm was close by. Pooty soon the lightning commenced playin' above us like the Borry-rory-alis, and the air was so filled with 'lectricity that the very leaves of the trees 'peared kivered with silver; the thunder kept a bellowin' too all the time, and to sich a extent that all I ever heard afore was pistols, in comparison to the cannons in the sky that night. And now the rain commenced to fall in drops 'bout as big as your fist, slow at first, but growin' faster and faster, until they got mixed; and then for about two hours the water came down in a solid body. We could not take shelter under the trees—some of 'em old pines too, big round on the top as a circus tent—for it was boggy and overflowed on both sides of us, and ef we ventur'd off the cordnicy turnpike, we might a' bin smothered. There was nothin' for us but to move on slowly, feelin' our way with our feet, and wait for mornin'; but all to once't we heard a rushin' and a roarin' of water as ef old Nick or somebody else's mill dam had bursted right ahead, and aperiently comin' our way in a hurry—and it was, fur quicker'n it takes to take to tell about it, a swift current washed over the road waiste deep, and a' most swep' us off. Wen I fust felt it approachin', I ordered the men to close up and hold on to each other to pervent being kerried away, and for two hours we stood like a strong wall, until the water, which kep' risen, and at one time was up to the necks of every one 'cept the Belgine Immunxes, begun to go down, which it did soon after the rain stopped, a little afore day. It was jist light for us to see that we were in a gorge atween two embankments, and I sung out to the boys to strike for the high ground the best way they could to dry theirselves. A little ahead, to the right, I noticed a knoll, the side of which had been dug away in cutting the woods through, and I went for it steep as it was. I saw near the top what I supposed to be a root of a tree, and I know'd by making a good run and gettin' hold of that, I could swing myself clear up. The hook was about twenty foot high, and almost perpendicular, but I know'd I could scale it by a slanting effort, and I started with a rush and in a few jumps reached the supposed root and grabbed it with a death grasp, when to my holy horror I found that I had clutched a snake that was taking a nap stretched over the edge of the hank—which so dumbfoundered me, that, with a whoop that might a been heard ten mile, I let go and down I cum head over heels to the bottom of the hill into a ditch, the Lord knows how deep, and striking my arm on a rock that stuck out of the side, every bit of life was stunned or drownded out of me.

"The next thing I know'd I was lyin' on the floor of a barn, with my head wrapped up, my right arm tied to a piece of board, and old Woolwood standing over me. 'Thunder and Mars, Brushfence, do you call this sogering?' was his first salute. 'Where am I and what's the matter with me?' I asked in a low tone, for I was as weak as a cat and full o' pain. 'Where are you and what's the matter? That's a pooty question to ask; but I'll tell you you're in Effefvee's cowshed, with your skull cracked and your arm broke, and the Lord knows what else; and from what the Doctor says, your chance for promotion in the army isn't worth two cents on the dollar. 'What's come of my men, Mr. Woolwood?' Your men? Another officer has gone on with 'em who won't try to drown hisself in a road-side ditch, and make b'lieve it was a accident. O! MoPush, I'm ashamed of you.' Just then up steps the Doctor, and says: 'It won't do to let this poor devil die here; put him in the ox cart and haul him to town,' and limegetly two or three contraban's hysted me into a wagon; and after jolting me a'most to pieces over the log turnpike, I was landed at the Tarburners Hotel in Whywy.

"I fainted fifteen or sixteen times, or else it was one long faint, afore they got me upstairs and to bed, where I lay for nigh onto three weeks afore I knew which side of the bed I was going to drop on. After that I began to gather myself pooty quick and was soon able to walk about. Woolwood never came near me until he found out I was almost ready for duty again, and then he was sweeter'n ever. The last time I ever saw him was the even' 'fore I left. He cum bounsin' into my room with a bottle and a bundle, and shouted out, 'Here, Sandfers, my boy, 's something to take with you. Your uniform has been cleaned and repaired, and will be along presently. Your off in the morning; it'll be made easy for you till you git to Richmond. Good-bye. Do as I told you, and I'll do as I said. When you git back I want to see blood instead of mud on your jacket. Good-bye,' and he was off. My mind was at once made up as to what I would do. I had my citizen's dress on. There was a United States map in the room. I got the course toward the bill country of West Virginia. In seven days from that time I struck the Ohio at Guyandotte, and I put that old drink atween me and Virginia as fast as a dugout could do it. I had saved up some money, and had it in a belt around my body, so I was hunk a dores on the soap question, and concluded to go home and see the old folks. Raisin' sogers in Whywy was nothin' to what I saw now. Every place I passed through on my way home was full of 'em, and afore I stepped over the doorsill of the old homestead, I was determin'd to jine the Union army if I could git a situation as Regimental Postmaster, and I made out to 'complish my purpose; and for three year and a half I served my country at the rate of twenty-six dollars a month and found. I ain't going to tell you of the troubles and trials I had to go through, nor what a poor chance I had to show and use the old experience I had in my head as a post-office man; but whenever I got a chance, I generally let folks know that I had bin ther afore; and that my name was Gnasweak. I wasn't always with my own regiment. Every time we moved I was detailed to duty in the mail service at new quarters, which kep' me on the go all the time, so that I had no chance to git into a single fight, but I was wounded once a little by the explosion of a shell which some little darkies rolled into a fire outside our tent. They thought it was empty, but it wasn't, and when it guv way the fragments flew everywhere, and the young ones were missing. One piece of something busted the cloth wall of my den and knocked me head over heels. When I riz my nose was bleedin' and my hip felt sore, but I couldn't find any marks; and I have never been quite certain whether I was hit by a piece of a skull or a piece of a shell. It made no difference, however. I was reported wounded by a shell, and that was honor enough for me.

"Just afore I was mustered out, I got acquainted with a clever fellow from this neighborhood, and as his time and mine finished near together, I 'ranged with him that we would go together to New York on one of the transports. In due time we reached the city, and then nothin' would do but I must come out here. I wasn't proud, and didn't keer shucks where I was ef I could make it pay; and findin' that he knowed the Postmaster, I got him to speak a piece for me; and I got employment in this electrical shop. I was a little out of practice, but I throw'd myself, and aperiently pleased my boss, who told me afore I was ther' a week that I suited him to a dot, and that I know'd how to run the machine about as well as they make 'em. There was a good many new things introdooced while I was fightin' for my country—such as money-order business and reegister envelopes—but as I thought the old style was good enough, I stuck to it till one of them special agents came out and stirred us up about it. Since that I've stuck as close to the Rigulations, as I think necessary, and I have an idee I ought to have some discretion. After I had been there about nine months, a uncle of the Postmaster's died and left him a farm. Preferrin' a farm to a Gov'ment office he resigned in my favor; and here I am. And now, havin' given you some idee of my 'ficial schoolin', I think you or my other man won't doubt my capacity to transact my own business, or to teach other folks their'n. You supposed I was a new hand at the bellows when I gin instructions to your Postmaster at Clambank; but now, when you know where and how long I have served my country and have seen how I manage my own ebebang, you must hev a deferent opinion, and will call off your dorgs after this when I undertake to learn green officers their juties without readin' the Laws and Regulations to 'em. Fact is, my printed instruction books from the Department are stowed away somewhere, and I couldn't find 'em ef I wanted to; but that's nothing, as mor'n half the officers in the country er in the same conditien, and they're not all the small ones neither. And I've no doubt but some big offices do as they please, rig'lations or no rig'lations; and, as Constock's Rudiments bas it, 'er a law unto theirselves.'
MONS. TONSON."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?—There must be a good deal in the names below, if quantity is any index. They constitute the superscription of a letter received at the Nashua post office yesterday. Whether the letter is intended for a member of the Chinese embassy or one of the Russian singers, we have no means of knowing as it has not yet been called for. The post-mark is a little obscure, but appears to be Austin, Mich. The full address is as follows:

Official Endorsement.

Since its establishment in 1860, the UNITED STATES MAIL has received the official recommendation of Postmasters-General BLAIR, DENNISON and RANDALL, and we take pleasure in publishing also the following from Postmaster-General CRESWELL, who adds to those of his predecessors his recognition and endorsement of THE MAIL as a medium for the publication of official orders and instructions and of correct information on postal subjects:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, AUG. 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

Stamped Envelopes and Newspaper Wrappers—Circular to Postmasters.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THIRD ASS'T POSTMASTER GEN'L,
September 1, 1870.

In accordance with announcement heretofore made, the Department will commence the issue, on the first of October next, of a new series of stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers.

As will be seen by the inclosed schedule, the prices at which they will be furnished will be much lower than the rates charged for the present issue.

DESCRIPTION.—1. For sizes, qualities and denominations, see Price List.

2. COLORS.—Envelopes of the first quality, except the note and extra official sizes, will be furnished of either white or amber color as may be preferred. In the absence of any instructions to the contrary, they will be furnished in equal proportions of white and amber.

Envelopes of the second quality, except the note size, will be cream color only; of the third quality, amber only.

Of the note size the first quality will be white only, and the second, amber only. The extra official size will be white or cream, as may be preferred.

The circulars (Nos. four and six) will be a dark buff; the newspaper wrappers light buff.

3. STAMPS.—The stamps to be embossed on the new envelopes will agree in color and design, as nearly as possible, with the several denominations of postage stamps of the present issue. They differ in shape, the latter being oblong, and the former oval.

The series has been increased by the addition of a seven-cent stamp, to accomodate the reduced rate of postage on letters mailed to the North German Union direct.

The issue of stamped envelopes of the denominations of nine, eighteen and forty cents, has been discontinued.

4. RULED ENVELOPES.—Envelopes with ruled lines, for tracing the address, will be furnished only when specially ordered. They are of two styles: first, black lines printed on the inside; second, flint blue lines ruled on the outside. Postmasters in making orders for these envelopes must be very careful to state whether they are to be "black-lined" or "self-ruled."

5. PRINTING.—Envelopes of all sizes, qualities and denominations, except Nos. one, four, six and nine (note envelopes, circulars and wrappers), will be furnished in such proportions of plain and "printed" (the printing consisting of a blank request of one line across the end) as may be desired. When no instructions are given on the subject the proportions will be equal.

ORDERS.—Postmasters must not order less than two hundred and fifty of any particular denomination of the note, ordinary letter, full letter or extra letter size; nor less than one hundred of the official or extra official size.

Newspaper wrappers will not be furnished in quantities of less than five hundred.

No deviation whatever, either in size, quality, color, denomination or price, will be made from the several kinds provided for in the schedule.

SPECIMENS.—Sets of specimens of the new envelopes will not be furnished by the Department. It will be needless, therefore, to apply.

SPECIAL REQUEST ENVELOPES.—The following rules have been adopted to govern the issue of Special Request Envelopes:

1. No order is to be taken on credit except at the Postmaster's own risk, and in no case for less than five hundred of any specified denomination bearing the same printing.

2. Cards and requests must not exceed four lines across the end, where they will invariably be printed, in the absence of any instructions to the contrary. If so requested they will, instead, be printed on the upper left hand corner.

3. The address of correspondents will, in addition to the card and request, be printed on not less than five hundred of any particular kind.

4. Special devices will be printed when the party ordering furnishes a die adapted to surface printing, and such die will be carefully preserved by the Department with a view to its future use.

5. Should it be desired to omit the post-office address of the party to whom the envelopes are to be made returnable, it must be so stated.

6. When the business card only is desired, without a request to return, it must be so stated. By law all letters bearing the name and address of the writer on the envelope, are required to be returned if not delivered in thirty days.

7. No variation will be made in the style of type, the color of ink or the form of request adopted by the Department; neither will cards or requests be surrounded by borders of any kind.

8. If possible a printed card should always accompany the order; if not, the matter desired to be printed must be plainly written, in order that mistakes may be avoided.

9. Envelopes that may be refused on account of a misprint that has occurred through no fault of the Department, will, if returned, be treated as spoiled in directing, and only the value of the postage on the same will be placed to the credit of the postmaster by whom they were ordered.

10. Envelopes of the first quality, except the note and extra official sizes, will be furnished of either white or amber color, as may be preferred. In the absence of any instructions to the contrary, they will be supplied in equal proportions of white and amber. Envelopes of the second quality, except the note size, will be of cream color only; and of the third quality, amber only. Of the note size the first quality will be white only; and the second, amber only. The extra official size will be of white or cream, as may be preferred.

11. No envelopes will be self-ruled unless specially ordered.

12. Cards or requests will not be printed on newspaper wrappers, or on envelopes for covering circulars, nor will they be self-ruled.

Postmasters are urged to use all proper efforts toward encouraging the use of Special Request Envelopes. Blank forms for ordering them will be furnished on application to the First Assistant Postmaster-General.

STRAW BOXES AND WOODEN CASES.—The order directing the return to the agent at New York of straw boxes and wooden cases in which envelopes were conveyed, is hereby revoked. In future Postmasters will SELL such boxes and cases to the best possible advantage, and ACCOUNT FOR THE PROCEEDS under article seventeen of the account current.

OLD STOCK.—Postmasters must sell at the old rates all stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers charged prior to the first of October, 1870, and remaining on hand after that time.

Such envelopes and wrappers must not, in any event whatever, be returned to the Department; nor must a reduction be made in price, except at the Postmaster's own loss.

A Postmaster must not order the new envelopes until his supply of the old issue is entirely exhausted.

W. H. H. TERRELL,
Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

REGULATION TO FACILITATE THE RETURN OF REGISTERED MATTER TO THE SENDER ON DEMAND.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THIRD ASST. POSTMASTER-GEN'L,
September 1, 1870.

Before registering a letter or package the postmaster shall require the sender to indorse his name and post-office address, or a return request, on the envelope or wrapper of such letter or package; and if the same shall not be called for, or delivered at destination, within thirty days, it shall be returned to the mailing office duly registered, and, if possible, returned to the sender, and by him receipted for to the postmaster; and if any registered letter or package so returned to the mailing office cannot be restored, after reasonable and diligent effort, within thirty days, the same shall then be returned to the Dead-Letter Office for disposition as in other cases provided for by existing laws and regulations.

By order of the Postmaster General.

W. H. H. TERRELL,

Never too Late too Mend.

The complaints of lost, delayed and misent letters to the various fashionable summer resorts, give the postal authorities no little annoyance every year, and were the trouble attributable entirely to the want of indulgence, care and dishonesty of those engaged in the service, that would be good grounds for uneasiness. While we do not deny that there is criminality and negligence existing in some post offices, we are free to avow our belief that a very large percentage of these alleged losses and miscarriages of letters occur through the indifference and want of proper precaution on the part of the writers of these letters, or of the parties to whom they are addressed. At these resorts, intimacies spring up suddenly between visitors who have hitherto been entire strangers to each other, and impecunious and curious people are afforded opportunities for replenishing their purses, or satiating their prurient appetites for gossip by taking from post offices, by authority, the correspondence of their newly made and confiding friends—which they retain or deliver, as the case may be, to the owners after the contents have been ascertained by manipulation or closer examination. Thus, letters which are written and reach their destination in due time fail to fall into the right hands—and thee, as a matter of course, the post office is sure to come in for abuse and denunciation. Again, the employes of hotels—especially those kept open for a brief season, are by no means immaculate, and the messengers, clerks, and porters do their share of depredating on visitors' letters—upon the principle of "making hay while the sun shines" and so far as we know there is nothing to hinder them. Again, there is generally a miscellaneous repository for letters for those who are expected to arrive, and those not having rooms at the establishment, where any one can help himself without being questioned. Again, guests frequently neglect to order their letters to be forwarded as they change from place to place—or if they do, they move so frequently that their correspondence becomes soiled and mutilated by repeated handling at hotels, and either fails to overtake them, or if it does the contents, if valuable, in a majority of cases are abstracted, and even in such cases people have the audacity to attribute the blame to the post office. The writers of those letters are generally intelligent people, and if they do not know that the Post Office Department furnishes the means to insure the safe dispatch of money and valuables—by money orders and the registration of letters, they will probably learn after losing a letter or two, and ever afterwards remember that bought wisdom is cheap at any price.

Now then, if Postmasters at these places would take a little pains to correct the existing evils, they would save themselves much perplexity, and unjust censure, and would relieve the department of a great deal of unnecessary labor. Between the post office and every hotel, a locked bag should be used, one key to be kept at the post office, and the other at the hotel, and by an arrangement with the proprietor of the latter, no one except himself or some one designated by him should use this key. In this way, there could be no stealing from the bag in transit, and all letters addressed to hotels should be put in the bags, and not delivered from the office. In addition to this, postmasters should make periodical inspections of undelivered letters at the hotels—they would no doubt find many about which inquiries have been made—such as missent, and return request letters which have been neglected and overlooked by careless or ignorant clerks, or letters addressed to one house, when those for whom they are intended had their quarters elsewhere.

A little vigilance of this kind would make hotel employes more careful and discriminating, and although after a letter has been delivered to its address, the post office has fulfilled its part of the contract, yet, a little supererogatory effort of a postmaster under such circumstances would result beneficially to all concerned.

There is not an honest hotel-keeper in the land, but would be glad to co-operate in any measure which has for its aim, the protection of the correspondence of his guests, and we hope our suggestions will be adopted with a view to effect that object.

Sundry Post Office Matters.

The heat is not so intense as when we last wrote, but still too intense for writing or thinking to be anything but a task; so when we say we begin our task of looking over the letters of our correspondents which we have laid aside for this article, we would be understood to add it is the heat and not the writers that make it a task instead of pleasure.

And first, J H., of Ohio, asks to how we think an office-seeker will succeed in his designs of being appointed postmaster in his. J. H.'s place. Of all questions that may be asked us, we think this and kindred questions the far thest outside the province of the editor of such a paper as the U. S. MAIL, and therefore we reply, we know not and think not.....H. A. S., of Mich., sends us a statement of the business done at his office for six months, and asks to which class his office belongs. As the amount is nearly $600, making about $1,200 a year, the salary must be about $600, which makes the office one of the fourth class..... G. H., of Pa., puts a supposition, on which our views last month respecting the responsibility for subscriptions to newspapers have a bearing. He supposes that an editor of a newspaper picks up a quantity of names through the country, and sends his paper to to them, without any order from the persons. If, now, one of the persons addressed takes the paper and reasons to him from the office and reads it, can that editor collect the pay for that paper? This is not a question of postal law, and yet, we venture to say decidedly not, but the editor is liable to a fine of fifty dollars for every paper so sent, unless the postage at transient rates is prepaid. (Sec. 237, Laws of 1866).....H. S., of Ills., corrects a mistake in our List of Post Offices in the July Mail. In the list of Discontinued occurs the name Glenwood Mills, Livingston, Ills., the nearest office Xenia, Clay County; we are informed the nearest office is Smith's Dale, and that Clay County is far away. H. S. adds that the supply for his office has been reduced from two mails a week to one, and asks how he can have the additional mail restored. The reduction was doubtless for a good reason, and if a good reason can be given for the restoration, it will as doubtless be made. Address the Second-Assistant Postmaster-General.... A subscriber has left us the envelope of registered letter, which having been incorrectly addressed, failed to reach the person for whom it was intended. The envelope bears the card of the sender, notwithstanding which it was sent to the Dead-Letter Office, instead of being returned to the writer as provided by Sec. 1, of the Act of July 27, 1868 Postmasters look out for like errors—to avoid them.....Our attention has been called to a complaint of the non-receipt of foreign newspapers, especially of the London Illustrated papers, and also of domestic books, etc. The complainant lays the whole blame on the post offices. This we think hardly just: sometimes others than post officials are the "petty thieves." In either case detection, though desirable, is very difficult, and a remedy no less so. Some relief however, may be obtained by a general growl ned rushing into print.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Notices to Publishers.—P. M., H——, Iowa.—Notices to publishers should be inclosed in envelopes addressed to the postmaster or the publisher's place of business. (Sec. 392, Reg. 1866)

Letters Addressed to the Care of Another.—H. M. P., M——, W.—Letters should be delivered according to their addresses. The fact that a letter for one person is addressed to the care of another, is a notice to the postmaster to deliver it to that other, unless, indeed, there should be a specific request otherwise by the person addressed.

Removal of Postmasters.—B. A., G——, S. C.—The law gives the power of appointing, and, of course, of removal of postmasters to the President or to the Postmaster-General. (Secs. 26 A, and 27, Laws of 1866.) Members of Congress have no legal right in the premises, although they have great influence.

Legal Tender for Copper Coins.—J. A. G., L——, Mass.—One and two cent coins are a legal tender to the extent of four cents. You had better apply to the Director of the Mint for information relative to the disposal of a surplus quantity.

Exemption of Assistant Postmasters.—M. G. K., W——, Texas.—Militia duty and serving on juries, are the exemptions to which postmasters and their assistants and clerks are entitled. (Secs. 39 and 40, Laws 1866.)

Newsdealers.—W. L. U., R——, Wis.—Newsdealers have the same privilege as publishers in sending printed matter unpaid. (Sec. 225, Reg. 1866.)

Distributing Circulars, Etc., through a Post Office.—C. A. F., H——, N. H.—1. Circulars or any advertising handbills, cards, etc., should be charged the regular rates of postage if deposited for local distribution. 2. Papers or books published out of the county, but deposited in a post office for local distribution should be charged with postage. (Sec. 50, Reg. 1866)

Transient Papers, Etc.—W. C. E., M——, V——, Iowa.—1. Two or three transient papers, weighing together not more than four ounces, may be inclosed in one package, at a charge of two cents. (Sec. 221, Reg. 1866. 2. Postmasters are required to receive and forward, free of postage, mail matter addressed to Heads of Department (Sec. 139, Reg. 1866.)

Delivery of Mail Matter not Prepaid.—H. K., N——, Pa.—When you deliver mail matter not prepaid, it is sufficient to collect the money. It is not necessary to put stamps on it. Keep an account of the money so received and enter the amount in articles 3 or 15, as the case may be, of your account current.

Fractional Currency.—E. W. L., F——, Ill.—Postmasters are not required to take mutilated fractional currency, or that the genuineness of which is not undoubted. See last month's MAIL on this subject.

Addresses on Letters.—S. S. T., G——, Pa.—If a letter arrive at an office addressed with simply the name of that office, it should be opened by the postmaster.

Box Rent.—J. A. Y., P——, N. C.—If a postmaster erects boxes, he must do so at his own expense, but account for the rents to the Department. Read carefully chapter XLII, Reg. 1866.

Delivery of Mail Matter in Transit.—S. K. H., N——, Iowa.—There is no prohibition on delivering to a postmaster the mail matter lying at a separate office for him. In the case of sparsely settled districts, and infrequent mails, it might be a great convenience to many to do so. This, however, does not apply to delivering to the persons addressed, which is positively prohibited. (Sec. 63, Reg. 1866)

Consolidation of Several Towns into One.—H. A. H., H——, N. J.—The consolidation of several towns into one is a matter of "State Sovereignty" and does not of itself affect the postal relations. They remain the same, unless a change is also made by the Department. The consolidation of Jersey City and Hudson City into one municipality does not affect the postage rates, which is still three cents on letters, and the established rates on other mail matter.

Circulars.—W. H. L., C——, Del.—It is difficult to tell what constitutes a circular, the word is so broadly used. Probably, to say, "A circular," officially considered, is a printed letter addressed to a person or firm, no part but the address of which may be written, is as near as we can approach to a correct definition on paper. It is the letter-like characteristic which distinguishes it from a handbill. ....L. E., W—— P——, O.—Unclaimed circulars are to be treated as other unclaimed domestic-printed matter. (Sec. 391, Reg. 1866.) ....L. R. J., C—— C——, Ind.—The conveyance not of the mails of mail matter over mail routes for pay is prohibited. And the taking of packages of circulars from one town to another to post to save postage, if done by common carriers, is illegal. (Sec. 50, Reg. 1866.)

Delivery of Newspapers Free.—J. H. B., L——, Pa.—A subscriber must live in the county of publication to receive his paper free, though the office of delivery may be in an adjoining county. (Sec. 228, Reg. 1866.) .....H. H. H., P——, Wis.—Weekly newspapers, but no others, when deposited for delivery in the office nearest the place of publication, should be delivered free. (Sec. 3, Act of July 27, 1868.)

Forwarding.—J. W. B, F——, N. Y.—Newspapers, neither regular nor transient, can be forwarded free. See answers to correspondents in the MAIL for last month.

Postmaster Engaging in Other Business.—R. A. P., B——, Pa.—A postmaster or his assistant may engage in other business provided it does not interfere with their official duties.....I. M., W——, Pa., and J. F., J., Ind.—There is no prohibition nor impropriety in having or allowing a news-stand in a post office.

Gratuitous Advertising Sheets.—L. M., M——, N. Y.—If the postage on gratuitous advertising sheets is not prepaid, exclude them from the mails and return them to the publishers, who will thus soon learn that their efforts to evade the law is a costly experiment. If they cannot be returned, put them with the undelivered printed matter to be sold at the end of the quarter.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

The route to the North German Union direct being closed, so much of the following miscellany as relates thereto is inoperative.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two malls, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to or from the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, when sent direct in closed mail via England, are also chargeable with a fine on delivery in addition to the postage. In the case of letters arriving in the United States the fine is five cents. In both cases the amount is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery U paid and insufficiently paid letters to and from the North German Union (including Austria and Luxemburg) are chargeable with double the rate stated in the table, credit being allowed for any part prepayment.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered to the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Lahnan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, to Italy and the Roman or Papal States, and to Middle and Lower Egypt, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail, via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shenghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

Until January 1, 1870, letters could be registered, on payment of certain special postage rates, to France, Algeria, Corsica, Bourbon, Nice and Savoy; also to Alexandretta, Tangiers and Tunis. This, however, cannot be done at present. The registration fee on letters, etc., to all foreign countries to which registration is practicable will be found noted in the Table of Postages to Foreign Countries. On such letters, etc., only the postage rates as given in the table need be prepaid, in addition to the registration fee.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

REOULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREION COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

BOUND BOOKS CANNOT BE SENT TO SPAIN.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Samples cannot be sent to Spain except at letter rates.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

WADE'S Double Index Post-Office Book.

The New England Postal Record Boston, of August 6 1870, says:

"We take pleasure in recommending this valuable Work to Postmasters. It appears to us, after a careful and critical examination to be a most effectual and simple method for keeping Postage and Box Accounts. The Double Index forms a most important and prominent feature of the work, which will be appreciated by every book keeper."

The St. Louis Postal Bulletin of August 1870 says:

"We have received from Mr. A. B. Wade, P. M., at South Bend, Ind., a copy of his DOUBLE INDEX POST-OFFICE BOOK. The book has been examined by competent persons in our office and pronounced perfect—the very thing. A large number of Postmasters in Missouri are now using this labor saving book."

Extract from an editorial in the Chicago Postal Record of February, 1870:

"Eureka.—WADE'S DOUBLE INDEX POST-OFFICE BOOK.—We take pleasure in recommending Wade's Post Office Book to Postmasters. It has long been a necessity that some simple and effectual system should be introduced for keeping Postage and Box accounts. Mr. Wade has discovered the way to do it, and in our opinion he is a benefactor to the whole official community of Postmasters. It would do well if it were introduced into every Post-Office in the land. We have examined his book carefully, and unhesitatingly say that it fills the bill completely. Its chief features are, etc., etc. Many other reasons might be given as to its usefulness and the economy of time in keeping Post-Office Accounts. The Post-Office Department should adopt it, and no Postmaster should be without it."

Editorial of he Post-Office Gazette of Washington, D. C. for April, 1870:

"WADE'S DOUBLE INDEX POST-OFFICE BOOK.—From a careful examination of a copy of this book, now before us, we believe it to be all that is claimed for it and we feel that we are but doing Postmasters a benefit when we urge upon them the importance of procuring a copy at an early day of a book, whereby the keeping of the Post-Office Accounts becomes a pastime."

a.—When the letter is prefixed, the foreign postage (which in each case is 13 cents) is increased by an additional rate for every 7½ grammes (¼ oz.) or fraction thereof. The United States inland and Atlantic sea postage (which in each case is 4 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (½ oz.) or fraction thereof.

b.—Where the letter is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case is ascertained by deducting from the amount stated the sum of 4 cents, which is the United States portion of the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases the postage is for each newspaper without regard to its weight when sent in Ortian mail.

POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. XI., NO. 1. NEW YORK, OCTOBER, 1870. WHOLE NO. 121.

CLAMBANK, N. J., Sept., 1870.

I was very glad, I assure you, when Gushweak had finished "wreaking his remembrances upon expression," and, although he apparently felt sanguine that he had read his title clear, I must confess that I experienced no change of opinion in regard to his fitness or capacity for running a post office. Fortunately there are but few of the genus Gushweak, but insignificant as the number is, the Department would be better off without them, unless they serve as frightful examples, which they probably do, to warn others from copying after them. In this event they may do more good than harm. Nothing but local influence and chronic indifference keep such official barnacles in position; and if communities who ought to know better tolerate them, they have none to blame but themselves. There is an easy remedy within their reach, and all they have to do is to avail themselves of it if they would rid themselves of these "old men of the sea," and send them "where the woodbine twineth."

In his way Gushweak is zealous enough, but his way leads to trouble and confusion; and, as I intimated before, there are very few who travel therein, because they know better. As for Boanerges, his sands of life official are nearly or quite run out, and his release from postal responsibilities is close at hand. He will take it hard, no doubt, and it will require an extra amount of "Godfrey's" to dissipate his anger; but, with check and stamina, he'll live through it, and, while he chews the cud of sweet and bitter fancies, and moralizes on the ingratitude of republics, he'll drift into some other sphere of uselessness, and his identity as postmaster of Peachblow will fade out like the baseless fabric of a vision.

I cannot, however, dismiss this redoubtable functionary without congratulating him upon the fact that one great temptation never appears to have been thrown in his way—viz., he was not at any time connected with a post office that had a namesake—"St. Sandbar," "Chamomile Springs," "Dismalton," "Whyway," and Peachblow; "knew not what it was to be annoyed with letters intended for other offices of similar names, and, therefore, Gushweak was not required to ascertain whether they were designed for his delivery or not. Not that he would have objected to it by any means, for his great mind would have prompted him how to act in such emergency; but he might have resorted to means to get at information in regard to stray missives which would have involved him in trouble if found out, and simultaneously closed the doors of one public institution on him and opened those of another for him. Therefore, I congratulate him and take my leave of him.

There is, however, a world of trouble, and confusion caused by offices of the same name in different States. For example, there are sixteen "Augustas," eighteen "Buffalos" fourteen "Charlestons," seventeen "Dantilles," twenty-two "Farmingtons," twenty "Brooklyns," and so on to the end of the list. Now, there is not a mail, I presume, but brings letters to each of these offices intended for the others. Many of them, of course, are missent through the carelessness of mail clerks; but the largest number are absolutely attributable to the errors of writers, who fail to put the name of the State on the address, or who write so illegibly as to defy the skill of experts to decipher the superscriptions, or to tell whether the initials intended to denote the State are meant for Connecticut or Wisconsin. In this way letters are seriously delayed, I presume either by a failure to forward them promptly, or in being sent to the Dead Letter Office; and, in many cases, they are no doubt lost entirely by official depredation, or by being delivered to persons of the same name, who are dishonest enough to retain what has been delivered to them by mistake in good faith.

There is no remedy, I suppose, for such things, unless it is to be found in the advanced intelligence of the people, and the increased vigilance of those having the manipulation of letters in transit; but, as an outside party entirely, I would suggest that no new post office should be established unless the name is entirely dissimilar to any other in operation. Our geographical nomenclature like our continent, is almost boundless, and myriads of the sweetest, freshest, most original and most euphonious names that can be found in any land may be selected without difficulty. But the fact is, the christening of a post office is an epoch in the history of its birthplace, and there is as much strife sometimes in working for its godfatherships as there is to secure the appointment of postmaster. Mr. Quigsby proposes to give a yard square of his store if the office is called Quigsville; Brown-jum, the miller, suggests Brown Junction. Featherwitz proposes something fanciful, such as "Sighing Thunder," while others stick to the old-fashioned name of "Job's Ethaw" by which the neighborhood has been distinguished since "old times." Each party adheres firmly to his choice, and the consequence is a deadlock, until an umpire is called in, who generally settles the question by suggesting some name as familiar in postal circles as Boston or Buffalo, and one more is added to the long list of kindred titles that cause so much annoyance to officials and trouble to correspondents. For the benefit of the future this should be stopped, and an original name ought to be made a sine qua non when the creation of a new office, or a change of title is petitioned for.

The Department has good reason to felicitate itself upon the gradual disappearance of the "bent" crop from the postal field. This noxious growth, under the watchful culture of timid, scheming or sympathizing officials, had assumed proportions which threatened fearful results until it was pulled up by the roots. There are some few spots yet where it has a precarious yield—under the fostering hands of postmasters who hope to increase their compensation by the increased cancellation of letters contingent upon its prosperity, or by a percentage on its aggregate business, to be received from the supervising cultivators; but I have no doubt you know "who's who," and in due time they will receive the attention they merit. It is a miserable subterfuge for a postmaster to say that he cannot put a stop to such things within his bailiwick; "where there's a will there's a way." During the prevalence of the beated term last summer one of these "rogue gardener's" approached the postmaster at "Pleasant Mention," and proposed liberal terms to him for permission to use his office for his dirty work. He was forthwith ordered out doors. He went out, but indignantly defied the official to put him off the sidewalk. Mr. Suavity, the P. M., informed him that "he had the intention of doing anything of the kind," but he quietly hoisted his awning and gave old Sol a shy at the swindler, who, finding the place too hot for him, turned on his heel, and "Pleasant Mention" has never been troubled with him or any of his kind since. Surely, "knowledge is power."

In several of the weekly journals of the country is a standing advertisement, years old, which promises, for twenty-five cents, to send to any one the likeness of a future wife or husband—and gives the number of the box in a certain post office to which remittances can be sent. Now this postmaster certainly knows that the varlet to whom he rents a box is preying upon the credulity of weak minded people, and that he is making himself a party to the petty swindle by affording facilities for the transaction of the nefarious business, but he evidently takes no pains to stop it. Probably more than one-half the dupes believe the postmaster is an interested party, and part with their meagre savings under the impression that the thing is bona fide or he would not indorse it. He can have no regard for his own reputation or respect for his official station, else would he have stopped this thing long ago. It probably pays and that is all he cares for. If he thinks the fair fame of a good citizen and an upright officer is of less value than the notoriety of keeping a "dead beat" nursery, let him continue to nourish and cherish it; but he may have a whirlwind to reap one of these days, and it will be too late for him to regret that he ever plowed or planted for such a harvest of destruction.

Selah.

MONS. TONSON.

Mail Service in the Prussian Army.

Mr. Friedrich Kapp, writing from Berlin to the New York Nation, gives the following interesting account of the field mail service, as carried on by the Prussians in the present war:

As another illustration of the standard of the school education of the two armies, I will mention the extent of the correspondence of some of our troops in the field. According to a publication made by the General Post-Office Department, there are in Berlin alone forty-five clerks working exclusively for the field service. They receive from and send to the army 200,000 letters per day, and daily forward, besides, 40,000 thalers, consisting in great part of money letters of one or two thalers each. The mail matter for our soldiers is daily sent from Berlin in two lots, containing 218 mail-bags altogether. Since the mobilization of the army, ten million corresponding cards have been distributed. These cards are about six inches by four, on stiff, good paper, and have the blank of the address printed in front, while on the back there is room for a short letter, which may be written in pencil or ink. They do not require an envelope, and are especially adapted for short communications. On the whole, the field post service is admirably organized and conducted. It is performed by the active field post-offices. Every one of the thirteen corps has a general field post-office and four field post expeditions, viz., one for the general and staff command of the corps, two for the infantry divisions and one for the reserve. Besides there are special offices for the headquarters of the King and for the chief commands of the three great armies, for the six cavalry divisions, and for the four landwehr divisions. All the field post-offices, amounting to seventy-one, and the whole personnel of about 1,000 men, have their many hundred wagons and horses, march along with their respective divisions, conducting their post department. They receive the letters from home for the soldiers, assort and prepare the field post correspondence for distribution, which must take place in regular order, beginning with the battalion and so on downward. They likewise receive and regularly collect the letters which the soldiers write home, and assort them for the different routes they have to take. To keep up the communication between the troops in the enemy's land and home, there are field post-offices along the military roads. Each of the three armies has one field postmaster for the military roads and two inspectors; they are under the chief command of the military roads, which has to secure the connection of the operating army with its base of operations and with the territory to which the latter belongs. The chief command of the military roads is charged with providing the means and expenses of the transport of the mails. While no letter has been lost which was written home by the soldiers in the field, it has happened here and there that, on account of the inaccurateness of the address, a letter written to the soldier has been lost or miscarried. As a rule, it can be said that every letter which, besides the name of the soldier, had the number of his regiment, has been delivered. Owing to the bad state of the partly destroyed roads, a letter from Berlin to Nancy requires four days.

COMMUNICATIONS.

We have received from an esteemed correspondent and subscriber at the South a letter commendatory of the U. S. MAIL, and making various suggestions on the postal service. We give below a portion of this, thanking our correspondent for his effort at reform by means of our paper:

PUBLISHER U. S. MAIL:

P. O., F., N. C., July 9, 1870.

"Once, when I charged a gentleman (who came to this place to do business) thirty cents in advance for a daily paper he had subscribed to, he became angry and much surprised. He, in housing me, told a crowd that he had subscribed for a daily paper and other papers for the last ten years. He had always received them from a post-office, but he had never before paid postage on a newspaper; and I have no doubt that he, and all the small post offices, much is lost to the Department from ignorance of the postmasters regarding the Laws and Regulations of the Post-office Department. Yet many of those postmasters' salaries are, say $1 per month, and if they get a copy of the Postal Laws and Regulations they are charged $2 for it; and if they get them, even free, they would not read them. They are so voluminous. It would be very difficult for many of our postmasters to understand them; and, indeed, give them the book containing the Laws and Regulations, and it would at once become to them a sealed book; but, with the Laws and Regulations, give them the MAIL regularly every month, they would read that, and read every word of it; and its reference to many of the sections in the Laws and Regulations would draw them to the reading and studying of them, and there would then be an army of postmasters who would at least be familiar with their official duties. Those $12 a year postmasters, through carelessness or ignorance, or both, can do a great deal of mischief, and bring much reflection on the mails, and give much trouble and extra labor to other postmasters. I have considerable experience myself. Many are the letters I feel compelled to write to postmasters connected with their duties, and whenever I do write on such matters I always recommend to them the U. S. MAIL, at $1 12 a year. Why that appears a large sum, one-twelfth of their salary; and many of them never saw the MAIL, and cannot appreciate its great value. They know nothing concerning the different postages. They do not know that it is their duty to cancel stamps. How many letters do I see going through the mails with Confederate 10 cent stamps upon them, and many with revenue stamps. I will not speak of registering letters, either the sending or receiving of them is so far above their comprehension that I will not dwell upon that topic. Such could not be the case with any certainty, or with but very few, if the MAIL was received by them every month. They would read, and he that reads it can so very easily understand it. I am unable to distinguish why the very great difference between the Post-office Department and that of the Treasury Department. The latter furnishes all revenue collectors and assessors, and each of their assistants, with the Revenue Record, a weekly paper, and even the postage free to them; yet postmasters have to purchase from the Government the Postal Laws and Regulations, or be without them; and how can any person know laws or regulations if he does not see them. And then they are recommended by the Postmaster-General to purchase the MAIL, that they may be made acquainted with their duties; but it must be at their expense, and also the postage. I always feel that it is such offices as should at least be furnished with the MAIL free; but is not. These seem to be the offices that our worthy friend M. Tonson visits. His description of these offices reminds me of a missionary visiting benighted lands, and be surprised to find the natives ignorant of Christianity. Give them light, and without money and without price, if possible; and my word for it those badly offices, so well described by M. Tonson, will soon become scarce and far between. I do not make these remarks from any pecuniary personal motive. I find it no inconvenience to subscribe for the MAIL and pay its postage; and would feel that I had to do it even if the subscription was raised to many times its present price, for the sake of the service. I hold that a postmaster is a first-class office should be as well acquainted with his duties as should the postmaster in New York; and the Government ought to stand back at no reasonable expense to enlighten them and make them competent. My motion, therefore, is: 'As no postmaster can afford to do without the MAIL, it would be an actual benefit to the Post-office Department and to the public if all postmasters of fourth and fifth-class offices were furnished by law with that paper free of charge; and when I become Postmaster-General I will recommend in my message to Congress the passage of such a law. Until that time, I am, my dear sir, your most obedient servant."

G. S., P. M.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL:

The letter of S. F. M., in your May number, is worthy of the consideration of the head of the Post-Office Department, and contains more truth than fiction; and most forcibly reminds me of transactions which have come under my immediate notice some few years since. On the resignation of our postmaster, a new one was appointed on the recommendation of our Senator in Congress, who had known the incumbent from his boyhood up. The old gentleman who was appointed, had his amiable lady for assistant, and both went to work to bring about a reform in the greatly neglected Department, collected postage promptly, and of some who claimed they had not paid postage for years, and some who had never paid, and after some two years of as honest and faithful service as was ever done by any public servant, and that for a mere pittance, he was dismissed without any notice, nor has he to this day been able to divine the cause. It is now about one year since he again received the appointment of postmaster, and, without his knowledge or consent and against his wishes; but the public insisted and urged the loose manner in which the office had been managed since his removal, and he reluctantly consented. His first business was to revise the books and collect postage in advance on all mail matter, and enter on his books such papers as were taken at the office and not entered on the books—and they were not a few. I well recollect being at the office when a lady was giving the old man "Jesse" for not sending her paper, and said it was the first time in two years that she had been asked for postage on her paper. An old gent was making the same complaint and flung his paper back, saying, "That he never had paid any postage and never would." The old man calmly replied, "Then you have read your paper for the last time, while I hold the office." He did not doubt either of their words, as the paper had not been entered on the books of the office until he had done it. The new postmaster is at his post early and late, and has the thing running again like clock work, and the Department will make quite a saving by the change.

Most respectfully yours,

B. G. P. P. M.,

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Franking.—G. W. H., F—— C. H., Va.—Documents from officers of the Revenue may be sent to the Auditors free of postage. (Sec. 123, Reg. 1866.)

Lost Money Order.—B. F. S., U—— C——, Tenn.—The remitter or the payee of a lost money order may apply for a duplicate order at either the issuing or the paying office. (See Sections 37 to 44 of Money-Order Instructions of 1868.)

Supplements to Newspapers.—C. R. J., G——, Ga.—Supplements may be folded in regular papers without subjecting them to additional postage. But the supplement must be bona fide, not an advertisement or handbill. (Sec. 226, Reg. 1866.)

Contractors.—D. W. F., C——, O.—The payment of a draft to contractors should be made to either having a right to receipt for it. In cases of trouble between the contractors, the postmaster should be governed by the legal circumstance of the case.

Responsibility for Money Belonging to the Department.—J. M. C., C——, Ga.—Postmasters are responsible for all money or other property coming into their hands which belongs to the Department, although some of it should afterward be stolen from them.

Insufficient Prepayment.—O. H. P. K., W——, N. Y., and others.—In case of known, intentional and wilful omission to pay full postage, letters should be held for postage, and, if the postage is not paid by the mailing party, they should be sent to the Dead-Letter Office, indorsed, "Held for Postage."

Wrapping Letters.—J. N. W., S——, Miss.—Postmasters are required to wrap letters securely, except where post offices are supplied wholly or in part by railway post offices, in which case the postmasters will be governed by instructions from the Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service. (Sec. 89, Reg. 1866.)

Unpaid Letters.—Z. H. H., M——, Wis.—An unpaid letter billed to a wrong office, should be marked "missent and forwarded," and then forwarded to the proper office with a new bill. An entry should be made in the account of mails received, the same as if the letter had been correctly sent, and another entry in the column of overcharges. This would balance the account.

Postage on Newsdealers' Packages.—S. S., S——, N. Y.—Newsdealers' packages should be charged pro rata at the regular quarterly rates; thus, the postage is five-fourteenths of one cent for each number of a paper published weekly or oftener; on a monthly or semi-monthly, one cent on each number (if weighing four ounces or less). Calculate each package as received at these rates.

Books and Pamphlets.—W. M., A——, Mass.—Sec. 205, Regulations of 1866 describes a pamphlet; we cannot see that Harper's Magazine, or any periodical, or a novel with a paper cover comes within this definition. Periodicals in paper covers are not called books in postal practice, nor are paper-covered books published periodically, such as the "Dime Novels," etc.; but such matter as "Bleak House," Oliver Twist," etc., though having paper covers, is rated at book rates, because not published periodically.

Mail Carrier.—W. E. M., R——, O.—1. A mail carrier may carry out of the mails a memorandum of goods he wishes to purchase either for himself or others, but cannot carry a memorandum to another person. The mere fact of such memorandum not being addressed to the person for whom the carrier knows it is intended, does not exempt it from the operation of the law. 2. If a contractor specifies that the mail shall depart at a certain time, the carrier has the right to start at that time, although the train which brings his mail is behind time; but if he contracts to carry the mail on its arrival, he should wait a reasonable time for the mail to arrive.

Money-Order Advices More than Two Weeks Old.—H. H. S., D——, Wis.—Only sufficient money, with the reserve, must be retained to pay orders of which advices not more than two weeks old are on hand. (Sec 56, M. O. Instructions, 1868.) To pay orders of more than two weeks old, the postmaster would have to rely on the receipts for money orders issued, or a transfer of postage funds according to Section 49 of Instructions. But this must not be understood to imply that the latter orders are not to be paid till the former have been; orders should be paid as presented, and, if the funds run short, a provision made by a transfer of postage funds, according to Sec. 49, as above stated.

Samples, etc.—F. M. M., B—— N. Y.—1. Samples of oops are chargeable with letter postage. 2. Postmasters are "authorized and it shall be their duty to remove wrappers and envelopes from printed and other matter not charged with letter postage nor lawfully franked, for the purpose of ascertaining whether there is upon or connected with any such printed matter or in such package any matter or thing which would authorize or require the charge of a higher rate of postage thereon" Sec. 256, Laws of 1866; and, by Section 255, the Postmaster-General must provide by regulation that all mail matter "not charged with letter postage nor lawfully franked shall be so wrapped and secured that the same may be conveniently examined by postmasters, and, if not so wrapped and secured the same shall be subject to letter postage." (See, also, Sections 212, 213 and 216, Regulations of 1866. 3. Marriage certificates are chargeable with letter rates, if filled up in writing.

Registration.—W. McP., L—— S——, Iod.—1. No extra fee is allowed to postmasters for registering letters. The registry fee for domestic letters is fifteen cents, but this does not belong to the postmaster. Stamps to that amount must be put on the letter the same as for paying postage. 2. The sender of a registered letter has the right to have it returned, if not delivered. By a late circular of the Third Assistant Postmaster General, published in the MAIL, for last month, postmasters should require the person presenting a letter for registration to indorse on it the name and residence of the sender. 3. A married woman has the right to control her correspondence, and if she order her letters not to be delivered to her husband, the postmaster must comply with the order. 4. So with children, unless they are dependent upon their parents for support..... M. A. L., F—— G——, Ga.—The return registered letter receipt should be given to the sender of the letter. (Sec. 13, Reg'n Reg.)

Postage.—C. A. S——, Pa.—Postage is not chargeable on exchange papers; but on transient papers attempted to be sent as exchanges the transient rate of postage should be collected..... A. H. M., C—— C——, Mich.—1. Postage should be charged at regular quarterly rates on Sunday-school papers issued as often as once a week. 2. Mail contractors can send their letters to the Department free of postage..... J. E. C., A——, O.—Postage on Queen Bees should be charged at letter rates. ..... H. M., C——, Va.—If a package is subject to revenue or custom duty, the prepayment of postage is not payment of this duty. .....Postage on drop letters, where there is not a free delivery, is now one cent. (Sec. 261, Laws 1866)..... S. P. C., M——, Ind.—The postage on old letters, returned to the writer after being opened and read, should be charged at letter rates..... G. B. C., D——, Md.—Pictures rolled on round sticks to protect them are subject only to the usual miscellaneous rate of postage..... J. B. T., W——, Ind.—Corrected proof-sheets are subject to miscellaneous rates. (Sec. 244, Laws 1866.)..... M. L. B., G—— S——, O.—The postage on a daily taken regularly for less than a quarter must be charged at the regular rate for a whole quarter, or at transient rates on each paper, which latter should be prepaid at the mailing office..... J. B. W., L——, Va.—Leaf tobacco cannot be sent at sample rates in the United States, but may be sent to Canada and England..... H. G. O., P——, Pa.—The postage on newspapers to Germany must be rated on each paper; that is, three papers in one package weighing less than four ounces should be charged with twelve cents..... H. Z. J., P——, Ind., and T. L., B—— R——, Mich.—Printed notices containing writing should be charged at letter rates, drop or mail, as the case may be, whether sealed or not.

Mails to Brooklyn, N. Y.

Postmasters and clerks, at offices where mails are made up direct for Brooklyn should carefully observe the addresses on the letters sent to that place. Letters addressed to "Brooklyn, E. D." (Eastern District) go to Williamsburgh, N. Y.; those addressed "Green Point, Brooklyn," go to Green Point, N. Y. Williamsburgh and Green Point are both within the city limits, and under the municipal government of Brooklyn; but they are separate post offices. "Brooklyn, E. D." comprises what was formerly the city of Williamsburgh, but has now (with Green Point) been consolidated with Brooklyn. The three post offices of Brooklyn, Williamsburgh and Greenpoint, however, remain distinct and separate.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, AUG. 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes. A Postal Convention has been concluded between the United States and the Empire of Brazil, establishing and regulating the exchange of international correspondence between the two countries by means of the line of mail packets subsidized by the respective Governments, plying monthly between New York and Rio de Janeiro, as well as by such other means of transportation between the seaports of the two countries as shall hereafter be established with the approval of the respective Post Departments of the United States and Brazil.

This Convention, which goes into operation immediately, establishes a combined international letter postage of 15 cents in the United States, and of 300 reis in Brazil, per each single rate of half an ounce (15 grammes) or fraction thereof, the prepayment of which is compulsory, and the letters so prepaid in one country are to be delivered free of all charges whatsoever in the other.

But for all correspondence other than letters, it is provided that there shall be charged and collected in the mailing country such rates of inland postage as are now or may hereafter be established for domestic correspondence of the same class; and, in addition thereto, a sea rate of 1 cent on each newspaper, and for each ounce (30 grammes) or fraction thereof of other printed matter, which inland and sea postage is to be combined into one rate.

The rates of postage hereafter to be levied and collected in the United States on all correspondence (except letters) posted therein and addressed to Brazil by this route, are, therefore, as follows, viz.:

Newspapers 2 cents for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, and, in addition thereto, a sea rate of one cent for each newspaper

On other printed matter (except books and circulars) comprising sheets of music, engravings, lithographs, photographs, drawings, maps and plans, 2 cents per each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, with the additional charge of 1 cent per each ounce or under for sea postage.

For books, 4 cents per each 4 ounces, or fract'on of 4 ounces, in addition to the sea postage of 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof.

For each three or less number of unsealed circulars, 2 cents, and, in additions thereto, 1 cent for each ounce or under for sea postage.

It is particularly to be observed that the above postage charges on correspondence of all kinds must be fully prepaid at the office of mailing. If not so prepaid it cannot be forwarded

Newspapers, printed matter and other articles of mailable matter enumerated herein (except letters) will be charged at the office of destination in Brazil with the rates of inland postage established by the laws of that country for domestic correspondence of the same class

In like manner on newspapers, prints of all kinds and other articles of mailable matter (except letters) received in the United States from Brazil by this route there will be charged and collected at the office of delivery the regular domestic rates of United States inland postage; the charge for sea postage being collected by the dispatching country only.

New York is the only office of exchange on the side of the United States; and Para, Pernambuco, Bahia and Rio de Janeiro are the offices of exchange on the side of Brazil.

Postmasters will levy and collect postage accordingly from and after this date.

Superintendent Foreign Mails.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 20, 1870.

Sir—I have to inform you that, under a Postal Convention recently concluded between Belgium and Spain, correspondence from the United States for Spain, the Canaries, the Balearic Isles, and Spanish possessions on the Northern Coast of Africa, and Gibraltar, may be forwarded to destination via Belgium, subject to the following rates of postage and conditions of payment, viz.:

On Letters for Spain (except Gibraltar) and her possessions, including the Canaries and Balearic Isles, when not exceeding 1-3 ounce, 16 cents; exceeding 1-3 but not over ½ ounce, 22 cents; over ½ but not exceeding 2-3 ounce, 32 cents; over 2-3 but not exceeding 1 ounce, 38 cents, and the same charges and progression for each exceeding ounce or fraction thereof: prepayment opt'onal.

On letters for Gibraltar, of 1-3 ounce or under, 18 cents; over 1-3 but not exceeding ⅔ ounce, 26 cents; exceeding ⅔ but not over 2-3 ounce, 36 cents; over 2-3 but not exceeding 1 ounce, 44 cents, and the like charges for each additional ounce or specified part thereof; prepayment optional.

The postages chargeable on printed matter and samples by this route are the same for Gibraltar as for Spain and her possessions, and are as follows, viz.:

On newspapers not exceeding 1 1-3 ounce 6 cents; over that weight, but not exceeding 2 2-3 ounces, 8 cents; over that weight but not exceeding 4 ounces, 10 cents, and the like charges and rate of progression for each additional 4 ounces or fraction thereof; pre payment compulsory.

Book packets not exceeding 1 1-3 ounce, 10 cents; exceeding that weight but not exceeding 2 2-3 ounces, 12 cents; exceeding that weight but not over 4 ounces, 14 cents, and the like charges and rate of progression for each additional 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment compul-ory.

Samples of merchandise, 14 cents per each 4 ounces or fraction of 4 ounces; prepayment compulsory.

Under this convention between Belgium and Spain, a supplementary register fee of 4 cents is established, limited, however, to the correspondence for Gibraltar, which, added to the international fee of 8 cents, makes the combined register fee to Gibraltar, via Belgium, 12 cents.

Changes corresponding to the above should be made in the Table of Postages of the next issue of the UNITED STATES MAIL.

I am very respectfully,
JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Superintendent Foreign Mails.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON D. C., SEPTEMBER 29, 187[illegible].

Sir—The Postmaster-General, to permit small book packets for Germany to receive the benefit of a moderated postage, has directed the following arrangement for the book packets sent from the United States to North Germany to be observed and enforced from and after the 1st proximo, viz.:

1. For such correspondence sent from the United States, viz.: direct line of steamers to Bremen and and Hamburg,

When not exceeding an ounce in weight, two (2) cents

When exceeding one ounce, and not exceeding two ounces in weight, four (4) cents.

When exceeding two ounces, and not exceeding four ounces in weight, six (6) cents.

For packets exceeding four ounces in weight an additional rate of six (6) cents for every four ounces or fraction thereof.

2. For such correspondence sent from the United States by closed mail via England,

When not exceeding an ounce in weight, three (3) cents.

When exceeding one ounce, and not exceeding two ounces in weight, six (6) cents

When exceeding two ounces, and not exceeding four ounces in weight, eight (8) cents.

For packets exceeding four ounces in weight an additional rate of eight (8) cents for every four ounces or fraction thereof.

The above postage charges are, of course, to be in all cases, fully pre-paid, our present convention with Germany specially prohibiting any printed matter or samples from being forwarded in either direction unless fully prepaid.

These rates of postage are therefore to be levied and collected on all book packets for Germany, posted in this country, on and after the 1st proximo. The direct mail service between the United States and Germany being still interrupted by the Franco-German war, the postage rates chargeable by that route, are, of course, inoperative; but as soon as that service shall have been resumed, the rates chargeable by the direct mail should be levied and collected on all book packets for Germany, posted for transmission by the direct route.

You will please amend the "Table of Postages" in the United States Mail in accordance with this information.

I am very respectfully,
your obedient servant,
Sup Foreign Mail.

Is it Fair Play?

It really gives us a great deal of satisfaction to learn that, under the able management of Mr Creswell, the P. O. Department "is rapidly becoming a self-sustaining institution." We venture to hope that when it shall be entirely so, it may dawn upon the minds of Deputy Postmasters and Clerks that newspapers may, under certain circumstances, be quite as important as letters to the person to whom they are directed; and that when a newspaper-bag is sent one or two hundred miles in the wrong direction, the blunder may occasion serious inconvenience to many persons. Complaint, we know, is useless, and wrath unavailing, but perhaps humble entreaty may not utterly fail to touch the official heart.

The above paragraph is from a late number of the New York Tribune, and the idea it is intended to convey is that "Deputy Postmasters and Clerks," as a rule, consider newspapers in the mail as of no consequence in comparison with letters, and take no pains to forward them in their proper direction, and, furthermore, that the writer of the paragraph knows that complaint of such misconduct, when it occurs, is useless. As to the first statement, it is not at all unlikely that a bag of Tribunes may occasionally, through the blunder of some clerk or porter employed in the post office, be misseot, no doubt causing inconvenience and disappointment to many of the Tribune's subscribers. Such blunders ought not to occur at all, but when they do, which is very rarely, it is not exactly reasonable to charge the entire body of "Deputy Postmasters and Clerks" with habitual neglect of duty. The better course would be to make complaint in each case, as soon as the facts are ascertained, when it is the duty of the postal authorities to investigate the matter and punish the proved negligence of its subordinate. So long as the post-office service, however, is dependent upon merely human agents in conducting its rather extensive operations, and until their places can be supplied by angels, editors, and other infallible beings, we suppose it is useless to hope for the good time when mistakes will be impossible.

As to the "uselessness" of complaints. This charge, if true, is a much more serious one than the first. The Tribune says it "knows" that such complaints are useless. It could only know the fact by having made them and found them disregarded; but we venture to assert that it has had no such experience, and that every complaint it has made has been promptly investigated and the wrong complained of corrected when its source was found to be within the post office. We beg leave to call to its attention the result of one such complaint.

Some time ago, an editorial article appeared in the Tribune, charging that the copies of that paper addressed to subscribers living on the lines of the Hudson River and Harlem Railroads were habitually delayed in the mails, frequently not reaching their addresses until the day after being posted in New York; that a letter posted in New York addressed to a place twenty miles distant, also on the Harlem railroad, did not arrive there until three days afterward; that these irregularities were due to heedlessness and inefficiency on the part of the servants of the Post Office Department, which ought to be abolished and the whole business of mail transportation handed over to "private enterprise," by which agency it would be conducted in a highly satisfactory manner (the beneficent workings of "private enterprise," as illustrated by the self-sacrificing conduct of certain "railway kings," who now occasionally figure in the columns of the Tribune, not having then "dawned upon" the mind of the editor). These charges were brought to the attention of the then Postmaster General, who ordered their investigation by an Agent of the Department, who found that the delay in transmission of the letter was due to the fact that its address was so illegibly written that the clerks in the New York office, who, after two days' examination, finally sent it to its proper destination "on a guess," were rather entitled to credit for their acuteness than to censure for neglect. And as to the delayed newspapers, he proved to the satisfaction of the editor of the Tribune, by the evidence of those in charge of the mailing room of that establishment, that the explanation of the delay was to be found in the fact that those persons themselves had repeatedly sent to the post office for mailing, bags of papers labelled "Hudson River" filled with papers directed to subscribers on the Harlem Railroad, and vice versa; and that hundreds of Tribunes were weekly sent to the post office from the publication office without any addresses whatever. So that complaint was certainly not "useless," inasmuch as it opened the eyes of the editor to the shortcomings of his own subordinates, which he had so boldly charged upon those of the Post Office Department. But a careful reader of the Tribune since that date has never found in its columns a word of apology for those unfounded charges—and it is not likely that he ever will.

are urgently requested to forward the amount of their indebtedness AT ONCE to the Publisher of the UNITED STATES MAIL, who would be very glad to give the paper away out of pure benevolence if he were rich enough to afford indulgence in so costly a virtue. Most of you, gentlemen, owe us but ONE DOLLAR. Please discontinue owing it as soon as you have read this paragraph.

Decision as to "Miscellaneous Printed Matter."

We give below an important correspondence in regard to the proper rate of postage chargeable on miscellaneous printed matter in one package, but consisting of different articles, all of the same class. We are glad of this definite settlement of a question which has heretofore been not altogether free from doubt. Section 316 P. O. Laws, edition of 1866, provides a penalty for inclosing a letter or other thing, or any memorandum in writing in a newspaper, etc., and this has often been considered as prohibitory of the practice which the decision below now sanctions, though we have always been of the opinion that such a construction of the law was at war with its spirit, though apparently in accordance with its letter. Postmasters will bear in mind that the decision refers only to "miscellaneous printed matter" (for a definition of which see sections 221 and 222 P. O. Laws) and not to newspapers, etc., sent from the office of publication at quarterly rates to regular subscribers:

NEW YORK, Sept. 15, 1870.

To the Hon. J. W. MARSHALL, First Assistant Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.:

DEAR SIR—We intend to send to each postmaster in the United States—some 27,000 in number—a copy of Harper's Bazar and a showbill (NOT circular).

For several years past we sent both the paper and the showbill in one package, paying therefor four cents postage. Upon making inquiries at the post office we were informed by the postmaster that this year, in consequence of some rule to that effect, we would be compelled to send them in separate wrappers.

We hope that the following considerations may lead you, as it does us, to question the necessity and convenience of this new regulation:

1. By compelling us to send our showbill and Bazar in separate packages you do not increase the revenues of the Postal Department one cent, since the postage on the two single packages will be but the equivalent of the postage on the one double package.

2. It doubles the labor of the post-office clerks, causing them to cancel the stamps on 54,000 packages, and distribute that number instead of 27,000 as heretofore.

3. It increases the labor and time which we have to bestow upon those packages, in getting them ready for transmission.

We wish it understood that no printed or written circulars will be put in those packages. The weight of a single package is under four ounces, and of a double package under eight ounces. We think, after you have looked into this matter, you will readily see that by allowing us to send as we desire it will be a saving both to the Post-Office Department and to us.

We have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servants, HARPER & BROTHERS.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
APPOINTMENT OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, SEPTEMBER 17, 1870.

Sir—The inclosed letter from the Messrs. Harper, of your city, is referred to you.

Presuming that the case is fairly and correctly stated by the firm sending it, I can see no objection to mailing the paper and the poster in the same package, both coming under the head of miscellaneous printed matter, and subject to the same rate of postage, viz: Two cents for each four ounces, or fraction thereof, to be prepaid by postage stamps—see section 259 of the Postal laws It is not considered that this comes in conflict with any former ruling of the Department that printed matter, subject to different rates of postage, should not be included in the same package.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. W. MARSHALL.
First Assist. P. M. General.

GEN. P. H. JONES,
P. M. New York, N. Y.

Sundry Post Office Matters.

Our first letter makes some inquiries respecting supplements. It was accompanied by two printed papers, which the publisher of a certain county paper in Indiana called supplements, and which the postmaster at a certain post office in the same State, called miscellaneous printed matter, the diverse views of these two parties led, no doubt, to no small discussion, which, doubtless, was as learned as extensive, for we are informed that "smart men" said the postmaster was wrong in insisting on separate postage for these so-called supplements. As one of these printed papers submitted to us is list of premiums to be awarded at a county fair, and the other is a small poster or large handbill, calling the attention of buyers to $5,000 worth of carpets, oil-cloths and mattings, dull men as well as smart ones can judge for themselves how near these papers come to the definition of supplement in Section 226, of Regulations of 1866. The handbill contains a brilliant idea for evasion of the postal law. It is headed "Republican Extra," and under this, in small type, "Napoleon surrendered to the Germans on the 1st day of September," and thus follows the matter of the advertisement. There is no evidence that this mode of getting up a supplement is patented or copyrighted, it is therefore open to all Jeremy Diddlers. Some postmasters may be deceived by it, but none who read the MAIL will be.... Our next letter is from a postmaster who is a quandary whether to use the popular name or the official name of the town in which his office is situated. We reply, the official name by all means. One of the most fruitful sources of postal annoyance is the two or three names by which many towns are known. Not long since we were called on to investigate the cause of the non receipt of a registered letter. We found the letter was addressed by a local name as well as the post office to which it was intended to be sent, but this local name was also the name of a post office in another county, and thither the letter was sent, and there it remained till sent to the Dead Letter Office, and thence returned to the writer. There was a peculiar hardship in the case, as the person for whom the letter was intended was waiting anxiously for the money the letter contained to enable him to return home. Therefore, we say to postmasters and all others: In sending letters be careful to use only the official names of the places to which you wish your letters to go....Two letters come next that contain complimentary mention of the MAIL; we agree with both, but especially indorse that assertion that our Foreign Postage Table is indispensable. With the many and frequent changes in Foreign Postal Arrangements, a table a few months old will be found far behind the times....We have no fault to find with our long and late subscriber for discontinuing our paper, in order to take one of somewhat similar character published in his own State, not that he is dissatisfied with the MAIL, or thinks the other paper superior, but he considers it his duty to take the latter and cannot afford both. We have no fault to find, we say, though we consider that he puts rather a fine point to his duty. It was too fine a point to duty to State that led many a few years ago to forget or neglect the superior duty to country.

Doing a Little Too Much.

We often hear it asserted "There's no use of registering a letter," or the assertion put in the questioning form of "Where's the use of registering a letter?" the question accompanied by a shrug of the shoulders and a "wondrous wise" expression of the eyes, as much as to say, "You can't answer that question. I know more about it than you do." And again, we often hear it most valiantly asserted that everything about a letter, alleged to be lost or to have been rifled, was right when it was mailed; the inclosure was just as stated, address proper and clear, postage prepaid, and it self-evident that there is a thief in the Post Office Department somewhere. We publish the following letter, received in reply to one making inquiry for a deed alleged to have been contained in a registered letter received lately by a citizen of New York. This letter discloses one fact, viz., that the carelessness was on the part of a post-office clerk, who performed the extra and non-official duty of attempting to put the deed in the envelope. We take this occasion to say that it is no part of a postmaster's duty to know the contents of sealed letters, or to receive unsealed those intended to be sealed, and it is much better to neglect than to perform this extra and non-official act. Especially does this remark apply to registered letters:

POST OFFICE AT ——, ME.,
September 29, 1870.

SIR—I hasten to reply to your letter of inquiry herewith, by request, returned. My clerk wanted on Mr. B while I was out; received—enclosed as he supposed—addressed and registered the deed. The registered package I sealed, without examining the contents, just before the mail left.

Yesterday, while looking in the drawer where we keep our envelopes and stationery, I found the deed and send it to-day.

My clerk is greatly surprised and annoyed, and can hardly understand how it can be when he was so sure he enclosed it. The probabilities are that on returning the envelopes which he had taken out to find an enclosure for it that also was returned.

With much chagrin, and with not a little joy that this mystery is solved, and with an increased confidence in the security and safety of the registry system, I am, very respectfully, ——, P. M.

J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent P. O. D., New York.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

The route to the North German Union direct being closed, so much of the following miscellany as relates thereto is inoperative.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to or from the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, when sent direct in closed mail via England, are also chargeable with a fine on delivery in addition to the postage. In the case of letters arriving in the United States the fine is five cents. In both cases the amount is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to and from the North German Union (including Austria and Luxemburg) are chargeable with double the rate stated in the table, credit being allowed for any part prepayment.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Rettino and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, to Italy and the Roman or Papal States, and to Middle and Lower Egypt, via North German Union, direct, or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

Until January 1, 1870, letters could be registered, on payment of certain special postage rates, to France, Algeria, Corsica, Bourbon, Nice and Savoy; also to Alexandretta, Tangiers and Tunis. This, however, cannot be done at present. The registration fee on letters, etc., to all foreign countries to which registration is practicable will be found noted in the Table of Postages to Foreign Countries. On such letters, etc., only the postage rates as given in the table need be prepaid, in addition to the registration fee.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

The rates of paragraph 4 are also in full to destination except for the deficient postage and fine, in cases of insufficient prepayment. But the postage on all printed matter to or from FRANCE AND ALGERIA must, in all cases, be collected here.

Double Index Post-Office Book.

A few extracts are given from letters received from postmasters who are using this system. They say

"EUREKA."

"It is a good thing."
"It is just what postmasters need."
"I am very much pleased with it."
"The 'Double Index' beats the world."
"It is nearer perfect than any work I have ever seen."
"It is a good thing."
"Every P. M. should have it."
"It is a tale sing to postmasters."
"I find it just the thing I want."
"It is the only thing for post-office accounts worth a cent."
"We cannot praise it too highly."
"I certainly think you have hit it."
"It is a perfect marvel of simplicity and usefulness."
"It is the best I ever saw."
"I would not sell my copy for three times its cost."
"I have found it just and sm satisfied."
"You have hit the nail a nack on the head."
"It is a better and more valuable work than I imagined from the circular."
"A man cannot form any idea of its value from the circular."
"You have got it complete in every respect."
"It is the simplest and easiest kept book that could be used."
"I would not take $5 0 now and keep my accounts without it."
"It is just the thing."
"Am perfectly delighted with its usefulness."
"The more it is used the better it will be liked."
"It is worth its cost every year."
"I never found anything to compare with your book."
"It is worth its price every quarter."
"I pronounce it one of the best things ent."
"I astonishing low price places it within the reach of all."
"Your head is level on the P. O. account-book question."
"Your book works like a charm."

Such testimony from postmasters who are using the work is peculiarly gratifying. For several months past the inventor has been sending out large numbers of books to postmasters who have ordered the work on trial. One week is given in which to examine it, and if not satisfactory the price is refunded. Not a single book has been returned or a single complaint from any postmaster in the United States, but on the contrary all unite in its praise.

Price $5, postage 40 cents; total $5 40

LOCK-BOX FRONT.

The front consists of a cast-brass frame and door, hinged together; the frame arranged for riveting to the wood work of the boxes, and the door containing glass in its lower part and a

Yale Patent Flat-Key-Spring-Lock

above; the whole presenting a handsome and ornamental appearance, and unequalled for simplicity security, and convenience of Key.

In furnishing sets of these Lock-Boxes, we guarantee that none of the keys of different boxes shall interchange.

" No. 2, " 2¾ by 4½ in 2 25

The cut above shows the No 2 box in use.

Each lock is furnished with three keys. When desired, a tin box of white nine eighths inches deep from front to back, varnished with the front attached complete and ready for use except numbering will be furnished at an additional charge of 25c. per box.

Nests of 100 boxes (10 high by 10 wide) constantly on hand ready for shipment.

DESCRIPTIVE CIRCULARS containing two photographs of the Lock-Boxes, sent on application; and where Postmasters contemplate ordering, a sample box will be sent for their inspection.

We append a list of most offices where these boxes are already in use and may state that we are beginning to receive orders for them from all parts of the country.

They have in some cases been paid for by the U. S. Government, but usually by the Postmasters; and we have yet to learn of a case in which they have not been universally liked and readily rented, at an increased charge of from two to four dollars per annum.

Postmasters can reimburse themselves in great part by selling the locks and keys to the persons renting the boxes; in some cases two or three dollars per box have been realized.

VOL. XI., NO. 2. NEW YORK, NOVEMBER, 1870. WHOLE NO. 122.

ISM CENTRE, OCTOBER, 1870.

My last letter was closed in peace and harmony with everybody in and about Clambank; but as no one knows what a day may bring forth, little did I anticipate what was in store for our isolated community. And this is how it came about. Our pastor, Mr. Moddle, is a good and devout man; he is not under large pay, and preaches to his flock all the year round—shady and sunshiny, wet or dry, hot or cold—and has never asked for a week's leave of absence or an increase of salary. The head of an interesting family, consisting of a wife and thirteen children—a moiety of which are twins—he is supremely happy in his domestic relations, and no step has more elasticity in it, and no countenance beams with more paternal pride than that of our esteemed minister, as he promenades churchward on the Sabbath, followed by his shiny-faced, tidy-looking and, numerically, strong household. But the good man has his hobby, and his hobby is the early destruction of the sphere upon which we dwell; and, in season and out of season, he constantly proclaims the close approach of the end of the world. Comets are, to his mind, infallible precursors; shooting stars positive indications; hurricanes natural adjuncts, and epidemics of every description mile stones near the end of temporal time. The recent Aurora-borealistic display supplied fresh ammunition for his mental artillery; and the subsequent earthquake-throb, that vibrated across the Cootinent, furnished such powerful proof to sustain his predictions, that he set all Clambank agog with excitement and dismay. The inhabitants were afraid to go to bed, and the supply of dip-candles was nearly exhausted; work was suspended on the road, bridge, schoolhouse and pickled-clam factory, and the entire population spent their whole time in inquiring of each other what they should do to be saved? In fact, such a reign of terror was inaugurated by our pastor, that all social enjoyment was destroyed; and when he further announced that a tidal wave was following close on the heels of a near-at-hand final subterranean convulsion, which would wash away the last vestige of creation, the panic was perfect, and every one that was able fled in affright from our thriving young village. I confess to a little nervousness myself, but I summoned all my courage, and would have lived bravely through the "horrors of the time," but Jane Mary—strong-minded woman as she is—was not proof against the prognostications of our spiritual file-leader, and begged me to flee from the wrath to come, and although she disliked to leave the Moddle family circle behind, she assured me she would go with me. I mildly remonstrated with her upon the fallacy of Mr. Moddle's prophecies, but the more I essayed to convince her on this point, the more urgent she became for both of us to seek sanctuary elsewhere, and it finally resulted in "packing our traps," taking an affectionate leave of our pastor and such of our neighbors as remained behind, and our departure from the sea-girt, shell-covered suburbs of Clambank, to return when? perhaps no more forever. Our postmaster was deeply grieved at my going, for he looked forward to the soon time when Clambank would become a maritime city, when direct mail communication would be had with foreign lands, when he, as a public functionary, would take a high position among his postal brethren, and when he could draw a big salary, and be absent from his office as often and as long as he pleased—while others performed his duties in a manner most convenient to themselves.

He made me promise to be on hand when the suspicions period arrives, and I did promise, but with a mental reservation. And just here I would remark that Ptolemy Samuel, after all, turned out to be a pretty good postmaster, and, in my estimation, far above the average of his class of officials. He would scorn to desecrate the service by keeping his office in a bar-room reeking with the fumes of rum and tobacco, where people of refined sensibilities are obliged to call for letters: and he would, peaceably, if he could, and forcibly, if he must, prevent unauthorized persons from meddling with mail matter, until it was delivered to them in due form. A little experience taught him that Gushweak was a humbug and his style of tactics contemptible, and to-day he is as fine a specimen of official efficiency and dignity as is to be found anywhere. He is progressive, and does not stop to question the merit or success of any measure suggested by the Department, but, relying implicitly upon the good judgment which originates and elaborates plans and projects for amplifying and simplifying the mail service so as to render it adequate to the necessities and wishes of the public at large he bends his energies to assist in any way in accomplishing that end, without stopping to ask questions or venture opinions, as too many do who have been longer in the service, but without knowing as much as he does. Long may he wave!

When we left the Bank, we—that is, Jane Mary and myself—concluded to pay a flying visit to this interesting and enterprising town; and a ride over nine different railways, involving nine changes of cars, brought us here. And here we are. She would not permit me to bring my fishing paraphernalia with me—and it is well I did not, for there is not a tubfull of running water within ten miles of the place. I brought my Springfield rifle with me, however, but it has not been used for so long that I am fearful it will burst on the first discharge. I will, therefore, have to use strategy to get rid of the ancient contents.

A portion of our route lay through one of the most romantic valleys in the Empire State, and which for variety of landscape and beauty of scenery cannot be excelled in the world. This part of our journey was performed in an open vehicle yclept a "mail stage," and from which we had an unobstructed view in every direction. Our road wound along the margin of the bed of a river, now shrunken almost to a rivulet, owing to the prevailing drought, and the windings of the narrow stream could be seen for miles before us, in loops, and angles, and semicircles, looking for all the world like a silvered ribbon carelessly stretched out along its centre. Broad, bright meadows run prone to the base of the hills on either hand, whose sides, far up, showed skilful culture, and were crowned all along with every variety of forest trees, in their most beautiful and variegated autumnal attire, not one of which displayed indications of having commenced its yearly unrobing. The sky was clear as crystal, the air as mild and balmy as May-time, and our spirits, partaking of the surroundings, were as buoyant as unlimited delight could make them. Jane Mary was in ecstacies, and an ineffable exhilaration thrilled me with the most delicious sensations. Our enjoyment was slightly marred by the afflictions of two fellow-passengers, one of whom was as deaf as a post, and had to be spoken to through an ear-trumpet, and the other suffered from an impediment in his speech of the most agonizing kind. These two gentlemen, both well advanced in years and genteel in appearance, occupied the same seat, and their efforts to communicate with each other was the most patience-trying and severe labor I ever witnessed. The deaf gentleman was exceedingly garrulous, and his neighbor, in his anxiety to keep even with him, made such fearful havoc of his words, and subjected his face to such horrible grimaces and contortions that I expected every moment to see him swallow the ear-trompet and fall out of the wagon in a fit. This, of course, made me slightly nervous and so wrought on the risibles of Jane Mary that she could not refrain from immoderate laughter, and I was obliged to resort to deception, by pointing my finger at an imaginary ludicrous something away up in the hills, to allay the suspicions of our companions that they were the cause of her unseemly and ill-timed mirth.

Taken as a whole, however, this valley ride was full of pleasure, and we will always remember it with rapturous satisfaction.

We stopped at several post offices to change the mails as we passed along, and an opportunity was afforded me of observing the manner of performing the service by the officials at these sequestered institutions. Some of them were familiar with modern practice, and dispatched business in a praiseworthy manner; but the others were as antiquated as Continental currency, and might have passed muster in the days of Postmaster-General Benjamin Franklin, but they are evidently now far behind the age, and are neither useful nor ornamental. Several of these offices were kept in lofts by the wayside, and two or three were in the bar-rooms, and, while we waited, the time of the tavern-keeping 'postmaster was divided between overhauling the mail and doling out apple-jack or bourbon-benzine to little clusters of customers, who had probably come there ostensibly for letters which they did not expect, but really to booze and loaf. An unsociable gentleman, who sat on the seat all the way with the driver, made it his business to whisper something to the keepers of these bar offices, and his words apparently created great surprise and consternation, and they invariably followed him to the vehicle after the bag was delivered to the driver, and in a few parting words, spoken just loud enough for me to hear, gave him assurances that something or other "wouldn't be done any more."

Now, my impression as a business man is, that a good deal of mischief is done at such places, and it is surprising that intelligent communities do not set their faces against such practices. Remote from cities and large towns, and off the direct line of postal communication, these shiftless officials adhere to obsolete and reprehensible customs, because they can continue them unrebuked, and because no one in their vicinity knows enough or cares enough to report their irregularities to the head of the Department at Washington. I had a shrewd suspicion that the man who rode with the driver was looking after these abuses, and just hinted the theory to Jane Mary. Her curiosity took fire in an instant, and she not only coincided with me, but she went further, and gave it as her unqualified opinion that "the man with the impediment in his speech was a detective, because he wore patent leather boots on his feet, a big seal ring on the fore finger of his left hand, a breast-pin made in the shape of a trowel in his shirt bosom, and a heavy gold-covered chain about his neck, and his stuttering was only make believe;' but I convinced her she was wrong when I assured her that no man living would risk bursting a blood-vessel, or dislocating his neck by exhausting at least three minutes in attempting to pronounce "beautiful"—as the individual in question had done, and making it a word of a hundred syllables instead of three—no matter how great a criminal he was trying to catch, or how big a reward he was endeavoring to secure.

In due season we arrived at the end of our journey—at least for the present—and I proceeded to the post office to get two money-orders cashed; but the postmaster was at home superintending the whitewashing of his garden fence, and his assistant had gone to an adjoining town to act as gate-keeper, pro tem., at a county fair; and as the head clerk, the only other individual authorized to dispense the funds, had stepped out, and it was half telling when he would return, I was politely requested by the next in authority to call next day, and as there was no other remedy, I was forced to wait. It put me to no inconvenience; but such a thing might cause a good deal of annoyance in case of emergency.

MONSIEUR TONSON.

POST OFFICE AT G—— P——, ILL., Sept. 14, 1870.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL:

Sir—Don't you think it would be a good thing for the Department to designate each office by a number, to be set in or across the cancel stamp—either by numbering the offices consecutively as "12,794," "574," etc., or large four figures for the State and smaller for office, as "34—392;" or, what I think would be still better, the State in letters and office in figures, as "Ill., 27;" "Wis., 198;" "W. Va., 27," etc.? Also, in the Post Office Directory, let the number be placed opposite the name of post office, etc.

It would be of use in case letters were not postmarked distinctly, or not at all, to tell where they were mailed; also in the Dead Letter Office, in returning letters to the writers. Where the post office is not furnished with a cancel stamp let the post office be designated by a number, which could be used in canceling stamps, with, doubtless, as good success as cross marks. Such letters and figures, or figures, could be fastened by a thumb screw into the cancel stamp, as the mouths, etc., now are in office stamps. It might be of a little expense, but I think in the long run it would be of more use than the cost. Each new office could be designated by a new number, and if re-established (after once numbered) by the old number. I find that the cancel stamp is more apt to be plain than the postmark stamp.

Also, I would advise all postmasters who are not foreigned office and cancel stamps combined to attach a cancel stamp by boring a small hole in the end of a stick, putting a piece of cork in it, and fasten it to the office stamp by some wire. I have done so, and I find I never miss canceling my stamps when postmarking (as I find lots of postmasters do), and save nearly half the work.

Respectfully, C. E. S.

There would be many advantages in having post offices numbered as our correspondent suggests, but we do not think the plan would secure the principal feature claimed by him. The figures would be as apt to be illegible as the postmark, for illegibility is caused by the postmarking stamp becoming dirty, and the letters choked up. Keep the stamp clean, use good printers' ink, thinly spread on a buckskin cushion, and postmarks will invariably be clear and legible.

EDITOR UNITED STATES MAIL:

Sir—I see that many postmasters make suggestions through the MAIL as well as ask questions. One in your last, in regard to keeping record of registered letters sent, I thought sensible. I have often thought to myself that the record of registered letters received and registered letters delivered might be kept on one page, for the entry is of letters received, and when receipted for also shows delivery of the same. This would answer in all offices except distributing offices. In another thing no doubt there is great irregularity in practice—I know there has been in my own—in entering in the record of registered letters received under "name of the office from whence they were received." Is it to be understood from the office where mailed, or from the distributing office where the bill comes from? The latter I have presumed to be correct. If so, should all the numbers, or the number only of the letter, be entered?

P. S. J., P. M.

The record of registered letters received and registered letters sent might very well be kept on one page in smaller offices where comparatively but few such are received or sent. But it would save nothing in larger offices, while it would, in some respects, be an inconvenience. For the sake of uniformity, we cannot, therefore, think the change desirable.

The original number of the letter should be entered, with the name of the office from which the bill was received. It is, however, advisable to enter the number from the distributing offices also.

D——, VA

EDITOR UNITED STATES MAIL:

Sir—I have a suggestion to make relative to a matter I have never seen noticed in the MAIL. It is, to do away with "letter bills" entirely. Let every postmaster be supplied with a book ruled similar to them, upon which he is to enter all letters received which are short of postage (either stamped due or not).

I believe this arrangement would do away with the inconvenience of sending bills, half of which do not reach their destination.

It would insure a better collection of the postages due, and relieve the account current of its most cumbersome voucher.

I believe my experience will be corroborated by the majority of postmasters in the country, which is, that one-half of the letters marked "due" reach their destination without bills, and that more letters come undercharged and without sufficient postage, and without bill, than come with bill.

Very truly, A. M. W., P. M.

The Government Suffers Loss.

I have found more difficulty in keeping my record of papers passing through the office and getting what is due to the Government than in all other duties put together. My experience in this part of my work satisfies me that many papers pass through the Post Office that are not paid for, even when the closest attention is paid to this part of the work.

Let us take a glance at the practical working of the present plan. Here comes a package of papers marked Muscatine, Iowa. We open it and find it new, say the 'Chicago Courier," a monthly. It is addressed to A, B, C, etc. What shall we do? If we mark it, "Due 2 or 3 cents," as the case may be, and put it in the boxes or the delivery, we may in haste hand it out and not notice the "Due" on it. If we enter it as a regular paper, we may have to scratch off three-quarters of these names as they have been only sent as specimens. If we keep the papers and put notices in the boxes, often these notices are taken out and not presented, and the papers accumulate.

Again, here is a package that has been coming and there is nothing about it that indicates that there is more than the usual number. But it is opened and distributed and there may be two or three or more in it than heretofore, but, in haste to get things to their places, they are not noticed. Clubs are constantly increasing or diminishing, and specimen copies come so much like those that are regular that it is difficult to detect them. What can be done to stop this leak, to obviate this difficulty? Not knowing just what to do, I have assigned the duty of separating all the papers that come to the office to one of the clerks, so that he may become familiar with every name, and he is expected to throw out every paper that he thinks may be new, till we see whether it is booked or not.

Again, many persons in settling their bills say that their papers are not coming any longer, and we scratch them off, but they continue to come and we must re-enter them. I have thought that a cure for all this would be found in the prepayment of everything that goes into the mail. But as we cannot have that, can you or some of your correspondents suggest some plan by which we can save the Department from loss and make the work easier for the postmaster?

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Readjustment of Salaries.—R. T. T. W., S——, Pa.—We refer to an article on salaries on the first page of the MAIL for June last.

Franking by Agricultural Colleges.—J. L. S. A——, Mass.—Agricultural colleges have not the right to frank documents to each other.

Unclaimed Return Letters.—T. B., D—— M——, Cal.—Unclaimed Return Letters should be sent to the Dead Letter Office at the expiration of about thirty days.

Auditors of States.—G. W. H., F——, C. H.—Mail matter cannot be sent free to the Auditors of the several States, but it may to the Auditors of the United States.

Regular Paper Weighing over Four Ounces.—J. A. B., B——, Mich.—A regular weekly newspaper, weighing over four ounces, should be charged ten cents a quarter. (Sec. 201, Reg. 1866.)

Eligibility for Postmastership.—D. C. C., L—— R——, N. Y.—Any citizen of the United States, capable of executing a bond and of taking the prescribed oath, is eligible for a postmastership.

Legal Tender.—W. W. F., C——, N. Y.—The law of legal tender applies to mail contractors as well as others, and they are not, any more than others, obliged to take more cent coins in payment than are a legal tender.

Writing on Newspapers.—M. A. C., K—— C——, O.—Writing on newspapers subjects them to letter postage, and it done with the intent that the papers shall be sent free of letter postage, a penalty of five dollars attaches to the sender. (Sec 316, Reg. 1866.)

Spoiled Envelopes.—W. A. W., W——, Ind.—The postage on envelopes spoiled in directing may be refunded in stamps by the postmaster at the place where the spoiling took place. Such envelopes, with a special letter, should be sent to the Third Assistant Postmaster General. (Sec. 189, Reg. 1866.)

Spoiled Postage Stamps.—J. K. V——, Pa.—If any portion of a parcel of stamps be damaged, the postmaster should sign a receipt for the whole amount of the parcel, and having written across the face of the receipt the number and amount of stamps or envelopes unfit for use, he will return the same, together with the receipt, to the Third Assistant Postmaster General. (Sec 165, Reg. 1866.)

Specimens as Samples, Etc.—J. F. H., O——, O.—1. The regulations respecting "samples" are somewhat uncertain. The general rule is, "dry flexible materials," the sample being of "no intrinsic value" except as a sample. There is a very wide field for discretion in taking samples, and postmasters must be their own judges. 2. Packages of seeds, to be rated at two cents for four ounces, should not be sealed against inspection.

Postage.—L. Z., S—— C—— R——, Pa.—All printed matter to pass through the mails at less than letter rates should be so wrapped that it can be examined without destroying the wrapper. (Sec. 216, Reg. 1866.) .... J. A. L., C——, O—Circulars, whether deposited by residents or by travelers, should be charged the regular rate, which for local delivery is one cent, unless the office is a free-delivery office, when the rate would be two cents.

Payment of Mail Messenger.—A. E. H., L——, N. C.—A Mail Messenger should not be employed without express authority from the Contract Office. (Sec. 471, Reg. 1868.) The account paid him should be entered in the General Account, not in the Account Current, and the receipt sent to the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post Office Department. For an increase of compensation, the Messenger should apply to the Contract Office.

Country Papers.—G. A. B., R——, N. Y.—A postmaster is obliged to receive for delivery free the weekly local papers, or papers published in the same town with his office. We call your especial attention and that of all postmasters to the provision that it is only weekly papers that should be thus delivered free.... M. L. B., G—— S——, O.—Editors of county papers can send only one copy free to each subscriber. All over one copy should be charged the required rates.

Salary.—J. W. B., W——, Wy.—You seem to have made a muddle of your accounts. Our advice is, that you should obtain from the Auditor a statement of your General Account, and then make such claims and alterations as you think you are entitled to; you will then have "a line" on which "to fight it out;" that is, a basis of settlement. Of course we have no means of telling you what will be allowed, or what rejected. Respecting your spoiled stamps, see above.

Penalty for Opening the Letters of Another.—A. H. D., D—— P——.—The penalty for any person opening a letter not addressed to him elf varies from a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars to imprisonment for ten years. (Sec. 309, Laws 1866.) One half the pecuniary penalty shall be for the use of the informer. (Sec. 318, Laws 1866.) The complaint should be made before a United States judge, or commissioner, if possible; if not possible, then before a justice of the peace. (Sec. 485, Reg. 1866.) And when a criminal is apprehended, the attorney for the United States for the district in which the offence was committed should be notified. (Sec 460, Reg.) But how is it that persons not sworn have access to a post office? It is a pity that one-half the penalties do not attach to postmasters thus guilty of such a violation of the regulations. (Secs. 24 and 496, Reg.)

Registration.—J. J. M., L—— Iowa.—Registered letter bills are necessary for all registered letters, whether sent direct or through a distributing office. (Sec. 10, Reg'n Reg.).... M. A. L., F—— G——, Ga.—"Large offices, such as New York," or any office supplied wholly or in part by route agents or postal clerks, send registered packages direct over routes in charge of route agents or postal clerks, in accordance with section 2, Registration Regulations.... J. S. H., E——, N. Y.—If registered letters do not pass through a distributing office in the course of their regular transmission, it is not necessary to send them out of the regular course that they may pass through such an office; but if the regular course is through a distributing post office, they should be sent there, although that office is geographically beyond the office of delivery. The regulations refer to the course letters are sent and not to the geographical position of places.

A Postal Convention has been concluded between the United States and the Colonial Government of New Zealand, establishing an exchange of correspondence between the two countries by means of the direct line of Colonial packets plying between San Francisco and New Zealand, as well as by such other means of direct mail steamship transportation as shall hereafter be established with the approval of the respective Post Office Departments of the two countries.

This Convention will be carried into operation on the 1st of December, 1870, and establishes an international letter postage of twelve cents (sixpence) per each single rate of half an ounce or fraction thereof, the prepayment of which is compulsory, and the letters so prepaid in one country are to be delivered free of all charges whatsoever in the other. Letters posted unpaid or prepaid any amount less than one full single rate of postage cannot be forwarded, but insufficiently paid letters on which a single rate or more has been prepaid will be forwarded, charged with the deficient postage, for collection on delivery.

Each country is to collect its own postage only on printed matter of all kinds, whether sent or received, at the following rates, viz.:

The United States postage on newspapers is fixed at two cents each, and on all other articles of printed matter four cents for each weight of four ounces or fraction thereof, whether sent or received.

The New Zealand postage on newspapers and other articles of printed matter sent to or received from the United States is the same as charged for domestic postage by the laws and regulations of that Colony.

Provision is made for the transit through the United States, as well as the conveyance by United States mail packets, of the correspondence to closed mails, which the New Zealand Post Office may desire to transmit via the United States to British Columbia, the British North American Provinces, the West Indies, Mexico, Central and South America; and it is also provided that prepaid letters from foreign countries, received in and forwarded from the United States to New Zealand, shall be delivered in said Colony free of all charges whatsoever, and that letters received in New Zealand from the United States, addressed to New South Wales or Australia, will be forwarded to destination, subject to the same conditions as are applicable to correspondence originating in New Zealand, and addressed to these Colonies.

New York, Boston and San Francisco are the offices of exchange on the side of the United States for all mails forwarded to or received from New Zealand, under the provisions of this Convention.

The mail packets of the Colonial line plying between San Francisco and New Zealand make their departures regularly from San Francisco on the 10th of each month.

By order of the Postmaster General.
JOSEPH H BLACKFAN,
Superintendent.

A Postal Convention establishing and regulating the exchange of correspondence between the United States and the Republic of Salvador has been concluded, and will be carried into immediate operation. It provides for a regular exchange of correspondence between the two countries by the ordinary routes of communication via the Isthmus of Panama, comprising letters, newspapers and printed matter of every kind originating in either country, and addressed to and deliverable in the other.

The rates of postage hereafter to be levied and collected in the United States on the correspondence posted in this country and addressed to the Republic of Salvador, or posted in that country and received in the United States, are as follows, viz.:

1. On letters, ten cents for each single rate of half an ounce or under.

2. On newspapers and unsealed circulars, two cents each.

3. And on pamphlets, periodicals, books and other kinds of printed papers, one cent for each ounce or fraction of an ounce.

It is to be particularly observed that the above postage charges on correspondence of all classes must be fully prepaid at the mailing offices on matter sent, and collected at the office of delivery on matter received. Any correspondence, therefore, posted unpaid, or insufficiently paid, cannot be forwarded.

These rates are not in full to destination, the Republic of Salvador levying and collecting a postage charge on each article of correspondence, whether sent to or received from the United States.

The offices of exchange on the side of the United States are New York and San Francisco.

Postmasters will levy and collect postage on and after this date.

The Foreign Postage Table.

Several very important changes have been made in our Foreign Postage Table for this month.

The route to the North German Union direct having been re-opened, the rates by that route have been inserted in the table.

The reduced rates on book packets and patterns to England, and on book packets to North German Union have necessitated a change of rates to places to which these countries serve as intermediaries. These new rates will be found in a supplemental table in the third column of the Postage Table, reference being made to them in the main table by the letters A, B, C, etc. Where only one route is mentioned in the main table, the corresponding route only should be used in the supplemental table.

The rates to Brazil direct, and to Spain and Gibraltar, and the Balearic Isles, have also been inserted, in accordance with the official letters, in last month's MAIL; but, in consequence of the peculiarity of the standard weights and mode of rating, it was found to be impracticable to insert these rates in the main table, they will therefore be found in the supplemental table, under the proper reference letters.

Rates to Salvador have also been inserted.

In connection herewith, we must urge upon postmasters and others using the postal table, the necessity of understanding its construction, and of particular attention to the notes and information connected with it, and on which a large part of its utility depends. It not infrequently happens that mail matter seemingly correctly rated according to the table, is returned for insufficient postage, because a note or reference has been overlooked or neglected.

Circular "46."

Circular 46, or the Tracer, as it is generally called, for registered letters, scarcely receives fair play at the hands of some postmasters and postal clerks. The very language of the circular shows that it should be "kept moving" till it reaches the hands of the postmaster at the office which is the destination of the registered letter, to find which the tracer has been sent out. In many instances, however, the tracer is stopped in its mission, and returned to the postmaster or Special Agent who sent it, because, forsooth, some official into whose hands it has come, knows that the letter has been received at the office of destination, but he does not know what disposition has been made of it, which is probably the very thing that the sender desires to know.

Some two months since a report was made to a Special Agent that a certain registered letter had not been received by the person addressed. The writer of the letter felt the disappointment the more keenly because he had been told by his friends not to register, as "it only showed the post-office clerks the letter was valuable"—a very silly argument, by the way, and now on the disappearance of the letter, the "I told you so's" were far from agreeable. The Special Agent looked at the case, and saw at once it was probable the letter had been sent to the wrong office, as it bore the name of two offices in different counties, and that it was lying unclaimed. He sent out circular 46. It reached a certain D. P O., and instead of being forwarded as directed, was returned because the postmaster had received the return registered bill, indorsed correct. This officious assumption on the part of the said postmaster necessitated not only the writing of another letter, but involved several days' time, during which the letter was sent to the Dead Letter Office. In another instance a package of stamps was reported as missing. The Special Agent sent out circular 46. It was returned with the final endorsement "O. K.," which was very satisfactory in one view of the case, but certainly did not enlighten the Special Agent as to whose carelessness was to be attributed the detention of the stamps which led to their being reported "not received."

We say to all postmasters, postal clerks and route agents, reply to the tracer, according to its terms: what you know may not be what the sender wants to know, and by turning the tracer back on its course before the proper time, you may involve delay and trouble, which could readily be avoided.

Sundry Post Office Matters.

We take up, first, two letters, called forth by our article in last month's paper, "Is it Fair play?" the writers of which confirm our position that all mail depredations and detentions are not committed by officers of the Department, but that in an equal number of cases they are due to the criminality or the carelessness of many who merely use the mails as a medium of transmission. It is a good thing to be rapid and off-hand in the dispatch of business, but it is a poor thing to sacrifice accuracy to rapidity, and in no case more so than in preparing matter for the mails. The man who, just as the mail is closing, dashes off a hurried note, purporting to inclose in it a certain amount of money, which he does not inclose, thrusts his note into an envelope, scratches something on the face of the latter, the meaning of which he knows, but which it is impossible for another to discover, probably intending, too, to put on a stamp, and certainly neglecting to do it, and then, in a few days, because his so-called letter has not been received, judges or *mis*judges all the employees of the Post Office Department to be thieves, can scarcely be entitled to the genuine "growl" to which he treats himself, or to the sympathy of the officials whose duty it is to forward mail matter Nor should the publisher who theoretically wraps a number of wet papers in a wrapper of a tissue-like character, and scratches on the package something for an address, be very much astonished if, after his papers become dry, they should slip from the wrapper, or that the wrapper itself should refuse to do the severe duty required of it, and, in parting itself, part company with the papers it was designed to protect, he too ready to thrust into his columns a charge against the post officials. It is not an unusual thing, on emptying a mail pouch, to find fifty or a hundred loose papers and two or three dilapidated wrappers. So, we say, take time to address your mail matter legibly, put it up securely. . . . Our next letter puts the "boot on the other foot," and so we graciously acknowledge, what we have above indirectly admitted, that some of the mail depredations and detentions can be attributed to post officials, for our correspondent complains that while some two or three numbers of his UNITED STATES MAIL failed entirely to reach him, No. 120 was received several days after due, and he "could plainly see that it had been opened and detained." Our correspondent offers to send one dollar to the postmaster guilty of the detention, to enable him to subscribe to the paper for himself. It is a generous offer, but who is entitled to it? We propose that all postmasters and other officials who make unwarranted use of the UNITED STATES MAIL passing through their hands, shall send us their names and addresses; probably we may be able to pick out the individual entitled to the dollar. If not, we will, at least, know who it entitled to the penalty for opening and detaining a newspaper, Section 316, Laws of 1866.) . . . Our next contains a valuable hint to our subscribers. The writer says: "I keep an alphabetical index, in which I always note your hints, instructions, etc., upon the particular subject in question. Count me a subscriber as long as I have charge of the mail bags." . . . Our next is a general complimentary letter, but contains the specific inquiry, if postmasters have the right to open newspapers to examine their contents? Notwithstanding the "opinion that prevails" in some communities that postmasters have no such right, it will be found that they have, provided the examination can be made without destroying the wrapper. Sections 212 and 213, Regulations of 1866, are clear on this point. See, also, section 256, Laws.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to or from the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, when sent direct in closed mail via England, are also chargeable with a fine on delivery in addition to the postage. In the case of letters arriving in the United States the fine is five cents. In both cases the amount is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery. U paid and insufficiently paid letters to and from the North German Union (including Austria and Luxemburg) are chargeable with double the rate stated in the table, credit being allowed for any part prepayment.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered to the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mersina, Rethimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, to Italy and the Roman or Papal States, and to Middle and Lower Egypt, via North German Union, direct, or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

Until January 1, 1870, letters could be registered, on payment of certain special postage rates, to France, Algeria, Corsica, Bourbon, Nice and Savoy; also to Alexandretta, Tangiers and Tunis. This, however, cannot be done at present. The registration fee on letters, etc., to all foreign countries to which registration is practicable will be found noted in the Table of Postages to Foreign Countries. On such letters, etc., only the postage rates as given in the table need be prepaid, in addition to the registration fee.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

RATES OF POSTAGE ON PRINTED MATTER FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

Book packets (including printed papers of all kinds, maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, etc.), and patterns or samples, 6 cents per four ounces or fraction of four ounces, if four ounces or over in weight. For rates on less than four ounces see Foreign Postage Table. *The above charges must be fully prepaid at the office of mailing, by means of U. 4. TO OR FROM ITALY AND SWITZERLAND, BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS, BY CLOSED MAIL, VIA ENGLAND.—The rates and conditions on newspapers, book-packets, prints of all kinds, and patterns or samples, are the same as the above (paragraph 3), except that if the postage on any article shall be insufficiently prepaid, it will be, nevertheless, forwarded to its destination, charged with the deficient postage, and also subject to a fine on delivery.

5. TO OR FROM THE NORTH GERMAN UNION (INCLUDING ALL THE GERMAN STATES AND AUSTRIA), BY DIRECT MAIL VIA BREMEN OR HAMBURG—Newspapers, if not over 4 ounces of weight, 3 cents each, and if over 4 ounces an additional 3 cents for each additional weight of 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment required. The rates of paragraph 4 are also in full to destination except for the deficient postage and fine, in cases of insufficient prepayment. But the postage on all printed matter to or from FRANCE AND ALGERIA must, in all cases, be collected here.

REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

To the Bahame Islands, (which consist of Great and Little Abaco, Andros, Crooked Islands, Eleuthera, Great Baheme, Great Exuma, Great and Little Inague, Long Island, Mariguana, New Providence, Providenciales, San Salvador and Watling Islands), the postage on letters is three cents per half ounce, (to be prepaid on letters sent, and collected on letters received)—on newspapers, 2 cents each; on book packets, 4 cents per four ounces. The mails for the Bahamas leave New York once a month by direct steamer to Nassau. See Table of Dates of Departure of Foreign Mails.

To the following Islands the postage on letters, via Havana or St. Thomas, is 18 cents per half ounce; on newspapers, 4 cents each:

Coche,	Hayti,	Porto Rico,
Cuagua,	Los Saintes,	Saba,
Culebra,	Margarita,	St. Bartholomew,
Curacoe,	Marie Galsnts,	St. Martin,
Deseado,	Martinique	Tortuga.

A direct mail for Hayti, San Domingo, Samana and Port-au-Plate, leaves New York via American packet in the early part (1st to 10th) of each month. Postage, ten cents per half ounce on letters, and domestic rates on newspapers and book-packets. Prepayment both on letters and other matter compulsory.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The rate of postage on mail letters to any part of the United States is three cents a half ounce or fraction thereof. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent. All drop as well as mail letters must be prepaid.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and other invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All communications on official business, of whatever origin, addressed to heads of the executive departments of government, or heads of bureaus therein, or to chief clerks of departments, shall be received and conveyed by mail free of postage without being franked or indorsed "Official Business."

By a joint Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Adjutants General of the several States and Territories, are authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, any medals, certificates of thanks or other testimonials, awarded, or which may be awarded by the Legislatures of said States and Territories, to the soldiers thereof, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may direct.

Section 123, Regulations 1866, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as a personal privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weight of four ounces. Mail matter to those possessing the privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertains to official business. Section 124 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides these, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenue officers, also, besides those mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may only frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No communication, official or otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can be sent free.

The Act of March 1, 1869, relating to franking, makes no change in the privilege, but merely enacts that the signature of the franking party must be written, and not printed.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

K.—The following are the rates of postage to Spain, Gibraltar, the Canary and Balearic Isles, via Belgium:

On Letters for Spain (except Gibraltar) and her possessions, including the Canaries and Balearic Isles, when not exceeding 1-3 ounce, 16 cents; exceeding 1-3 but not over ½ ounce, 22 cents; over ½ but not exceeding 2-3 ounce, 32 cents; over 2-3 but not exceeding 1 ounce, 38 cents, and the same charges and progression for each succeeding ounce or fraction thereof; prepayment optional.

On Letters for Gibraltar, of 1-3 ounce or under, 13 cents; not over 1-3 but not exceeding ½ ounce, 26 cents; exceeding ½ but not over 2-3 ounce, 36 cents; over 2-3 but not exceeding 1 ounce 44 cents, and the like charges for each additional ounce or specified part thereof prepayment optional.

The postages chargeable on printed matter and samples by this route are the same for Gibraltar as for Spain and her possessions, and are as follows, viz.:

On newspapers not exceeding 1 1-3 ounce, 6 cents; over that weight, but not exceeding 2 2-3 ounces, 8 cents; over that weight but not exceeding 4 ounces, 10 cents and the like charges and rate of progression for each additional 4 ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment compulsory.

Book packets not exceeding 1 1-3 ounce, 10 cents; exceeding that weight but not exceeding 2 2-3 ounces, 12 cents; exceeding that weight but not over 4 ounces, 14 cents, and the like charges and rate of progression for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof; prepayment compulsory.

Samples of merchandise, 14 cents per each 4 ounces or fraction of 4 ounces; prepayment compulsory.

Under this convention between Belgium and Spain, a supplementary register fee of 4 cents is established, limited, however, to the correspondence for Gibraltar, which, added to the international fee of 8 cents, makes the combined register fee to Gibraltar, via Belgium, 12 cents.

L.—The following are the rates of postage on newspapers and other printed matter to Brazil, via American packet, prepayment compulsory: Newspapers, 2 cents for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, and one cent in addition for each newspaper; OTHER PRINTED MATTER (except books and circulars) 2 cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof, and in addition one cent for each ounce; BOOKS, 4 cents per 4 ounces or fraction thereof, and in addition one cent for each ounce; CIRCULARS, 2 cents for three or any less number, and in addition one cent for each ounce. The regular domestic rates will be charged on delivery on all newspapers and other printed matter arriving here from Brazil by this route.

a.—When the letter a is prefixed, the foreign postage (which in each case is 12 cents) is increased by an additional rate for every 7½ grammes (¼ oz.) or fraction thereof. The United States inland and Atlantic sea postage (which in each case is 4 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (½ oz.) or fraction thereof.

b.—Where the letter b is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case is ascertained by deducting from the amount set down the sum of 2 cents, which is the United States portion of the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases the postage is for each newspaper without regard to its weight when sent in British mail.

The book and pattern post to Egypt via British mail extends only to Alexandria, Cairo and Suez.

d.—Registration to Egypt by British mail extends to Alexandria, Cairo and Suez only.

c.—In consequence of the non-existence at present of any postal convention between the United States and French Post Departments, no rates "by French mail" can be inserted in the table, and postmasters will cease to charge the rates formerly published as chargeable on matter sent by that route.

p.—The charge on Newspapers to Belgium, The Netherlands the North German Union, or via the North German Union to countries beyond, and to Italy and Switzerland, increases a single rate for every four ounces of weight.

g.—Cannot be sent.

h.—Letters only can be registered.

i.—See "Registration to Foreign Countries," inside page.

k.—Transient pamphlets, magazines and periodicals two cents per four ounces. Domestic rates are chargeable to and from the line on all mail matter, except letters, to or from British North American Provinces.

l—Letters, if unpaid, or insufficiently paid, are subject to a fine on delivery, in addition to the deficient postage. Other matter insufficiently paid is also forwarded (but not if wholly unpaid), subject to a similar fine, when addressed to Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, or Italy; but no other matter than letters will be forwarded to Great Britain, Ireland, or North German Union, or if intended to be sent via the North German Union, unless fully prepaid.

UNITED STATES MAIL
AND
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. XI., NO. 3. NEW YORK, DECEMBER, 1870. WHOLE NO. 123.

The Postmaster General's Report.

As the majority of our readers have already seen the annual report of Postmaster-General Creswell, we do not think it necessary to publish more than the few extracts from it which follow. The financial exhibit is especially gratifying, and the entire report has deservedly received the hearty commendations of the press and the public for its clearness of statement, and the judicial and practical nature of the suggestions which it contains:

RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES.

The ordinary revenues of this Department for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1870, were $19,772,220 65, and the expenditures of all kinds, $23,998,837 63. For the year ended June 30, 1869 the ordinary revenues were $18,344,510 72, and the expenditures, $23,698,-131 50. The increase of revenue for the year 1870 over the year 1869 was $1,427 709 93, or 7.78 per cent, and the increase of expenditures, $300,706 13, or 1.32 per cent, showing a net increase in revenue of $1,127,003 80. The increase in revenue for the year 1870 over the year 1868 was $3,479,619 85, 21 35 per cent, and the increase of expenditures for 1870 over 1868 was $1 268,244 98, or 5.57 per cent. The increase in revenue for 1870 as compared with 1869, was less than the increase for 1869 as compared with 1868, by $624 199 99; and the increase in expenditures for 1870 compared with 1868, by $666,83: 72.

If, in addition to the ordinary revenues, the Department be credited with $700,000, appropriated for free matter and the amounts drawn and expended for subsidies to steamship lines, it will appear that the deficiency provided out of the general Treasury for the year 1870 is $2,814,116 98, as against $3,970,-287 45 for the year 1869.

THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

In my annual report of December 1869, and in my letter dated February 26, 1870, addressed to the Hon. Schuyler Colfax, in reply to two resolutions of the Senate asking for information, I had the honor to present my views at length concerning the franking privilege. In both these communications I argued against the longer continuance of that evil, and earnestly recommended its immediate and absolute repeal. My experience in the administration of the Post-Office Department for the past year has strengthened my convictions, and has induced me again to call the attention of Congress to the great abuses which have grown to be a part of the system, and to the uncompensated burdens which it imposes upon the service. I am thoroughly satisfied that if the franking privilege were repealed, and all matter passing through the mails charged with its fair share of postage, the Department would, in a short time, become self-sustaining. This assertion, when made heretofore, was warmly denied, and nothing was left but a resort to a demonstration by figures. As has been already stated, the deficiency for the last year has been reduced to $2,814,110 98. Accurate accounts of the cost of free matter dispatched through the mails were ordered to be kept by all Postmasters for the six months.

POSTAL MONEY-ORDER SYSTEM.

The number of money-order offices in operation during the last fiscal year was 1,694, of which nine were established May 2, 1870. On the 1st of August, 1870, 386 additional offices were created, and four offices were discontinued, so that the whole number now in operation is 2,076. Most of these new offices were established in the Western States, where the constant increase of population and material resources produces a corresponding demand for the facilities afforded by the money-order system for the safe and expeditious transfer through the mails of small sums of money.

At the four offices that were abolished, the amount of business transacted had become so small as to render their continuance unnecessary.

The number of domestic money orders issued during the year was 1,671,253, of which the aggregate value was $34,054,184 71.

The number paid was 1,675,328, amounting in value to	$33,655 : 10 27
To which is to be added the amount of orders repaid to the remitters, i.	[illegible] 81 52
Total payments	$33 827,921 79
Excess of issues over payments	$126,259 92

The amount of fees or commissions received by Postmasters from the public for the issue of orders was $235,235 80. During the year 1869 the aggregate amount of orders issued was $24,848,058 93; of orders paid and repaid, $24,654,123 46; and of fees received, $170,-190 90.

A comparison of these items with the corresponding transactions of the last year shows an increase during the year 1870 of $9,206,-125 78, or 30.0 per cent. in the amount of issues; of $9,273,801 33, or 37.6 per cent. in the amount of payments; and of $50,044 90, or 33.5 per cent. in the amount of fees.

CORRESPONDENCE CARDS.

My attention has been directed to the new system of "correspondence," or "post cards," lately adopted by North Germany and by Great Britain for facilitating letter correspondence, and already extensively used in those countries. These cards are made of good stiff paper, of convenient form and size. The front or face of the card is ruled for the insertion of the address, and bears the Post-office stamp. On the reverse side there is room for a short letter or message, which may be printed or written in pencil or ink. They require no folding or envelope, are specially adapted for circulars or short communications, and are furnished to the public at the value of the postage stamp impressed upon them, which is in Great Britain half a penny, being one-half the established inland letter rate of postage. The advantages claimed by their use consist in increased celerity and ease of business and social intercommunication, by dispensing with much of the ordinary epistolary form and appliances, and by having always at hand, ready for use at any moment—in the street, on a journey, or in places where pen, ink, paper and envelopes are not accessible or readily obtainable—the essentials for a letter. For many messages where the telegram is now used—such as orders, invitations, inquiries or other requirements of business or social life—these cards would be welcomed by the public as a simple, inexpensive and convenient means of intercourse. They would create a new postal business, augment the number of correspondents, and greatly multiply the occasions and opportunities for writing. The want has been long felt of some such prompt and easy mode of communication by mail, adapted to the convenience and habits of business men, as well as of that large class of persons who have not the time nor the inclination to write formal letters, and therefore seldom make use of the mails. Believing that the employment of these cards would be beneficial to the public, and result in a large increase of correspondence, I respectfully recommend that authority be given by law for their introduction into our postal service, at the rate of one cent each, including the cost of the card, as a first step toward a general reduction of our domestic letter postage.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

ISIM CENTRE, Nov. 1870.

I have always been a believer, to a great extent, in the doctrine of first impressions, and have a lively faith in the genuineness and durability of the love and esteem which spring into existence at sight; but I have been mistaken occasionally in the one hand, and on the other have seen sundry couples who were mated through unadulterated psychological influences, turn their backs on each other and march off in opposite directions to meet some other fate, some other fortune, or some other fellow. These, however, are rare exceptions, and do not affect the reliability of the general average, according to my figures. The greatest and latest mistake on my part, to which I plead guilty, was made in my hastily formed and freely expressed erroneous impression of "Isim Centre." Had the postmaster, or some subordinate been present to have paid my money orders, I probably would not have been so susceptible to prejudice, but the absence of these persons, and the apparent indifference to public accommodation and official requirements, prepared me to believe that the people who would quietly tolerate such remissness were not made of the kind of material to command the respect or admiration of strangers sojourning among them. I was not incommoded at all by waiting until next day, but that does not alter the case a particle. If I understand the matter, it is the business of the postmaster to be at his post at all times, or to see or know that each subordinate is promptly and constantly at his, so that no delay or annoyance, or inconvenience, or disappointment is inflicted upon those who, of all people upon earth, are justifiably anxious to be served speedily. And this alone might not have sent me to my bed on my first night in had humor; but to Jane Mary's question, "Are there any public lectures to-night?" a reply was returned by a dapper little fellow, with a Louis Napoleon mustasche, a Shakespeare collar and a very loud neck-tie, to this effect—"Lecturin' a play'd out up this way—nobody goes to 'em; what's name:—oh! you know who I mean, Mark Billins—no, Josh Twain—was up here last week and didn't take in enough to pay for gas—and you know they ere the pop'larist lecturers goin'; not any for Ism Centre—but if you want real amusement we can turn it out by the ton. The town's full of shows. There's 'the Alaska Minstrels,' 'the Georgia Warblers,' the 'Wee-Willy-Winkie sable Opera Troupe,' and a couple more burnt-cork exhibitions, the Bohemian Glass Blowers, the Swiss Bell Ringers, two circuses and a menagerie—any of these is better'n a lecture—for they don't take up much more time, and there's a heap more laugh to 'em." God bless me, thinks I to myself, when he was running over this catalogue, if these things secure paying patronage, what a taste, and what a waste of time and means it takes to supply it. I politely informed the young man (he was a distant relation of J. M.'s), after he had spoken his piece, that "we were averse to visiting such places; but we might change our minds and when we did we would let him know." This undesired information, and my post-office experience, thoroughly disgusted me, and I therefore formed an opinion of the locality, which was not sustained by subsequent discoveries. Between you and me, however, J. M. and myself gave free view to our opinions in the retiracy of our room; and if our animadversions had reached the public ear of Ism Centre I am sure that would have been an eventful night for us. We learned next day that Glewjoint (our informant of the night before) had spoken falsely, and that lectures by the brightest minds in the land were frequent, and that there were only two negro minstrel exhibitions in the place, and one or other of these played there every night in the year, so that the taste of the citizens was as refined as that of any town in the land. But, while I changed my opinion in regard to the people, it remains the same with regard to the public functionary, and his slipshod way of doing business. Even when the orders were paid, I thought it was done in a loose manner. Anybody else could have drawn the money as well as I; for a very weak effort was made to ascertain whether I was the right party or not. The M. O. system is a great national convenience, and if the necessary precaution is exercised by officials, its safety is ensured and its popularity beyond contingency.

As a general thing I think greater caution should be observed in the payment of these orders, and in the delivery of registered letters. In the latter case I have heard of mistakes occurring, which might have been avoided by following instructions as laid down in the books; but where such things happen I suppose those who committed the blunders were obliged to make good any loss resulting from their want of proper vigilance. Of course I do not know that such is the case, but it ought to be, if it is not.

I am glad to see that the public press is waking up to the fact that a great deal of the delay and irregularity in the mail service hitherto laid at the door of the Post-office Department, is attributable to the great railway thoroughfares, which radiate from our great cities These corporations have grown so powerful that they claim the right to do almost as they please, and to promote their purposes they carry the mails to suit their convenience, and if it be essential to their interest or convenience to delay them or throw them aside to make room for other freight or express stuff, they do it without remorse of conscience. By the diffusion of free passes they have hitherto managed to control public opinion on this subject by keeping the press quiet and by enlisting in their service prominent public men, by a gift of stock enough to entitle them to positions—the directorships. There is an effort now being made for a general consolidation of these monopolies for business purposes, and it will probably be accomplished. In this event the producing and commercial elements of the country will be entirely at their mercy, and the mighty combination will then feel powerful enough to dictate terms to the Government for doing its work. It will arrogate to itself the right to fix its price for carrying the mails, and exercise the privilege of saying how and when they shall be carried, and assume to control the management of this already well perfected system in which every human being is deeply interested. Luckily the cloven foot is disclosed prematurely, and the press has discovered it; and it is be hoped that such a stir will be made about it in all the journals of the nation that Congress will be forced to intervene and pass such laws as will effectually protect the mail service from the dangerous encroachments of these railway autocrats.

I may be in error, but it strikes me that it Congress has the power to declare the thoroughfares of the United States post roads, it has the power to declare that the mails of the United States shall be carried thereon, and take precedence of everything else. The question of compensation within certain defined limits should be left entirely with the Postmaster-General, whose facilities for ascertaining correctly the value of the service performed on the respective routes are almost illimitable. Let the compensation be liberal, but make the prompt and faithful performance of the service an imperative and paramount duty, and let such penalties attach to a refusal or failure to comply with the statutes as to wholly prevent such a contingency. Take away entirely from railway magnates the imperial authority of saying "we will" or "we will not" carry the mails, deprive them of all discretionary power in the premises, and let "we will" or "we will not" subside before the legal command, "you must," or suffer the consequence.

There is scarcely a railway in the land that did not find its most convincing arguments for its construction in the advantages in accruing to people along its lines from increased and speedy mail conveniences; and there are many roads in successful operation to-day that never would have been built had their local stock-takers imagined they were creating a power that could deprive them at pleasure of the greatest social and domestic advantages known to civilization. Let us have peace.

L—— L——,
C—— COUNTY, WIS.,
Nov. 2, 1870.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL:

Dear Sir—I have tried to do the duties of postmaster in this office for over eight years, and have been a subscriber to your valuable paper since 1863, and have received much benefit from its perusal in the way of instruction, but have never before troubled you with any communication.

But there is one thing I wish to suggest, which I think would be an improvement in the Post-Office business, viz.: To pass a law granting small packages, of five pounds weight or under, which are not now mailable matter, to pass through the mails at the rate of one cent. per ounce. The benefit of such a law would not be felt, perhaps, in the cities as much as it would in sparsely settled countries. For instance: I have been in trade on a small amount of capital; I wish to send to New York or Boston, Chicago or Milwaukee, for 100 fish-hooks or for one dozen pocket knives or five or six dozen pencils, or any other small package of Yankee notions. If I send by mail I must pay letter postage, and the postage amounts to more than the article costs; if I send by freight, the package is so small that more than likely it will be lost, or if not, the charges will be for 100 lbs., and in either case costs more than it is worth. If you wish to send by express, you would probably have to go thirty miles to an express office to get the goods, when the mail would bring them right to your own door, and bring them quicker than any other way they could be brought.

"If you ask: "Shall we make the Post-Office Department common carriers?" I reply, "Neither should they any more do a banking business." I hold that one is just as proper as the other, and both are extremely necessary. What is the Post-Office for, if not to accommodate the people; and, as the mail precedes all other conveyances into new and by-places, I think that would be an improvement which would add largely to the revenues of the Post-Office Department, and be a blessing to many of its patrons. Yours, truly,

L. D. H——, Postmaster.

W——, Nov. 1870.

Editor "United States Mail," New York:

When your correspondent from M——, Iowa, in your issue of November, says he has found more difficulty in keeping the record of papers delivered from his office, and getting what is due to the Government, than in all other duties put together, he says what every postmaster, without exception, most heartily endorses.

The instances correctly, and within the experience of us all, the grievous embarrassment occasioned by the unrestrained license practiced by publishers in mailing thousands of impelled copies of their publications daily, which, after an annoying investigation at the office of delivery, are ascertained to be merely specimens, and "not wanted," or are often and unavoidably given out in haste and the postage lost.

This license is presumed upon, in defiance law, but a law so utterly impracticable that it is a nullity.

A remedy is urgently demanded.

The department is bound to protect itself against this unscrupulous fraud, and to this end it should insist that an act be passed, simple but comprehensive, whose provisions can be easily complied with in the common routine of official duties.

Prepayment by stamps of proper denomination, whilst it would secure to the Government its exact dues, would entail such an amount of labor upon the publisher in affixing them, and also in, perhaps, a preponderance of cases entail upon him the expense of the postage itself; so that measure, even if adopted, would probably be abrogated by the combined power of the press before it had filled its first moon;

Prepayment at the mailing office by affidavit of gross number, would be not only irksome to an honest publisher in requiring him to estimate daily his edition to the exact number, and yet be just to himself, but would be equally as open to abuse among those of easy conscience as the present system.

Now, I will venture to propose a plan, very simple, eminently practicable, and equally as efficient for the purpose of revenue as prepayment by stamps—always supposing that all postmasters know how to treat "regular" printed matter.

Let Congress enact that publishers of any magazine, paper, or other publication whatever, intended to be issued at stated intervals to subscribers, shall have the word "subscribers," or its abbreviation "sub," printed on the wrapper, with the name of every such subscriber, and as unpaid printed matter deposited at any office not so marked shall be unmailable, and be treated as waste paper; and all such matter received at any office for delivery shall be treated as unpaid transient matter, and postage collected accordingly. Publishers can raise no objection to this, unless because it cuts off all possibility of continuing a gross violation of a law that they know to be wholly inoperative.

They have no stamps to affix, no list to revise, and when the names of subscribers are printed, no extra labor after the type is once set. The postmaster is relieved of all perplexity; he knows at first sight what disposition to make of the paper, and the Department is sure of the lawful revenue due for its services, for it will no longer be overworked without pay, by forced transportation of tons of printed matter, when the publisher knows absolutely that it will not be delivered.

This throws around the entire matter a positive and easy working protection.

Sundry Post-Office Matters.

The first letter we take up is anonymous, but we depart from our rule of not noticing anonymous letters, and reply to this one, because we want to ask the writer a question, and one which, no doubt, will pertain to other postmasters. The writer asks: "Suppose I rent a box to a person, and he refuses to pay the box rent, and does not wish me to take the box away, can I hold all mail that is put into the box until box-rent is paid?" We answer, No; mail matter cannot be held for any debt except for that due upon itself. Our question is: How came you to rent or assign a box to any one without first having the rent paid for at least one quarter in advance, as required by sections 92, Laws, and 332 and 447, Regulations, of 1866? And this question leads to another: Do you not know that you have violated your official oath, section 52, Laws? Our advice is that you purge your conscience, and immediately close the box until the rent is paid, and henceforth never assign a box or continue it into another quarter until the rent is paid. . . . Our next contains an inquiry quite frequently made: Whether or not a postmaster is obliged to affix the stamps to letters on receiving the money to pay for them? He is not. Persons taking letters without stamps to an office should buy stamps of the postmaster and affix them themselves, and then deposit the letter in the receiving box, if the postmaster has provided one, which every postmaster should do. Here we will remark on another matter which the public are apt to require of postmasters, and which we consider improper that is, of being witnesses to the inclosing of money in letters. "I inclose the money in the presence of your postmaster," etc., is the direction of many whose business is such that they receive small sums of money by mail. As a certificate of the honesty of the remitter, in that particular case, the witnessing by the postmaster may be good, but postmasters have other business than to be public and general certifiers of good conduct; while, as a means of security in transmission, the witnessing is not worth the toss of a copper. Were we a postmaster and a person should bring an unsealed letter and money, and request us to witness the inclosing of the latter in the former, we would kindly but firmly decline. This would be our rule, to which only few exceptions should be made. . . . . Our next is on the subject of addressing papers arriving in clubs, according to section 211, Regulations 1866. The writer would like to escape or avoid the labor, and asks if the said section may not be considered obsolete. No, sir; however onerous the duty, it is so "nominated in the bond;" but it is not really necessary that the addresses should be written on the papers; a list of the subscribers names is all that is required."

Our next: "In what form should I proceed in disposing of this office, as I can find no one to take it?" What! in these days of office-seeking mania, a post office with even a salary of twenty seven dollars per annum to go a begging! We must acknowledge the case to be beyond our advice; yet we will say, a postmaster may resign; but as his sureties are bound till his resignation is accepted, probably if he cannot find a successor he would be required to hold the office till the end of the term for which he was appointed, and then the office would be discontinued. . . . And now follows a most pertinent question: "What shall I do with those postmasters or clerks who remove the wrappers and read my MAIL before I get it?" "First catch your hare," is the most difficult part in a world-renowned recipe for cooking hare—the rest is very easily accomplished. If our correspondent can only catch the postmasters or clerks, or point them out, we will do with them very speedily. . . . . Another subscriber puts a question quite as pertinent: "How much more shall I pay you to have my paper sent without my writing for it every month," etc. The question is not quite so courteous as the other, as it implies habitual carelessness on our, or rather our publisher's, part, which will be remedied by the universal remedy, money. But money cannot remedy the fault, for it is not with our publisher; the papers regularly mailed to subscribers, and those who fail to receive it should attach the blame elsewhere.

*Denoting optional prepayment.

To insure the transmission of correspondence to any of the above-named countries by this route it will be necessary to plainly inscribe the same "by German mail via England and Brindisi," or, "by direct German mail via Brindisi" as written in the body of the above table. Ordinary letters for Alexandria, Malta and Tunis may be sent unpaid or prepaid, at the option of the senders, but the prepayment of all other correspondence for those places, as well as of every kind (including letters) for Egypt (except Alexandria) and Tripolis is compulsory.

I am, sir, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Sup. Foreign Mails.

Foreign Postage Tabls.

Our readers will note the important changes in our Table of Foreign Postages, and can safely rely upon it as correct.

"Mr. Merryman" on Post-Office Matters.

Mark Twain, the "Great Humorist," who "writes for The Galaxy every month," has written for the December number of that magazine, and caused to be printed in the Funny Department thereof, an article in which we are unable to discover the least bit of fun whatever. This, we know, is a dangerous avowal to make; for the Great Humorist has a dreadful way of dealing with those members of the human race who "don't appreciate My humor." The way he "sets down" one of those obtuse mortals, when he catches him, is a caution to similar unappreciative sinners. But we must nevertheless plead guilty to having failed utterly in discovering anything funny in the article referred to, and, as calmly as possible, await the consequences.

The article has for its foundation this state of facts: The Great Humorist had occasion to send by mail, from Buffalo, a package of newspaper or magazine manuscript, and on going to the post-office there to deposit it for mailing, was informed by the Postmaster that it would be necessary to prepay the postage on the same at letter rates. Thereupon the G. H. claimed the right to send it prepaid at two cents per four ounces, as "author's manuscript;" but the P. M.—an irreverent person, not having the fear of any Great Humorist (who writes for The Galaxy every month) before his eyes—denied the claim, and we suppose compelled the payment of the postage at letter rates. But is a Great Humorist to be thus defied with impunity? Shall a paltry and pig-headed P. M. presume to balk him of his will, or question his opinion, and not receive his well-deserved PUNISHMENT? Perish the thought!

So the G. H. goes home, and he writes his article for The Galaxy, putting over the top of it the scathing and original title: "DOG-BERRY IN WASHINGTON"—and he says:

"Some of the decisions of the Post-Office Department are eminently luminous. It has in times gone by been enacted that 'authors' manuscripts' should go through the mails for a trifling postage—newspaper postage, in fact. A calm and dispassionate mind would gather from this that the object had in view was to facilitate and foster newspaper correspondence, magazine writing, and literature generally, by discontinuing a tax in the way of postage which had become very burdensome to gentlemen of the quill. Now, by what effort of good old well-meaning grandmotherly dullness does the reader suppose the postal authorities have rendered that wise and kindly decree utterly null and void, and solemnly funny? By deciding that 'authors' manuscript' does not mean anything but 'manuscript intended to be made into a BOUND BOOK'—all pamphlets, magazines, and newspapers ruled out!"

And then he goes on to the special grievance:

"Once or twice I have sent magazine MSS. from certain cities, on newspaper rates, as 'author's MS.' But in Buffalo the postmaster requires full letter postage. He claims no authority for this save decisions of the Post-Office Department."

[What! when the opaque-minded official had just heard My decision? Preposterous!—but true.]

"He showed me the law itself, but even the highest order of intellectual obscurity, backed by the largest cultivation (outside of a Post-Office Department), could not find in it authority for the 'decisions' aforementioned."

And then he says the maker of the decision is a "well-intending but misguided officer," and that if he were in California the people there would call him "old Smarty, from Mud Springs."

When we began this article we said we didn't see the fun of what the Great Humorist had written. But we do now. And rare fun it is, too. The fun consists in the fact that there is not, and never was, any such law as he refers to, and the exact words of which he pretends to reproduce in his article, by placing them between quotation marks! What the law does say—(and well the sly dog knew it, for the P. M." showed him the law itself")—is, that "BOOK manuscript" shall be rated at two cents per four ounces—NOT "authors' manuscript" in general, at all. And of course nothing was farther from his real thought than to be calling respectable officials by such disrespectful names as "Dog berry" merely for deciding that the words "book manuscript" meant manuscript intended for publication in book form. For it cannot be supposed that a Great Humorist (or a great Anything that is respectable) would write himself into a passion, and call names, and misrepresent facts by misquoting laws, in revenge for the enforced and unexpected disbursement of two-and-sixpence—can it, now? Certainly not. The whole article is merely a flash of the same "dry" humor which impelled him, in "The Innocents Abroad," to refer to Louis Napoleon (who once, in common with two-thirds of the merchants, bankers, and other reputable people of London, served for a day as a volunteer special constable on the occasion of the great Chartist procession) as one "who kept his faithful watch and walked his weary beat as a common policeman of London"—that's all.

The Spring Lettings—"Straw Bids."

For many years the Department has been annoyed, and the public interest has suffered, from the great number of "straw bids" put in at the annual lettings of contracts for carrying the mail. These bids are at inadequate prices for the service proposed, are signed by irresponsible parties, and the guarantors are equally irresponsible, and sometimes the names are altogether fictitious, or perhaps taken at random from the directory, and yet they are certified to as good and sufficient by postmasters acting under the solemnities of their oath of office.

The explanation of this is that the certificates attached to the blank bids furnished by the Department are signed in blank, and by the dozen, by postmasters, at the instance of cunning bidders, who have purposes of their own to subserve; not a word being previously inserted as to the sum of the bid or the names of the bidders and their guarantors. For the purpose of checking this mischievous practice the Postmaster-General has prepared a circular, as below, and caused it to be distributed extensively throughout the States (Southern), whose service is next to be let, and the functionaries alluded to, who desire to retain their positions, should take heed to their ways:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, CONTRACT OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10, 1870.

To postmasters who may be called upon to certify to the sufficiency of guarantors on bids for the conveyance of the mail, under the advertisements of the Postmaster-General, dated September 30, 1870, or any others.

By Section 27 of an act of Congress approved July 2, 1836, it is provided—

"That every proposal for the transportation of the mail shall be accompanied by a written guarantee, signed by one or more responsible persons, to the effect that he or they undertake that the bidder or bidders will, if his or their bid be accepted, enter into an obligation, to such time as may be prescribed by the Postmaster-General, with good and sufficient sureties, to perform the service proposed. No proposal shall be considered unless accompanied by such guarantee."

On the form of proposal furnished by the Department for the use of bidders appears the following certificate: that the signers of the "written guarantee," thereto appended, are "good and sufficient sureties to perform the service proposed," viz.:

"The undersigned, postmaster at ———, certifies, under his oath of office, that he is acquainted with the above guarantors, and knows them to be men of property, and able to make good their guaranty."

The Postmaster-General enjoins on postmasters the observance of the utmost care and caution in affixing their signatures to the certificate. It should not be done without inquiry and correct information as to the responsibility of the persons presented; that they are actually "men of property" and integrity, and that they assume the obligation deliberately and understandingly, as much so as if becoming surety on a bond or note of hand.

Section 20 of the "Instructions to bidders and postmasters," attached to the advertisements, (which, with the "Extracts from Laws of the United States," etc., also appended, should be carefully examined by postmasters and all concerned in the mail service), is in these words:

"Postmasters are to be careful not to certify to the sufficiency of guarantors without knowing that they are persons of sufficient responsibility. They must not sign the certificate until the sum of the bid is inserted, and the bid and guarantee are signed by the bidder and (two) guarantors; a disregard of this instruction by postmasters is a violation of their oath of office, subjecting them to immediate removal."

The penalty here mentioned will be rigidly enforced against all postmasters wilfully disregarding the foregoing directions.

Postmasters will call attention of these interested to the 21st instruction, which is as follows:

"All bidders, guarantors and sureties are distinctly notified that on failure to enter into or perform the contracts for the service proposed in the accepted bids, their legal liabilities will be enforced against them."

By order of the Postmaster-General.
GILES A. SMITH,
Second Asst. P. M. General.

Look Out for Them.

About this time Postmasters may expect to receive circulars offering them most tempting inducements to "get up clubs" of subscribers for bogus magazines and newspapers. Promises of the most lavish kind will be made to them of "prizes" and "premiums" in the shape of sewing machines, watches, cash, etc., etc., for procuring subscribers to publications which either never have, nor will have, any actual existence, or of which only one or two copies will be printed. Last year, hundreds of postmasters were placed in a most unpleasant and mortifying position by lending an ear to the seductive tale told by the publishers of the "People's Home Journal," who issued a circular offering a premium worth $30 for $15 in subscriptions; and the consequence has been that the unlucky subscribers, having received but two or three numbers of the paper, have "gone for" the postmasters in a way that must, after a few months, have become monotonous, to say the least of it.

We warn all postmasters to pay no attention to any circulars or advertisements offering them extraordinary inducements to get up clubs for any publication until they have assured themselves that such publications are well established, respectable concerns. Any of our subscribers who may be in doubt in such a matter can ascertain the facts by inquiring of the editor of this paper, inclosing a three-cent stamp and an addressed envelope for reply.

Look out also, both now and at all times, for circulars offering cash and other articles to postmasters who will furnish lists of names of farmers, storekeepers and others. These circulars are all issued in the interest of swindlers, who use the names thus furnished in addressing their "confidential" letters offering counterfeit money and bogus lottery tickets and prizes. No postmaster should pay any attention to such requests unless he wants to help to cheat and demoralize his neighbors.

Sensible Talk.

In these days when it is so customary for editors to "darken counsel by words without knowledge" concerning post office matters, it is refreshing to meet with such a timely and sensible article as the one we copy below from the New York Times:

OUR POSTAL SYSTEM.—The report of the Postmaster-General may not awaken the lively interest which attaches to some official documents, but it touches more directly than most the social as well as the business concerns of the people. With all its imperfections the postal system of this country is one of the best illustrations of the care and efficiency with which urgent wants of the remotest communities are provided for, and the relations of widely separated sections are maintained. What the Department costs is, in the popular mind, a matter of less moment than the thoroughness of the service which it performs. The stoppage of that would be practical dissolution, and any saving of expenditure consequent upon its imperfections would be scouted as a false and disastrous economy. It does not follow, however, that the question of expense is of no moment. A system that gave us the fullest possible postal facilities, regardless of profit or loss, would be hailed as a boon in comparison with a slow, unsafe and uncertain service. But better still is one that combines tolerable efficiency with a near approach to a balance of income and outlay. The Department seems to be gradually approaching this standard. It is yet susceptible of improvement, but the Postmaster-General shows that he is not blind to its imperfections nor unobservant of the lessons suggested by other countries. And with all this, the Department promises soon to be self-sustaining. The difference between income and outgo decreases steadily. In the last fiscal year it was less than three millions.

The abolition of the franking privilege would, in the opinion of the Postmaster-General, equalize the accounts. "I am thoroughly satisfied," he tells us, "that if the franking privilege were repealed, and all matter passing through the mails charged with its fair share of postage, the Department would in a short time become self-sustaining." If the exercise of the privilege were fraught with substantial advantage to the people, it might be submitted to, costly as it is. But it has not this recommendation. The benefits are infinitesimal—the abuses flagrant and inexcusable. It is a perquisite to senators and representatives—not a gain to the people; and a perquisite, too, which, to the majority of cases, is applied to the most paltry uses. If the pay of our legislators is insufficient let it be increased; but, at all events, let us not be required to contribute to their election expenses, or to put money into the pockets of schemers by keeping up the franking privilege. The country regards it as a scandal and a wrong, and Mr. Creswell deserves thanks for the courageous pertinacity with which he presses a great reform upon an unwilling Congress.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

County Papers.—A. R., J——, Pa.—One copy each of every weekly newspaper published in the county may be sent free of postage to subscribers in the county of publication.

Forwarding Regular Newspapers.—J. G. L., Mass.—Newspapers sent to regular subscribers cannot be forwarded without additional postage to be prepaid at transient rates, nor can they be regularly remailed to other parties, or quarterly rates.

Presidential Offices.—D. C. McV., J—— B——, Mo.—Presidential offices are those whose Postmasters are appointed by the President. All offices, the salaries of which are a thousand dollars or upwards are Presidential offices. (Sec. 26 A, Laws 1866.)

Monthly Report of Free Mail Matter.—H. L. H, V—— C——, Mon.—The monthly report of free mail matter was to be kept for six months from the first of last January, consequently it is not required to keep it at present.

Plants in Tin Cases.—W. J. H., K—, Tenn.—Plants for cultivation or propagation may be inclosed in tin cans without subjecting them to letter rates of postage, provided they are not sealed against inspection. (Secs. 250 and 255, Laws 1866.)

Books and Newspapers Registered, &c.—W. W. M, P—— C——, Utah.—Books and newspapers mailed for delivery in the United States, can only be registered on the payment of letter rates, but to some foreign countries only the regular rates are required. The names of those countries can be found in section 8, Reg'n Reg. 1868.

Newspapers.—We have stated above that a regular paper once delivered to the subscriber cannot be remailed at quarterly rates.

Registration.—H. M. H., P—P—, Montana.—Books for delivery within the United States cannot be registered unless the postage is prepaid at letter rates. In section 8 of the Registration Regulations the language is, "on domestic letters to any part of the United States or Territories," etc. Further on it is stated "other postal packets" "may be sent to the countries named," etc. .... S. G, J—, O—. Applications for envelopes for registry business should be made to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

Postage on Registry Lists.—J. S. L., N——, Pa.—Postage on registry lists, with written names, is charged at letter rates. We find there are some postmasters who seem to think that mail matter not sealed, whether containing writing or not, is chargeable only with miscellaneous rates. Such, however, is not the case; except in the case of connected proof sheets, and of the prices attached to samples, and the address of the party to whom sent, or of the sender. Any writing whatever subjects matter containing it to letter rates. (Sec. 244, Laws 1866.)

Post Offices of the same Name.—K. S., S——, N. Y.—There are no two post offices of the same name in the same State. But very often the popular name of a place is the same as the name of some post office in the same State. Officially considered this is to be regretted, as where it is the case much confusion arises and often a great deal of trouble in investigating cases of supposed loss. We have known letters to be sent hundreds of miles from their intended destination because addressed with the popular but not the official name of a place, which was also, however, the name of a post office.

Chestnuts.—T. C. McE., W——, N. Y.—A package of chestnuts weighing two pounds may be a package of seeds, may be merchandise or a gift from a "country cousin" to a "city" relative, the weight precludes the idea of a sample. The postage would vary from seed rates to letter rates according to the case. There is a sort of "tweedledum and tweedledee difference" between seeds, as seeds, and seeds as merchandise or samples, which, however, is sufficient to make a great difference in postage; two pounds of chestnuts as seeds are chargeable with only sixteen cents postage, while as samples or as merchandise the postage would be ninety-six cents.

Package of Circulars, etc.—C. H. W., F——, Md.—Circulars in packages, to one address, may be charged at miscellaneous rates. This is one of those cases where it is difficult to draw a line of distinction. The nearest we can come to it is as follows: If the circulars are sent by the party they are intended to benefit, to different persons, they should be charged at circular rates; but if sent to him by another, as, for instance, a printer, or by him to an agent for distribution, the charge may be on the package at miscellaneous rates. 2. Neck-ties, lamp mats, in fact all dry goods, no matter how put up (except clothing for soldiers and sailors, according to section 223, Laws 1866), should be charged at letter rates. 3. In case of the destruction by fire of postage stamps, the postmaster should make an affidavit, stating the circumstances, and amount of loss, together with all other proof which he can produce, and send the same to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, who will submit the matter to the Postmaster-General. (Sec. 181, Reg. 1866.)

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery.

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland are chergeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to or from the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, when sent direct in closed mail via England, are also chargeable with a fine on delivery in addition to the postage. In the case of letters arriving in the United States the fine is five cents. In both cases the amount is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to and from the North German Union (including Austria and Luxemburg) are chargeable with double the rate stated in the table, credit being allowed for any part prepayment.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE. — Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is six cents per half ounce, if fully prepaid, and ten cents, if unpaid or insufficiently paid. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received from the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

The mails for the Bahamas leave New York once a month by direct steamer to Nassau. See Table of Dates of Departure of Foreign Mails.

Postage, ten cents per half ounce on letters, and domestic rates on newspapers and book-packets. Prepayment both on letters and other matter compulsory.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The rate of postage on mail letters to any part of the United States is three cents a half ounce or fraction thereof. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent. All drop as well as mail letters must be prepaid.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All corrspondence on official business, of whatever origin, addressed to heads of the executive departments of government, or heads of bureaus therein, or to chief clerks of departments, shall be received and conveyed by mail free of postage without being franked or indorsed "Official Business."

By a joint Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Adjutants General of the several States and Territories, are authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, any medals, certificates of thanks or other testimonials, awarded, or which may be awarded by the Legislatures of said States and Territories, to the soldiers thereof, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may direct.

Section 123, Regulations 1866, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as a personal privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weight of four ounces. Mail matter to those possessing the privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertains to official business. Section 124 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides three, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenue officers, also, besides those mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may only frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No communication, official or otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can be sent free.

The Act of March 1, 1869, relating to franking, makes no change in the privilege, but merely enacts that the signature of the franking party must be written, and not printed.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

UNITED STATES MAIL
AND
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. XI., NO. 4. NEW YORK, JANUARY, 1871. WHOLE NO. 124.

P. O. INNUBIBUS, Dec., 1870.

ED. U. S. MAIL:

I have received to-day from New York a parcel of these nonsensical circulars sent out by pretended dealers in counterfeit money, and I find in my paper received by same mail an account of the arrest of a nest of the scoundrels. The length of time such circulars have been issued, under various names, proves that the business, if business it can be called, is a paying one; but how sadly it speaks for the integrity and honesty of the people in the country, for it is only on them that these pests rely for the success of their imposture. I wish to say through my brother postmasters, to those in the country who are ready to deal in counterfeit money or to pass it, that they are, in plain terms, mean villainous scamps; their will is good to rob and defraud their neighbors, "and the widow and orphan," mean, sneaking, contemptible scamps, they enclose money to one who they think deals in counterfeit money, but who only pretends to do so, and, receive in return, bits of iron, newspaper, or a box of sawdust. I can fancy the falling of the gloating countenance of one of these rural scamps and would-be felons, as he discovers, instead of a pile of counterfeit money, so well executed that even "bank officials have invariably pronounced them genuine," a handful of sawdust. How must this creature feel as he drops from the height of a "shrewd and trustworthy agent" to the depth of a duped State Prison candidate? and he was selected, too, "in preference to others," and he is promised "the agency for his State," and he must "read the circular in private" as though he were the only one within five hundred miles who had received such a circular, when in truth every one of his neighbors has probably received from one to a half dozen of them. I might passingly remark how generous are these pretended dealers in counterfeit money, how they promise their dupes "a fair show at the start," and "will not require more than one-quarter of the money down," and this generous queer dealer "has no other agent near:" and then follows a most ridiculous yet specious proposition to "come on and have a personal interview," and it must be "distinctly understood" that he "deals on the square," and that he has "unbounded confidence" in the dupe and that "a fortune is in store for both." Now what must be thought of one who is fool enough to be caught by one of these circulars, and knave enough to send money in reply to it? The language I have used above concerning him is too mild: he should be condemned to pass his time equally between an idiot asylum and a State prison. Bad as is the dealer, or pretended dealer, he is far better than the dupe, for while the one expects and plans only to swindle the dishonest, the other expects to swindle the honest and rich and poor alike, and those too who are his neighbors and personal friends.

I have learned to know these circulars when arriving at my office, and lately I have noted to whom they are addressed. I made arrangements to learn if any one responded to them, and obtained the names of three young men who in one week had forwarded packages by express, in accordance with the directions to "send only by express,"—for these gentlemen who so "confidentially" proclaim that they deal "on the square" are not quite square enough to have the privilege of the Post Office Department to aid them in their anything but "square" operations, and it is a matter of regret that the express companies do not take the same high stand, instead of aiding and abetting and becoming participants in the silly fraud.

These young men were all in respectable positions, and were esteemed in the community. I invited them to meet me one evening in my private office, where I talked to them on general matters for a while, and then produced a package of these circulars. "Did any of you ever receive any of these circulars containing offers of counterfeit money?" I asked. I received no reply, but there was a manifest uneasiness in each of them which led me to plunge at once into my charge against them. I therefore added, "I know that each of you has received one or more, and I know that each of you has replied to at least one that you have received. You, sir, sent a package by express to Williams & Co., 196 Broadway, and you to Jno. B. Forrest, 20 Liberty street, and you to Edward B. Kane, 23 Dutch street, New York. Now whether or not you are contederates I cannot tell, but this I can say, you are all three dupes and scamps. There are no such men as you have sent your packages to, while the one or two men who send the circulars and who will receive your money, will pocket it with a smile to think how they have duped you, and will send you a package of some worthless trash. I cannot arrest you for passing or having counterfeit money, even if it was my wish, for if you never have any counterfeit money but what you get through these circulars, you will never reach the goal of your ambition—a State prison dress and cell—through passing counterfeit money. I have, however, no desire to arrest you, but I will watch you, and if hen roosts or gardens are robbed, I shall not be slow to suspect the young men who have the will to rob their neighbors and friends through counterfeit money. Now, go!"

I perceive the city authorities are taking hold of the matter of these circulars quite strongly, and I hope with good effect, but while it is well enough to attack those who send the circulars, I think the remedy is to attack vigorously those who reply to them. A way could readily be devised by which the Sheriff of each county could be notified of the name of each one in his county who replied to these circulars, be then to take some proper means to warn the public and caution it against these would-be criminals; or postmasters might be notified through the Dead Letter Office, and each postmaster could hang in his office a list of names, adding to it from time to time. Fancy to yourself, Mr. Editor entering my office, and reading from a placard somewhat as follows:

"CAUTION!

"The persons whose names are inscribed below have endeavored to procure counterfeit money from the pretended dealers in that article in New York." Then the names to follow.

By this plan we would not only stop the remittance of money to the swindlers, but we would know who to suspect of the petty crimes that occur among the residents of villages and towns, while we might do something to improve the moral ideas of some members of the community.

The objection to this plan would be that, if reliance can be had on the city papers, some of the postmasters would have to put their own names on the list. NICOTINUE.

TEX., November, 1870.

Editor U. S. Mail—We were quarantined from September 12 to November 4 and have just received our October U. S. MAIL, more than welcome as it ever is. The letters on the first page from F. N. C. and from P. O., are full of thoughts to be considered by the Department and its agents.

In regard to newspaper postage I know from experience and from testimony, that much must be lost, at least in the South, though I had supposed there was more cause in the North. I lived ten years in the South before I was connected with a P. O., and in all that time I was never asked for newspaper postage. When I tendered it, it was declined with the remark, "It is no matter," or taken in a manner that made me certain it did not go beyond the P. M.'s pocket, as postage. Since 1865 I have been in a P. O., and the citizens here now expect to pay postage, as well as all others. But it cost a fight to secure this. They protested; they scolded; they ridiculed us for charging five cents on a newspaper, or three cents on an overweight letter. Now there is no contest; they know it has to be. But it is a common thing when a stranger comes here, to have it all over again. Only last week, a man who had lived years at an office that must be of third class, and is a M. O. office, on being presented his paper bill, asked "When was that law made?" "It has always been the law, sir." "I do assure you, sir, it is the first time I was ever charged postage on my papers." I had not the least reason to doubt him, did not doubt him. This is only a specimen. This matter will never be cured until newspaper postage is pre-paid. It is marvelous that this reform is not urged more strenuously.

There is little doubt, also, that much is lost in not taking note of undercharged letters—letters without bills. This item at this office commonly exceeds the amount that is billed, including the foreign un-paid postage—much the largest item in the bills. The postage on undercharged or unbilled letters averaged $11 53 a quarter, the last year in this little third-class office. This "Due 3" on a letter was specially resisted and specially ridiculed at the first: "That was too mean for anybody but a Yankee." Every business man and one wealthy minister advised us to abandon that, even if we must have the newspaper postage. They know now they have to pay—it is an item in the quarterly postage accounts of such as have accounts, and the letters of those who have not had formed the habit of waiting here till the three cents come.

If P. M's were careful to bill every and uncharged letter, that does not go through a D. P. O., and to stamp on every one that does, "Due 3," I am sure a large sum now lost, would be saved to the Department. In the haste of opening a large mail with customers waiting, it is not so easy to detect overweight letters; but in making up a mail it can be easily done, and the bill or stamp at once arrests attention on delivery. It is our rule not to let a letter leave the office without the full due postage plainly marked. It is our own experience to receive as above over $11 worth of such letters, unmarked in each quarter. There is force in the suggestion of the N. C. P. M. about charging $2 for the laws. At small offices they cannot be afforded, and are not. It would be an economical, a saving expenditure, I am persuaded, for the Department to give the Book of Laws and the U. S. MAIL to all offices where the salary does not exceed $100, and all others can afford to pay for them. The increased income of these offices by close collectors would overpay the expense. Yet, again, there is a great discrepancy between the allowances of the P. O. or of Revenue and Customs Departments. Both the latter have collections here, and they receive free of price and franked, whole bags of regulations, instructions and reports, also the Revenue Record free. The P. O. has a copy of the Regulations of 1866, for which it paid $2, and it pays for its U. S. Mail, and postage. These are all it has, and we never see the Annual Reports. So if the Revenue or Customs Collectors want a desk, or a case, or a table costing $5 or $75, they procure it, notify their Departments, and it is credited, not one only, but all they want, of good quality and fine appearance. The P. O. was allowed $8 in 1866 (when it had to fix everything new) for a pine case for the newspapers. This was on permission, and the limit was $10. It did cost $8. Everything else is at the expense of the office. No wonder the N. C. P. M. could not understand the difference.

There is another matter, but it must be reserved for another sheet. This is even now too long. H.

A Correction

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Dec., 1870.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL:

In my article under the head of "The Newspaper Postage Difficulty—A Remedy," by the use of a half dozen words, not mine, the whole matter became meaningless as an exposition of a new idea, inasmuch as it recommends, as a new feature, the very practice at present prevailing, and which is the substance of the embarrassment that we seek to remedy.

I refer to that clause specifying what disposition to make of unpaid printed matter that may reach the office of destination.

You have me say: "It shall be treated as transient matter and postage collected accordingly." Now I must be permitted to assert that this is not my language at all. What I did say was more to the point, and was substantially this: "And all such matter received at any office for delivery shall be treated as before described for the office of deposit."

How was that? Why, they shall be recognized as unmailable and treated as waste paper.

Permit me in a word, and with unmistakable plainness, to say that my idea is that all printed matter intended for subscribers shall be marked in connection with the address "Subscriber" or "Sub." and all unpaid printed matter deposited for mailing in any office not so marked shall be at once consigned to the waste paper basket. Or, if by chance it escapes detection at the mailing office, and reaches the office of destination, it shall receive the same waste paper treatment there, without question or hesitation.

This summary dealing will most emphatically stop all further cumbering of the mails with unpaid specimens, for no publisher will continue to deposit such packages in the face of absolute knowledge that they cannot and will not be delivered.

The postmaster is thereby relieved of all further perplexity, for all he will receive will be "regular" and the department will receive full payment for all the service rendered. S. H. BROWN, P. M.

[The exact words used by our correspondent in his first communication were:—"And all such matter received at any office for delivery shall be treated as prescribed for the mailing office of deposit"—which to their writer may be clear enough in their signification, but were not so to us. We supposed he intended to say "as now prescribed," &c., in which supposition it seems we were in error. We offer our apology, and add that our correspondent's plan seems to us sensible, just and feasible.—ED. U. S. MAIL.]

We give place to the following communication, which has been in hand some time, but is none the less original in its suggestions. Like many other suggestions it has some practicability, while it has one great fault, that of requiring too much time and labor in our largest publishing establishments.

PROPOSED MODE OF COLLECTING POSTAGE ON REGULAR PRINTED MATTER.—Pre-payment by stamps has been successful as applied to letters. Newspaper postage should be prepaid as well, thereby perfecting our entire system of collecting postage.

Newspapers which remain unclaimed, or are refused, cannot be sold for enough to cover the cost of transportation. Under the system proposed, less of this matter would accumulate, and the Government would in no case be the loser. I propose that the Post Office Department issue stamps of the required denominations, which shall have no value when attached to any other than regular printed matter to bona fide subscribers.

The stamps to be about three inches in length and about one inch in width, handsomely engraved, printed in delicate colors, upon which ink will be legible.

The publisher shall attach a stamp of the required denomination to each publication for the mails, which can be done rapidly by using a wet sponge, or otherwise; the name of the subscriber shall be written upon the face of the stamp only, which may be done before or after being attached, and in cases of "single wraps" or bindings of lists the Post Office, County and State may be inserted. Any irregularity or attempt to defraud can be detected at the office of destination, which shall report the same. To render it utterly impossible for these stamps to be used again, there can be a coupon made upon the right side of the stamp about ¾ of an inch in length, bearing the denomination of the stamp, which must not be written or printed upon by the publisher, and must not be gummed on the underside like the stamp, and shall be torn off at the office of destination when the packages are opened and prepared for distribution and delivery, which will consume but little time or labor. The coupon may be filed.

The pre-payment system has been objected to because it would greatly increase the labor of the New York and other large offices. This system will in no way increase the labor at any office, the sale of the stamps being all the labor required, and on the other hand great labor and expence will be saved by there being no postage accounts to keep. This system cannot be detrimental to the interest of the people or the publishers. The subscriber can as well remit the postage in addition to the regular subscription as to pay it to the postmaster. Publishers will exercise greater care in preparing their matter for the mails which will not be delayed by the employment of the stamps, which can be printed or written upon instead of strips of paper generally used. Those having machines for printing the name directly upon the paper, can print it as well upon the stamp. The stamps can as well be prepared before publication as slips and wrappers.

By this system the Department will not lose any postage by neglect of officials.

It will also be almost entirely relieved of any expense in collecting this postage, and will realize an increased revenue from this source.

Improvements can doubtless be made to this system; but any arrangement whereby the stamps are placed on the wrapper and exposed, or to be cancelled by the ordinary mode, would prove unsatisfactory in the first case and tedious and expensive in the second.

I trust these suggestions may assist in leading to some efficient and economical system of prepayment on all regular printed matter.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Publishers' Exchanges.—Publishers of newspapers and periodicals may exchange their publications without regard to frequency of publication. (Sec 258, Laws 1866.

Delivering Mail Matter.—J. N. S., S——, N. Y.—If a firm have a box at a post office, all mail matter for that firm should be placed in that box, notwithstanding a request or order from one of the firm to put such matter in another box.

Carriers' List.—E. T. M., R——, N. Y:—Our "carriers' lists" are published as they are furnished by the Department. If they show differences in the number of carriers the presumption is that changes in the number have been made.

Boxes.—H. E. B., B——, N. Y.—It is necessary to charge rent for boxes. Read the chapter on boxes in the Regulations of 1866. It is chapter XLII. The information it contains should be well known by every postmaster in whose office there are boxes.

Registering to the Secretary of the Treasury.—J. D. W., C——, C——, Cal. A package of mutilated currency may be sent to the Secretary of the Treasury free of postage, but if registered is subject to the usual registry fee of 15c.

Envelopes Spoiled in Directing.—C. R., C——, N. Y.—A stamped envelope properly directed, which the party has concluded not to send, may be redeemed according to section 189 of Regulations. The objection that it was not spoiled would be merely technical, the fact that the envelope was not used to prepay postage, and could not be after it was returned to the postmaster, would entitle it to the provision of the section.

Delivery of Weekly Papers.—W. S. H., M——, Mo.—1. Postmasters are obliged to deliver free, weekly newspapers, when deposited in the office nearest the place of publication, if the papers are properly folded and addressed, to regular subscribers. Only weekly papers are allowed this privilege. 2. Our authority for this assertion is Sec. 3 of the act of July 27, 1868, and section 3 of the instructions connected therewith.

Office Hours, etc.—1. A postmaster may regulate his office hours, having due regard for the convenience of the public. (Sec. 27, Reg. 1866.) In some localities from 8 to 11 A. M. and 2 to 4:30 P. M., for money order business would be very suitable hours, in others very unsuitable. Common sense and a disposition to oblige would better settle the point than a general rule. 2. A postmaster is not obliged to receive one and two cent coins in quantities for stamps. To the value of four cents is a legal tender.

Eligibility for Postmastership.—L. D. C., N——, Mich.—1. An employee of a railroad company, carrying the mails, is eligible for a postmastership. 2 If the post office is within one quarter of a mile of the railroad station, the mails must be carried to and from the office by the company. If more than a quarter of a mile the service is to be performed by a mail messenger, who, however, can only be engaged by permission from the Central Office. (Sec. 471, Reg. 1866.)

Mailing Letters on the Cars.—J. W. B., F——, N. Y.—By section 470 of Regulations of 1866, it is made the duty of route agents "to receive all letters written after the mail has closed, and all way letters prepaid by stamps," but section 99 restricts this duty to "only such letters as there is good reason to believe were written after the usual hour for closing the mail at the local post office, and such as could not with due diligence have been placed in the office in due time to be dispatched in the out-going mail." We have given the general rule, but we can give no opinion upon a specific application of it, and advise that a statement of facts be made to the Contract Office.

Valid Stamps.—L. M., M——, N. Y.—We cannot give a rule for the size of the part that may be torn from a postage stamp and the stamp yet retain its value. It would be unjust to say that no part may, for it is not unusual in separating a stamp from others to tear off a little corner. We must refer the question to that "common sense," of which we frequently make mention in our "Answers," and a share of which—we may say a very large share—should be possessed by every postmaster. The question might apply to money as well as to postage stamps. To meet this case of money the Treasury Department has made a rule to allow the face value of treasury notes of which not more than one-twentieth is missing, and of fractional currency of not more than one-tenth; this may afford some guide as to how much of a stamp may be missing without affecting its value.

Postmasters Attending as Witnesses, etc.—I. S. S., F——, N. Y.—1. Postmasters and their clerks are not exempt from obedience to subpœnas from State courts. In cases where the postmaster and all his clerks are subpœnaed as witnesses, the postmaster should endeavor to make some arrangement with the court or the counsel by which the post office would not be left without an attendant. 2. So far as the postmaster is concerned the correspondence between burglars or suspected criminals is as sacred as other correspondence. 3. A postmaster is not obliged to furnish information to a District Attorney, Justice of the Peace, or a Detective, concerning the addresses of letters in his office, but in the cause of justice he may give such information as in his judgment he deems proper. 3. The only person authorized to open the correspondence of a criminal, is the person to whom the criminal gives the authority. 5. Postmasters may detain letters addressed with fictitious names, or to persons who are notoriously engaged in swindling: such letters should be sent to the Dead Letter Office.

"The Father of Cheap Postage."

It will be seen from the following that some of the best-known men in the country propose and endorse a plan for securing a suitable testimonial to MR. JAMES W. HALE, of New York, who was, many years ago, an active and energetic promoter of the present system of cheap postage. Mr. Hale very truly remarks, in a letter to the editor of this paper: "I have no doubt that if postage had remained at the old high rates there would be at this time 10,000 less post offices than now, and 50,000 less post office clerks;" and the co-operation of postmasters and others in the service in this testimonial would seem to be specially consonant with "the fitness of things." Several postmasters that we have heard of have taken this view of the matter and have taken up voluntary contributions towards the proposed object. Although the date mentioned has gone by, it is not yet too late to contribute:

CHEAP POSTAGE TESTIMONIAL.

To the People of the United States:

The undersigned, who know of the early and persistent efforts of Mr. James W. Hale to give to the people of this country the benefits of cheap postage, more than a quarter of a century ago, take this method to appeal to you and to suggest a voluntary testimonial to that gentleman, who has never yet received any popular recognition for the great services of which all are now reaping the benefit.

It is proposed that every person who may be so inclined, shall, on Monday, December 19, 1870, set apart one three-cent stamp, or the equivalent thereof, for every letter received on that day, as a holiday offering to the Rowland Hill of America, that day being the fiftieth anniversary of Mr. Hale's connection with the newspaper press. May we not hope that the numerous friends of Mr. Hale, in every part of the country, as well as all postmasters and publishers, will make special efforts to the end that a substantial compliment will result to this veteran reformer? And although many of the active business men of to-day may have never heard the name of James W. Hale, the fact still exists that he is the Father of our cheap postage system.

Whatever offerings are made may be sent to A. P. M. Roome, Esq., Secretary of the Committee, at New York City; or, if preferred, may be addressed direct to Mr. Hale, 69 Wall street, New York. Contributions need not be limited to the above-named amount.

SAML. F. B. MORSE, M. H. GRINNELL, W. H. ASPINWALL, DAVID HOADLEY, A. P. M. ROOME, and others.

Professor Morse, the inventor of the magnetic telegraph, who heads the signers of the above, in a note to Hon. William Orton says:

"I have long known James W. Hale as the energetic and zealous originator of the cheap postage system of the United States. He is in truth the Rowland Hill of the United States. If any man living deserves a national testimonial for great public services I think it is Mr. Hale, who has, at great self-sacrifice, devoted his time and talents, I might say gratuitously, as well as efficiently, for the public benefit."

☞ We heartily indorse the suggestions contained in the following, cut from a New York Tribune of a late date; we consider they are very "fair play."

The unprofitable business of that melancholy institution, the Dead-Letter Office, is becoming very large. During the month of October no less than 327,816 undelivered letters were sent there to be disposed of. Only 162,541 of them could be returned, owing to the prevalence of endearing signatures, such as "affectionate husband," "dutiful daughter," "loving friend," "your adoring Charles," "your faithful Laura," etc., which give no clue to the sender, and to the fact that many letters come undated and illegibly postmarked. All without addresses are opened, burned, and the contents confiscated. In the letters returned there were, besides checks and drafts for large sums, cash inclosures amounting to $7,182 03, which the owners, after much tribulation, will receive. In the unreturnable letters, we may infer that there is an equal sum of money which the owners will never see again. The remedy for all this trouble, delay and loss is simple. Let the sender write his address plainly on the outside of the letter, and the post office will return it to him unopened, if it is not called for within thirty days. Beside honefiting the individual, this plan, if generally adopted, would be a saving to the Government, as it would reduce to an inconsiderable amount the present expense of the Dead-Letter Office.

Letters are never misdirected, nor the name of person or town incorrectly spelled, if we believe the assertion of those who complain of losing letters in the mails. Nevertheless, we publish the following list of ways to spell (?) only one name, which was furnished us by the postmaster who had the curiosity to keep the list. It would not have been surprising if some of the letters so addressed had been eternally miscent:

Rumn'ous, Romuless, Romeless, Romulouse, Roumulouss, Reumulus, Rumhlees, Ramulese, Runnulese, Romulous, Rumlons, Ramlouss, Romelee, Ramulious, Romlous, Ronulus, Rumlus, Romuless, Ramulows, Rumbus, Romulous, Reumulus, Romelous, Rumalase, Romuliens, Rumulus, Romilous, Remlis, Reublies, Romolos, Romulieus, Romeloss, Romulus, Rheumulous, Rhemlus, Rumulus, Reublus, Roumlous, Romelus, Roumulue, Romulus.

Official Indorsement.

Since its establishment in 1860, the UNITED STATES MAIL has received the official recommendation of Postmasters-General BLAIR, DENNISON and RANDALL, and we take pleasure in publishing also the following from Postmaster-General CRESWELL, who adds to those of his predecessors his recognition and indorsement of THE MAIL as a medium for the publication of official orders and instructions, and of correct information on postal subjects:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, AUG. 10, 1869.

THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT, a monthly postal journal, published at New York, by J. GAYLER, Esq., Special Agent of this Department, is recommended to postmasters and the public as a useful publication, giving valuable information respecting postal operations, the laws and regulations of the Post-Office Department, rates of foreign and domestic postage, lists of the newly-established and discontinued post offices, and such new orders and regulations as are from time to time promulgated by the Department, and furnished for publication.

The table of rates of postage to foreign countries, corrected monthly for publication in this journal, furnishes correct information to postmasters and the public of the rates of postage chargeable on correspondence of all kinds addressed to or received from foreign countries, which rates are necessarily subject to frequent changes.

JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

[OFFICIAL.]

Published by order of the P. O. Department.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 21, 1870.

Whereas, it is prescribed by an order of this Department, dated February 2, 1870, "that all mailable printed matter, other than newspapers and patterns or samples of merchandise posted in the United States for, or received in the United States from, countries or places beyond sea with which postal conventions have not been concluded establishing different rates of postage, shall be classed as book packets, and charged with postage at the domestic book rate of four cents per each weight of four ounces or fraction thereof."

And whereas, it is considered just and expedient that prices current, unsealed circulars, trade lists and other small printed publications of a commercial nature, addressed to, or received from, the West Indies or other foreign country or place should receive the benefit of a moderate rate of postage when forwarded from, or received in, the United States, by steamships or other vessels regularly employed in the conveyance of mails directly between the United States and the West Indies or other foreign country or place as aforesaid:

It is hereby ordered, that all kinds of printed matter other than newspapers, when addressed from the United States to, or received in the United States from any foreign country or place shall, subject to the proviso hereinafter mentioned, be hereafter chargeable with the following rates of postage, to be collected at the office of mailing on matter sent, and at the office of delivery on matter received, viz:

For each packet not exceeding an ounce in weight, two (2) cents.

When exceeding one ounce and not exceeding two ounces in weight, three (3) cents.

When exceeding two ounces and not exceeding four ounces in weight, four (4) cents.

And an additional rate of four (4) cents for every additional weight of four ounces or fraction of four ounces.

Provided, always, that these rates shall not apply to such matter addressed to or received from any foreign country or place by other modes of conveyance by which other rates of postage are chargeable; nor to those foreign countries or places to and from which different rates of postage have been or shall be established by any postal arrangement already concluded or hereafter to be made.

This order shall take effect from and after the 1st of January next.

JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster General.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 23, 1870.

The General Post Office of Great Britain has advised this Department that the steamships of the British East Indian and Australian mail line have been withdrawn from Marseilles and placed on the route between Brindisi and Alexandria; and that a reduction may therefore be made in the postage chargeable on letters forwarded by this route between the United States and the East Indies, China, Japan and Australia.

In consequence of the reduction thus effected, the letter correspondence from the United States, when posted for transmission to the undermentioned countries in the British mail via Brindisi will, until further notice, be subject to the following modified rates of postage, which are required to be prepaid at the office of mailing, viz.

For the East Indies, 28 cents; for China and Japan 34 cents; and for Australia, 22 cents, for each single rate of half an ounce or fraction of half an ounce.

No reduction having been made in the postage rates chargeable on newspapers, book packets, or samples of merchandise for the countries in question by this route, the postage to be collected on these classes of correspondence will remain as stated in the order of this Department issued under date of November 5, 1870.

Postmasters will levy and collect postage accordingly from and after this date.

By order of the Postmaster General.

JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Superintendent.

"Tweedledum and Tweedledee Difference."

We used this expression last month in our "Answers to Correspondents" in writing of the postage on chestnuts. As the expression is generally used in reference to differences more nice than wise, and hence in irony, it may be thought that we used it in the same sense, and that we look upon many of the distinctions made in classing mail matter, as frivolous.

To correct any such impression is our present aim.

The more enlightened men become the more their wants are increased, and of course there is a corresponding increase in the means of meeting those wants, and this leads to very nice distinctions, which must be maintained to maintain a peaceable state of society, and which, if destroyed, though small in themselves, lead to great and often desolating changes.

The most familiar, noticeable and important of these nice distinctions may be found, probably, in ordinary deeds, or mortgages, or other papers relating to real property, where the words give, grant, demise, etc., etc., seem to the ordinary mind a ridiculous jargon of words, made up to confuse and confound the title and the quality of the property affected than to make them clearer and stronger; and yet years of experience have shown them to be necessary. The little piece of paper, called in law a seal, is another instance of the nice distinctions that are made when questions arise—for it must be understood, that until questions do arise, the necessity for these distinctions is not apparent—and the deficiency of this seal annexed to a deed, has often, after years of possession, stripped a family of their wealth, and driven them to poverty, while it has given the same wealth to another family, before equally as poor.

The rapid flight of time, at 12 o'clock P. M., of any day, converts the infant, in law, with but few rights and responsibilities, into the man, with all the rights and responsibilities that are a man's inheritance: and in our country these are many. One minute of time may make a man eligible or ineligible for the office of President of the United State, at any given time that he could otherwise assume the duties of the office.

We have given these illustrations as preliminary to calling the attention of postmasters to small distinctions that have to be made in rating and classing mail matter.

First, we have a distinction between "mailable matter" and that not mailable; by the former of which is meant matter that must be mailed, and by the latter matter that may be, not that must be refused or excluded from the mails. Paper is "mailable matter," and packages of it weighing four pounds may be sent by mail for thirty-two cents, while muslin, in one sense the same article, is "unmailable," and a package of it of four pounds weight would be chargeable with three dollars and eighty-four cents postage. Why the distinction was made by Congress we do not inquire, for doubtless the framers of the law had good and sufficient reason. And yet we find some people very unreasonable, and a few very impertinent, because postmasters will not receive flannel shirts, boots and hats at the rates established for miscellaneous mailable matter. Their opinion that the postmaster is "more nice than wise" extends too to the framers of the law, by which, however, nobody is harmed but these same grumblers, of whom one is apt to inquire, mentally, of course, whether or not they know the difference between their neighbors' pockets and their own.

We recall the case of a merchant who insisted that circulars should be sent to foreign countries (to which the rate was four cents) at newspaper rates, because they answered the definition of newspapers—"conveyed information;" that is, as he said, they conveyed information to him, according to which bright idea all correspondence may be said to be newspapers.

A not infrequent source of trouble to those who cannot see these nice distinctions is in the prohibition of writing on printed matter, if sent at less than letter rates. What harm, indeed, in writing in pencil on the margin of a newspaper you are sending to a friend, "We are all well," or "Kitty arrived safely last night," or "John will start next week?" It saves the trouble of writing a letter and don't cost the Department any more to carry the paper. Granted; but after you are allowed to write three words some one else will want to write eight, and then somebody ten, and then where would the line be drawn? It was "wise," as well as "nice," to draw it just where it is—"Any mark or sign in writing." Some merchants complain that they are not allowed to add to printed circulars prices in writing; but if one may add prices, may not another colors, and another qualities, and another weights?

Passing by the frequent source of complaint concerning "book manuscripts," which received due attention last month, we take up the matter of seeds.

It is a wise provision of the law that seeds sent by mail shall have the benefit of the lowest rates of postage. But, says one: If four pounds of wheat may be sent as seed, why may it not be sent for consumption, or as a "sample?" Is not the distinction "more nice than wise?" We should reply, that those who send for seeds and cultivate them, in a large number of instances, probably a majority, benefit the public as well as themselves, and hence it is but proper that the public should aid them somewhat, and, besides, the instances are comparatively few, while in the case of samples, or for consumption, the benefit is confined to the sender and receiver, and the mails would soon become a means of conveyance for small packages from sellers to buyers. We would not, however, be understood to mean that a system might not be adopted by which small packages of merchandise might be transported by mail at rates remunerative to the Department and satisfactory to the parties concerned; but we are speaking of the law as it now is and of the complaints that are made in its enforcement.

We might pursue this subject further, and probably will at some future time, but close for the present with the remark, that the Tweedledum and Tweedledee difference in mail matter is one to which postmasters can not pay too much attention.

"Miscellaneous Matter."

There seems, from the reports which reach us, to be a good deal of confusion or misapprehension in the minds of many postmasters as to the proper rates of postage to be charged on "miscellaneous matter." One of our subscribers writes: "The people of our village are grumbling at us because I charge them letter postage on cravats, handkerchiefs, stockings, etc., and say that the postmaster at B——, two miles off, tells them I am wrong to do so—that two cents per four ounces is the proper rate for miscellaneous matter. What am I to do about it?" To him and to all such inquirers we say, Do as you have been doing, and charge letter postage on all "miscellaneous matter" that is not defined by law as "miscellaneous mailable matter"—which embraces "all pamphlets, occasional publications, books, book manuscripts and proof sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental; photographic representations of various types, reeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions." These comprise all the "miscellaneous matter" which can be sent by mail at less than letter rates of postage. It will be seen that blacking, hair brushes, shingles, inkstands, spy glasses, squirt-guns and toddy-sticks do not appear in the list, though we do not say they are not "miscellaneous." The law which refers to such articles is as follows: "On all matter not enumerated as mailable matter, and to which no specific rates of postage are assigned, and which shall nevertheless be mailed, the rate, it the same shall be forwarded, is established at the rate of letter postage."

No postmaster need be in doubt on this subject, who will consult sections 221, 222, 245 and 250, P. O. Laws, and sections 196, 204 and 224 P. O. Regulations.

Registration Comicalities or Stopidities.

We have been shown a "Receipt for Registered Packages," which is a curiosity in its way. The package for which it calls originated in Mississippi, the receipt is filled up as follows: "Received of —— (name illegible, having been altered), P. M., at Nassau street, Nov." &c., all the first three columns are filled in with the number of the package envelope, the columns of "Postmarked at," and "date of post mark" are properly filled in, the column for "name of P. O. addressed," is filled in with the words "Nassau street, N. Y.," and the blank at the bottom reads, "from B—— to Nassau street, N. Y." Those who are familiar with the blank receipts, will at once perceive that the one in question is a poetical curiosity. Another curiosity is a return registered letter receipt, addressed to the P. M. at the number in Broadway to which the letter itself was addressed. We were about to ask whether it is possible that any one can be so stupid that they cannot understand the plain instruction in the beginning of section 10 of Registration Regulations, to attach "this return receipt to the letter in such a manner that it can be readily removed at the office of destination." We do not ask the question, for the evidence is before us. We include in this article the case of a registered letter alleged to have been rifled of two dollars, while the rifler most generously left ten dollars. The case was reported to a special agent, investigation was made, letters of inquiry were written, records were searched, for special agents do not regulate their exertions by the amount of loss—two dollars receiving as much attention as two hundred—and lo! it turned out that the writer of the letter did include twelve dollars in it, a ten and a two dollar bill; but before posting the letter, he found he wanted to use two dollars and so withdrew that amount, but neglected to mention it, hence the contents of the letter when received was deficient in the amount stated to have been inclosed. There is some stupidity, some dishonesty in the post offices, but it is not all there.

Three more Post Office Thieves Caught.

A certain bank in the country sent to a certain bank in the city a letter consisting of a quantity of notes, checks, etc., inclosed in an official envelope. The letter was not received, the postmaster at the mailing office recollected putting it in the mail pouch just previous to locking it, hence there was a thief in the post office somewhere, and the post office department was a nest of thieves. The letter was eventually found among the waste paper of the bank to which it was addressed, having been received in proper time, opened for examination, and found its way into the waste basket before its "contents were noted." So post office thief No. 1 was caught.

And a certain city bank sent to a certain country bank a package of mutilated currency valued at over $400. It was not received. After a great deal of trouble taken by the special agent in investigating the case, it was discovered that the package had been improperly addressed to a State different from the one intended, that was all, and so post office thief No. 2 was caught. This case is noticeable for two features. The remitting bank assured the special agent that it never made any mistake—never—and the bank which received the letter was guilty of the gross error of retaining it, until inquiries were made, when it was forwarded to the proper bank by express.

A certain publisher who receives a great many letters containing small sums of money and makes almost as many complaints of losses, complained of several losses, among them a money order, in addition to the loss of which the payee's signature to the order was forged, and he cutely inquired "how many more have been forged?" It turned out that the money order was issued just two months before the time alleged in the complaint, and was signed by the proper person. And so post office thief No. 3 was caught.

MORAL—There are no thieves and no carelessness outside the post office department. None.

Sundry Post Offices Matters.

We have before us a well written letter from the postmaster at a money-order office in the West, respecting the almost impossibility of compliance with a recent order concerning reserves and deposits. When we consider that the twenty-eight thousand post offices in the United States, like the same number of men, must have their general similarity, yet like the men each must have its individuality, it would be surprising if a general law did not prove in a few cases impracticable. In all these impracticable cases, a clear, concise, yet full statement should be made to the Department, whence the order issued. Such is our advice in the present case. A place where there "is no bank, no express office, no telegraph, in fact none of the requisites of modern civilization to promote commercial facilities," would surely be allowed by the Department sufficient deviation from a general order to accommodate itself to circumstances. Our correspondent expresses doubts of the safety of registering. As a rule registration is safe, and if a loss occurs in case of money order funds, if the rules and instructions have been complied with the Department and not the postmaster bears the loss. It certainly would involve no little trouble and complexity to keep a daily account and description of remittances, but if required it must be done. Our opinion is asked on the subject; further than we have given it above, we must reply as we have frequently done in other instances. We cannot give an opinion upon questions appertaining solely to individual offices. . . . We next take up two long communications accompanied by an explanatory third, which the writer thinks too personal for our columns. Such is the case with one of the other two, as it relates almost wholly to the removal of the writer from his position as postmaster and the appointment of another—matters with which we cannot interfere. To the remaining communication relating to matters of general interest we give place.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters, to or from Great Britain and Ireland are chargeable with a fine on delivery, in addition to the postage. In the case of such letters arriving in the United States, the fine is six cents on each letter. Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to or from the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, when sent direct in closed mail via England, are also chargeable with a fine on delivery in addition to the postage. In the case of letters arriving in the United States the fine is five cents. In both cases the amount is marked on the letters at the various exchange offices, and collected at the offices of delivery Unpaid and insufficiently paid letters to and from the North German Union (including Austria and Luxemburg) are chargeable with double the rate stated in the table, credit being allowed for any part prepayment.

REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediarics, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photogmphs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) and for all of the countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the following places in Turkey: Alexandretta, Latakia, Mershu, Retimo and Tripoli; also for Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy and Switzerland. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, (as well as on letters to all countries and places reached via the North German mails, except the places in Turkey mentioned in the preceding paragraph,) to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, to Italy and the Roman or Papal States, and to Middle and Lower Egypt, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, and to Italy and Switzerland by closed mail via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. No other postal packets than letters can be sent registered beyond North Germany, except to Roman or the Papal States. Letters can be registered via San Francisco, to Yokohama, in Japan, and Shanghae, in China, on payment of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the proper postage. Such letters, like registered domestic letters, should be sent to the first distributing office on the route. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

Mailable Matter.

By Law mailable matter is divided into three classes as follows:

The first class embraces all correspondence wholly or partly in writing, except that mentioned in the third class.

The second class embraces all matter exclusively in print, and regularly issued at stated periods, without addition by writing, mark or sign.

The third class embraces all pamphlets, occasional publications, books, book manuscripts and proof sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, photographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different type; seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions. Sec. 222, Law, 1866.

Packages sent by mail are limited to a weight of four pounds, except books published or circulated by order of Congress Sec. 222, Law, 1866.

On all matter sent by mail not enumerated above as mailable matter, letter, postage must be charged. Sec. 245, Law, 1866.

The rate of postage on mail letters to any part of the United States is three cents a half ounce or fraction thereof. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent. All drop as well as mail letters must be prepaid.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) except-ing those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All communications on official business, of whatever origin, addressed to heads of the executive departments of government, or heads of bureaus therein, or to chief clerks of departments, shall be received and conveyed by mail free of postage without being franked or indorsed "Official Business."

By a joint Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Adjutants General of the several States and Territories, are authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, any medals, certificates of thanks or other testimonials, awarded, or which may be awarded by the Legislatures of said States and Territories, to the soldiers thereof, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may direct.

Section 123, Regulations 1866, declares the franking privilege to be of two kinds, either a personal privilege or an official trust. All mail matter addressed to persons possessing the privilege as a personal privilege, may be forwarded free, except in some cases where it is limited to a weight of four ounces. Mail matter to those possessing the privilege as an official trust can only be forwarded free if it appertains to official business. Section 134 names the persons or officers who have the franking privilege of either kind. Besides these, the Commissioner of Education possesses the official privilege; and all copyright books, maps, etc., may be forwarded to the Librarian of Congress, free of postage, provided the words "copy right matter" be plainly written or printed on the package. And postmasters are required to give receipts for such packages if required. Certain Revenue officers, also, besides those mentioned in the section above named, possess the privilege as an official trust, as follows: Assessors may frank on official business to Assessors, to Assistant Assessors and to Collectors; Assistant Assessors may only frank to Assessors. Collectors may frank to Collectors, Deputy Collectors and Assessors; Deputy Collectors may frank only to Collectors. No communication, official or otherwise, from these officers to private citizens can be sent free.

The Act of March 1, 1869, relating to franking, makes no change in the privilege, but merely enacts that the signature of the franking party must be written, and not printed.

Local postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

UNITED STATES MAIL
AND
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. XI., NO. 5. NEW YORK, FEBRUARY, 1871. WHOLE NO. 125.

What the Consequences May Be.

In one of the sketches in "Ten Years Among the Mail Bags," by the late Special Agent, J. Holbrook, occurs the following incident, showing that the possible result of that meanest of all crimes—the embezzlement of letters—is often more painful and serious than the mere loss of the money which supplies the temptation in such cases:

In a certain school boarding-house, inhabited by pupils of both sexes, it had been customary for some of their number to get from the post-office the letters and papers sent to them, and this duty had lately devolved, for the most part, on one person, Henry S., who was a relation of the postmaster, and, from other circumstances, had frequent occasion to visit the office. As he returned almost empty-handed of letters from day to day, his disappointed fellow-boarders at first wondered at the silence of their friends; then suspicion began to work in their minds; and since the postmaster was a man of unsullied honor, and entirely reliable for honesty, they at length reluctantly admitted the supposition that Henry S. must be the delinquent.

Acting on the ground that S. was the guilty one, his fellow-boarders gave orders to the postmaster, forbidding the delivery of their letters to him. So the next day, when he presented himself at the office, he was thunderstruck by the information that he had lost the confidence of his fellow-pupils, and that they would no longer trust their letters in his hands.

"It can't be," exclaimed he, "that they suppose I took their letters."

"I guess they do," said the postmaster; "but I think they had better be sure that there were letters coming to them before they suspect you."

"Oh, now I see why they have acted so strangely lately, just as if they didn't want me around. I never once thought that this was the reason of it."

From that time he withdrew himself as much as possible from the society of his fellow-pupils, stung by a sense of their injustice, and cherishing anything but amiable feelings toward them; yet he did not escape sundry taunts and flings at his character for honesty, from the maliciously disposed. And although those who had regarded him with suspicion, frankly acknowledged their error when the true culprit came to light, yet it was long before he could entirely forgive them the deep mortification they had caused him.

Nor were such cases as this the worst that occurred.

There was a boy in the school, "the only child of his mother, and she was a widow." The lad was quick in intellect, amiable in disposition, and a general favorite throughout the institution. He loved his mother with a strength of affection not often surpassed, and it was fully responded to by his tender parent. The frequent visits which she made him during his residence at the school, had given her opportunities to become acquainted with many of her son's young companions, as well as with his teachers, so that she was quite well known in the little community.

Let us place ourselves at the residence of Mrs. E. (the lady in question), some hundred miles away. She is lying upon a sick bed, from which she will never rise. Let us listen to the conversation between her and her attendant.

"Has the train come up yet, Mary?"

"Yes, ma'am, it passed a few minutes ago, but Charley hasn't come."

"Of course he hasn't; he would have been in my arms before this if he had."

"Perhaps," suggests Mary, "he will be here by the next train."

"God grant he may," groans the dying mother. "It is now more than a week since they first wrote to him, telling him that I was very sick, and requesting him to come immediately. Oh, what can keep him away so long? I fear he is sick himself. Some one must go to-morrow, and find out what it is that keeps him from me. I cannot die without seeing him once more."

While the mother was struggling with disease, and with that "hope deferred" that "maketh the heart sick," her son was pursuing his daily round of studies and amusements, anticipating with delight his return home at the close of the term. We may imagine the grief and distress of the poor boy when his uncle, who came for him, told him how the friends at home had written to him twice, each time inclosing him the requisite funds to bear his expenses home that there might be no delay from that cause. And how his mother's only wish, as she now lay rapidly sinking, was to see once more her beloved Charley.

Off they went, the boy and his uncle, on iron wings—but the wing of the Death-Angel was swifter, and before they arrived at the place of their destination, had cast its awful shadow over the mother's brow.

CORRESPONDENCE.

POST OFFICE, INNUMINUS, Jan., 1871.

Editor United States Mail:

I often think that the myths of olden times—those times way back in the history of our race—when men (which means mankind) built altars to "unknown gods," and worshipped impossible gods and goddesses, had a higher origin than superstition and wild belief. The Hydra, or many-headed monster, for instance, the destruction of which was so difficult that it was made one of the twelve severe tasks imposed upon Hercules, might well stand as the symbol for social and political evils which it is difficult to destroy. We find no better instance of this realization of the Hydra than in the subject of my last letter—the sawdust pretended counterfeit dealers. Probably the further prosecution of the subject in your columns may not be agreeable to you, and if not you know the way to your own waste-paper basket; but as I have a few "more remarks to make," I will venture. Notwithstanding the war made upon the scamps by the American Agriculturist, and the watchfulness of the Post-office Department that it shall not be made a particeps criminus in the silly fraud, since my last the Hydra has developed several new heads, and new names to old circulars have been freely sent out.

To me the matter assumes a serious aspect. It is not sufficient to say that none but a few fools are swindled, and that they may as well lose their money that way as any, or that it is only one swindler swindling another. I think there is a graver view. Is there no danger that the idea of counterfeit money, as a merchantable article, sold with very little disguise or secrecy, will become so prevalent that many men, of even mature years, honest but weak, and more particularly young men, who find economy a necessary adjunct of their lives, may have their integrity sapped, and become the tools of actual counterfeiters as they are the dupes of the pretended? Or may they not, disappointed in supplying their wants by one crime, turn the more easily to another. The responsibility of the tempter for the fall of the tempted is a mooted question, some holding that the tempter is no way responsible, and that a man should rely upon himself, and be strong enough in himself to resist temptation. Others think that the tempter, like the receiver, is as bad as the tempted, and should be punished equally with his victim. I will not argue upon this question. But I would ask, rather than suggest, why society should not as well protect itself, by a suppression of pretence of dealing in counterfeits against the demoralization referred to, as it does against the demoralization produced by lotteries or gambling. You may say I am "off the track," as the inquiry has no reference to postal matters, and that the mail is devoted to postal matters only. Well, probably I am, but when I see the quantities of these circulars conveyed about the country by the Post-office Department, and know how continuously, under new names, the temptation to purchase counterfeit money is scattered unwittingly, and unwillingly, I grant, by the Post-office Department, like seed from the hand of the sower, or a better simile would be, like the seed of the thistle by the autumn winds, I perceive a closer connection between the postal and social positions that first appears.

Whether the remedy can be by postal law or not I do not undertake to say, leaving that to wiser legislative heads than my own. But as one of the rural population, more affected by this state of affairs than you people of the city can be, I do not hesitate to say that a remedy is needed, and should be found. I know of more than one instance where men have forwarded the only few dollars they had for the support of their wives and children to these scamps; of others, as I stated last month, where young men of good character have taken a step which may be the first step to a life of crime.

NICOTINUS.

Collecting Newspaper Postage.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL:

Dear Sir—I have been amused at the many propositions made for collecting postage on newspapers sent to "regular bona fide subscribers." The most absurd and impossible plan we have seen is that of H. S. and his "sponge-and-stamp theory." Just imagine the mailing clerks of the New York, Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago mailies, to say nothing of other papers of large issue, sitting down daily with a hogshead or two of water and a large sponge apiece, with a ton or so of three inch stamps, pasting them on before they can send their mails to the post-office. And how you, Mr. Editor, can permit your valuable paper to contain such stuff, is only accounted for upon the supposition that you are one of the best-natured men in the world, and wanted your subscribers to laugh as heartily as you did over this nonsense.

To be serious about this matter, Mr Editor, every man who understands the difficulties in the way of prepaying postage on regular issues of newspapers to bona fide subscribers, knows that it is a difficult question to decide what is the best and most practical plan. To solve this question a man must be or have been both a publisher and a postmaster—not merely in name, but a publisher who understands the entire details of publishing, including mailing, and a postmaster who has run and understands the entire working of a first-class office. Small postmasters or publishers cannot fully understand the difficulties, and but few of that class, small in number though it is, have that fertility of resource and inventive genius to compass the difficulty. There must be as little conflict between the publisher and postmaster as possible, and yet the Government must get all, or as near all as possible, that is due it, and at the least possible expense and trouble in collecting it. Too much book-keeping is the bane of all kinds of business houses. The simplest common-sense forms are the best. Although I do not claim to have found the true solution of the problem, yet I give you my own opinion, based upon an experience of over twenty years in the newspaper business, and a second term as postmaster:

1st. The Government is imposed upon in the transmission of newspapers. The postmaster who fights for every cent due the Government, makes enemies who adroitly combine together and render other pretexts to secure his removal, and get a more pliant (i. e., accommodating) postmaster.

2d. Any plan that will greatly embarrass the publisher, will drive him from the mails and into the express office, except where the cost is too much or an express line cannot be reached. The express companies even now compete with and beat the Government on large packages on the line of their route.

I can see but two ways out of this trouble; one is, to charge the same rates as heretofore, and require payment of publishers at the commencement of each quarter for their entire circulation, the publisher or mailing clerk in the office of publication to make affidavit of the correctness of the list furnished at the mailing post-office at the end of the quarter, adding a supplemental list of new subscribers, and paying the extra amount on such new subscribers as were not returned in the list at commencement of the quarter, giving publishers the privilege of paying for a full year.

The other plan I think preferable: it is for the Department to come in direct competition with Express Companies, carrying all newspapers to bona fide subscribers by the ounce, and making separate charges or rates for each package. The packages to be indorsed at the office of publication, with the weight and payment made each mailing day, or monthly or quarterly, as the Postmaster-General may decide in cases where it is impracticable to pay daily or weekly. This, of course, necessitates the keeping of a "Book of Weights" by both the publisher and mailing postmaster, to be sworn to by the former at such regular times as designated by the Postmaster General.

I will not argue the feasibility of this plan, but let others criticize it. I think I can demonstrate that publishers will increase their circulation and the Government make money by the operation. If the present mode of collecting newspaper postage is continued, I would recommend that publishers be required to stamp or write on every package of papers to subscribers, the name of the paper, when published, and how many copies, along with the place of destination, and exclude all papers not so legibly stamped or marked. This will materially assist the postmaster in taking account of newspapers.

W. J. U., Postmaster.

[Our correspondent's own suggestions would have lost none of their force if he had criticized the plan of "H. S." not quite so harshly. It is only by a full ventilation and discussion of all sorts of plans that a feasible one is likely to be discovered. For instance, the impracticable nature of "H. S.'s" plan (as it appeared to "W. J. U.,") seems to have set the latter to devising a better one, and possibly his plan will produce the same result on some one else.—ED. U. S. MAIL.]

S. B. PA., January 18, 71.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL:

Dear Sir—In looking over your excellent paper for January, I noticed an article headed "Registration Comicalities," etc. I can give you an instance of the Reg. bus. which I think worth publishing.

About two weeks ago I registered a letter to a small town about twenty miles from this office. About three days afterward I received a Reg. package from the same place. I opened it by cutting one end, and was surprised to see no letter in it. I immediately examined the package and could not see that it had been tampered with. I, of course, wondered what it could mean. Upon taking out the inclosure, which I presumed to be a Registered Lettered Bill, I discovered that it was the return bill I had sent, and the receipt for the letter, which the Postmaster had sent to me in a Reg. package envelope, duly numbered, and which was receipted for four times before I received it. Can any one beat that?—

Respectfully yours, W. S. S.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Location of Office.—D. A. S., P——, Cal.—A Postmaster is not compelled to rent an office in the main street of the city or village where the office is established. It should, however, be on a frequented street, and not in a place inconvenient of access to the public.

County Papers Deliverable Free, etc.—F. S. P., C—, Iowa.—1. It is only weekly papers that can be delivered free to subscribers living within the county of publication. Sec. 228, Reg., 1866. It surprises us how often similar questions are asked. The section referred to has the word weekly in italics, in order to draw attention particularly to it. Weekly can mean nothing else but weekly, neither monthly, nor daily, nor semi-weekly, any more than a cent can mean a dime or a dollar. 2. A publisher of a newspaper cannot send his paper to a friend as a gift, on the same terms of postage as though the friend paid for it. 3. All newspapers on which the proper postage is paid should be delivered to the person addressed..... L. S., P——, N. Y.—One copy each of any number of county papers may be delivered free of postage, according to section 228, regulations of 1866.... J. H. B., L——, Pa.—See above.

Dead Letter Bills.—D. A. N., F——, N. J.—A Dead Letter bill should accompany each package of dead letters (sec. 381, reg.), and with the quarterly account current should be sent a complete Dead Letter bill for the whole quarter, corresponding in amount with the credits claimed for dead letters.

Forwarding a Telegraphic Dispatch, etc.—D. W. F., C——, O.—1. A Postmaster is not obliged to take any more trouble to deliver a telegraphic dispatch, coming through the mails, than he is an ordinary letter, and there is no fine for not doing so. We speak of the legal obligation, but whether or not there is a kindly obligation is a question. A telegram generally implies something of more importance than an ordinary letter. 2. Errors cannot be corrected in the quarterly account current; the correction must be made in the general account. Sec. 334, reg., 1866.

Post-office Directory.—L. J. S., S——, Minn.—Every post-office is furnished free by the Department with a post-office directory.

Post-office Laws.—C. A. B., C——, Mass.—The postal laws and regulations can be had on application to the First Assistant Postmaster-General. The book is charged at two dollars in postmasters' accounts.

Eligibility for Postmastership.—H. S., R——, Ill.—There is no postal law to prevent a postmaster becoming a justice of the peace, or a justice of the peace becoming a postmaster. We do not answer for State laws.

Forwarding Newspapers.—J. R., P——, Vt.—Had you looked in the MAIL for August, 1870, you would have found in the "Answers" the following: "Newspapers and other printed matter remaining in a post-office can only be forwarded upon payment of a new postage at transient rates which should be prepaid by postage stamps. It is unnecessary to discuss any previous decisions or replies given in the MAIL." As we thought then we think now, that it is unnecessary to discuss or explain any former decisions on the subject. At the times respectively that they were made they were authoritative, but at present the rule is as quoted.

Circulars.—R. W. H. B., M——, Iowa.—Circulars to pass at circular rates must be wholly printed, except that the name of the person to whom they are sent may be written. (Sec. 244, Laws, 1866.)

Obstructing Mail Routes.—E. S., W——, Texas.—Cases of obstruction of mail routes should be reported to the Second Assistant Postmaster-General.

Delivery of Mail Matter.—G. A. B., R——, N. Y.—The persons entitled to letters are those whose names are in the addresses. (Sec. 58, Reg. 1866.) This applies to a married woman as well as to any other person; and if a married woman directs a postmaster not to deliver her letters to her husband, the postmaster must comply with the direction.

Insufficient Prepayment.—S. R. H., N——, Iowa.—An insufficiently prepaid letter, deposited by a person knowing of the insufficient prepayment, should be returned to him for the proper postage.

Mistake in Account Current.—J. J. B., M——, Pa.—Mistakes in the account current of balances due the Department are corrected in the general account and not in a succeeding account current. If in one account current you have given the Department credit for ten dollars too much, you will be allowed to debit yourself with ten dollars in your general account, which will square the matter.

Registering Book Packets, etc.—H. A. C., O——, N. Y.—1. Nothing but matter paid at letter rates can be registered to places in the United States. (Sec. 8, Regn. Reg. 1868.) 2. Prepaid foreign letters cannot be returned to the writers free of postage—the postage charge would be the unpaid letter rates; and if prepayment was compulsory, they could only be returned through the Dead Letter Office, unless, of course, provision was made for the prepayment; but if there are any charges for postage on the letter, the only way would be to send them to the Dead Letter Office.

Boxes.—A. E. H., L——, N. C.—The law specifically requires that, "no box at any post-office shall be assigned to the use of any person until the rent therefor has been paid for, at least one quarter." (Sec. 240, Laws of 1865.) And though there is no restriction on the "individual ownership of the boxes by the postmaster, yet it clearly is not contemplated that the use of the boxes by the public shall be gratuitous. There is a way of compelling people to pay rent for boxes, and that is, by making them pay the rent before assigning the boxes. If they, the people, are inclined to quarrel with you, tell them you have no discretion in the matter, the law is just as imperative that you should collect rent for boxes, as that you should mail letters. The amount of rent you can fix to suit the size of the office. (See Sections 302, 303, 331 and 332 of Regulations of 1866.)
